Sulkies—from L.B. to Winner's Circle

PAUL DONNER (L.), DALE J. BERRY . . . Steamed Hickory Goes Into Molding Braces

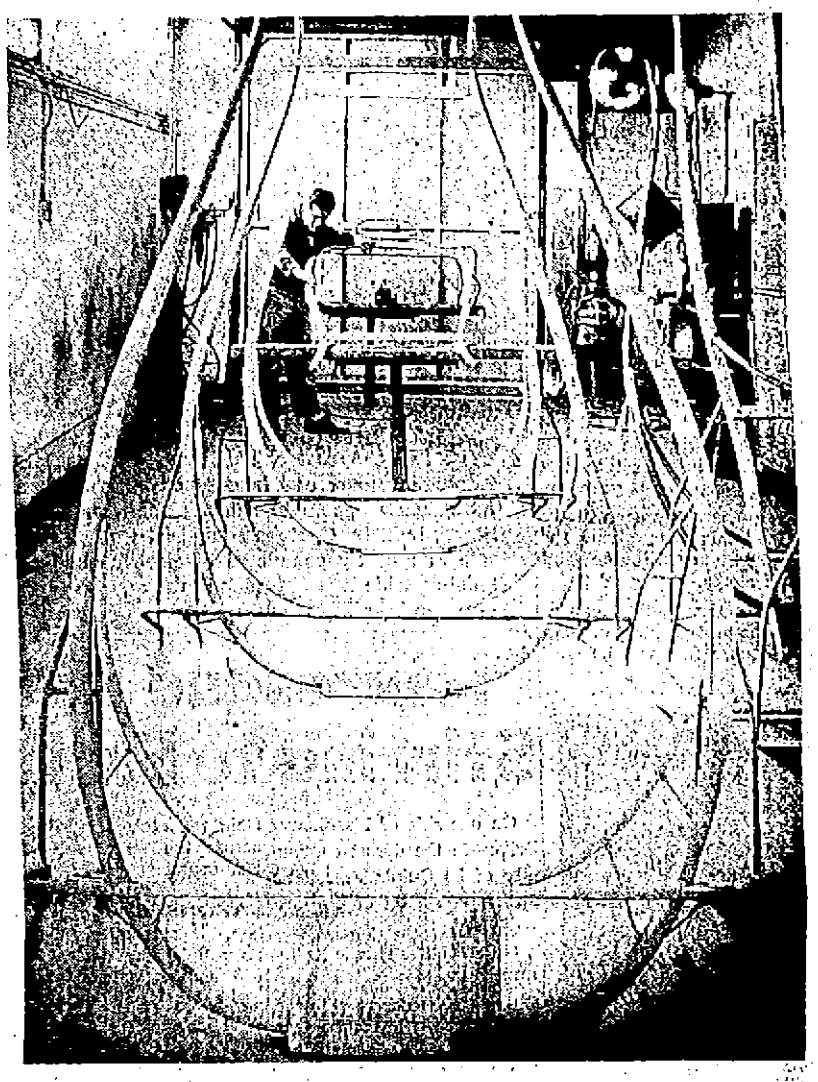
By ROBERT BECKMAN
Southland Progress Editor

Wilform Buggy Works of Long Beach isn't a firm name that was popular at the turn of the century—or during the administration of William H. Taft—or at the advent of World War I.

Wilform was born in 1945.

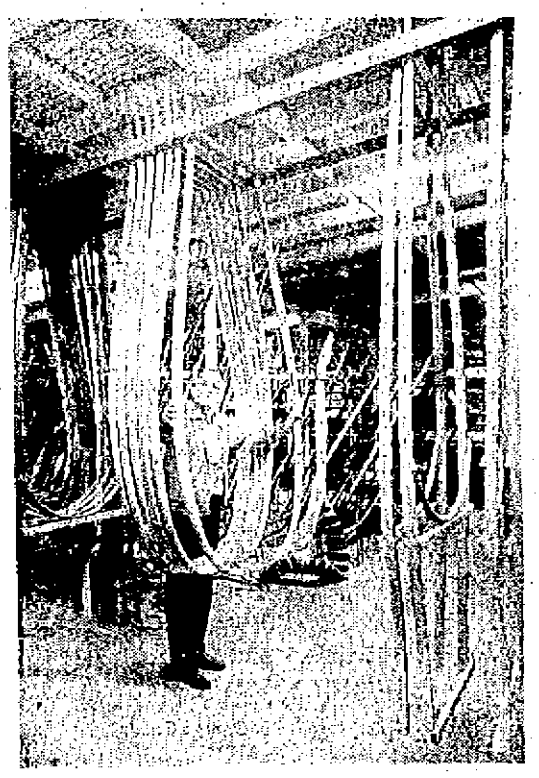
That year, in a little building at 1322 Coronado Ave., the first horse show carts and harness racing sulkies ever manufactured east of Iowa came off the assembly line.

Year after year, horse show enthusiasts and harness racing businessmen watched as the Wilform vehicles flashed and glimmered in the sun—and in the winners' circles.



* * * *

DALE J. BERRY, a soft-voiced man with twinkling eyes who took over Wilform recently when its founder died, estimates nearly 600 buggies, viceroys and other carts are shipped annually from the small plant.



It's also been estimated 90% of such vehicles seen in California races and shows came from Wilform. At that, 90% of the output goes outside the state, principally to the East, Midwest, Hawaii and Canada.

Each of Berry's 10 employes is a skilled technician — from the man who first steams the hickory for shaft-shaping to his son, Dale Lee, who makes final inspection and tediously wraps the product for shipment.

The odors of sawdust, hot metal and paints permeate the rooms and it's a pleasant atmosphere. ("We're a small company. We're a team here," Berry says.)

Long Beach Port Projects Total $27 Million

Current building projects now under construction within the Port of Long Beach last week topped the $27 million mark, according to Charles L. Vickers, port general manager.

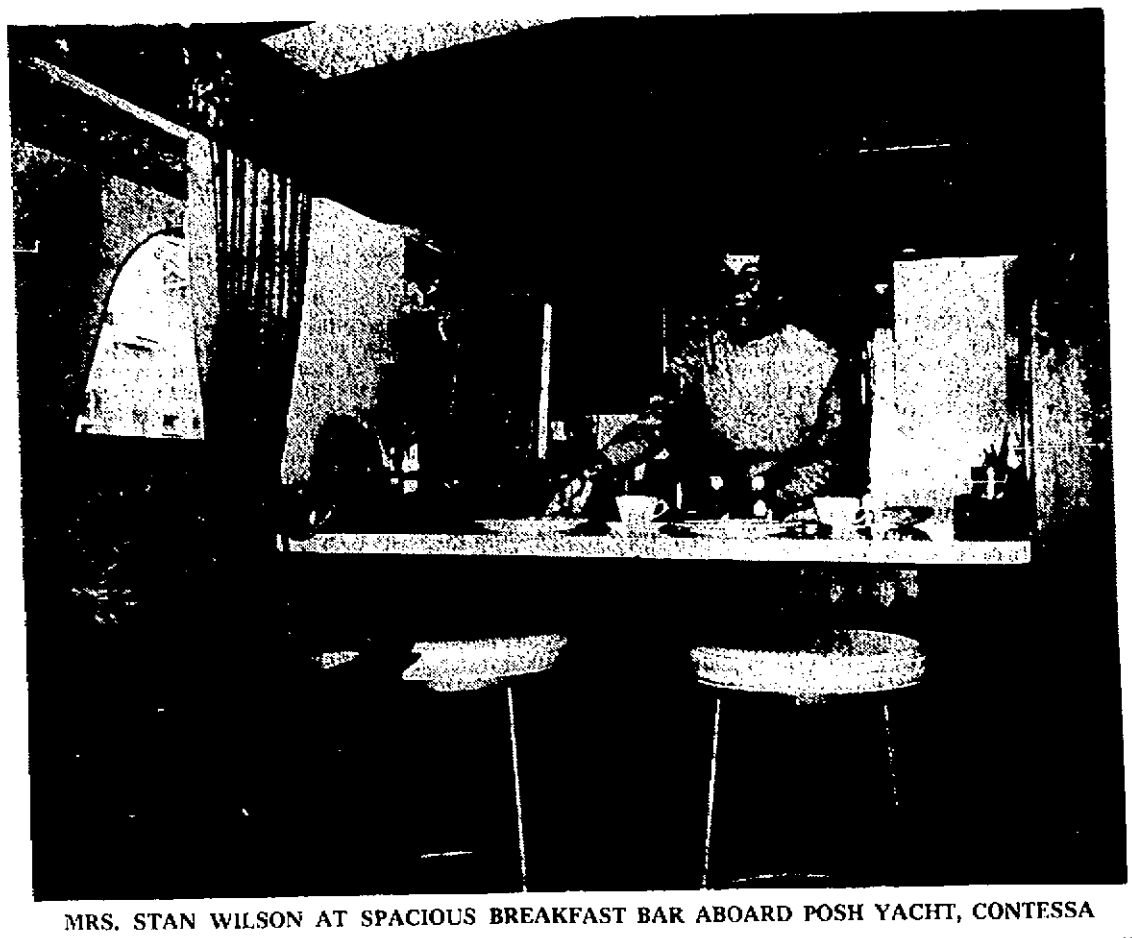
Among the major projects is the $12.7 million Gerald L. Desmond Bridge, the state's sixth largest. With a clearance of 225 feet above high tide water the bridge will eventually replace the pontoon bridge built as a "temporary" structure during World War II.

A project to raise 116 acres an overall average of 20 feet is continuing under a $6,496,900 contract to bring subsided land back up to normal grade.

A second fill project for a section of the abandoned San Gabriel River, north of Berths 83-87, has started under a contract totaling $2,942,000, Vickers reported. The project is part of a plan to build a supertanker terminal for use by Texaco.

The port's new $1,731,552 bulkloader iron ore pellet facility with traveling stacker and conveyor is due for completion in April.

Erection of two traveling gantry cranes, costing $1,331,200 on Pier Y, is nearing completion, the port manager said. The 35-ton capacity cranes will be used primarily to load and unload 20-ton truck vans from container-carrying vessels.



Completed during 1965 was the $18,500,000 Pier J, largest man-made municipal pier in the world. The pier created a new basin complex that enabled the port to double its berthing capacity to 80 berths.

Among the $23,722,613 in new construction completed last year, according to Vickers, were two new container terminals at a cost of $1,072,234; a banana terminal berth, $956,134; banana unloading gantries, $608,806; and Berth 83 for National Gypsum, $764,255.

With yachting boom at peak, whole new way of life at sea opens up for skipper's mate.

Lady sailors are no longer 'galley slaves'

By Iola Masterson I.P-T Society Editor

MRS. STAN WILSON AT SPACIOUS BREAKFAST BAR ABOARD POSH YACHT, CONTESSA

What do you envision when you think of a yacht? A huge, haughty vessel, anchored aloof in some romantic cove?

Well, revise your thinking. Yachts come in all sizes. One very apt definition is, "Any private pleasure craft with living accommodations."

It's true that most skippers of small craft feel pretty silly referring to their boats as yachts.

With luxurious appointments previously found only on large yachts now being used lavishly on their smaller sisters of the sea, the term yacht can be tossed off by owners with nonchalance.

And luxury has really hit the small craft industry with the smash of a crashing wave.

A visit to the recent power boat section of the boat show here, or to any number of cruisers in this area, would prove it to anyone.

AND IT IS the lady sailors' influence that has brought about the dramatic transition. A woman who used to go boating with her husband was truly a galley slave.

But look at the new galleys (that means kitchen in sailor's lingo) in which she whips up meals with as many conveniences as at home. Now galleys, almost invariably placed in a light, airy section of the boat, feature electric stoves complete with ovens, rotisseries and broilers, ventilation hoods and fans, hot and cold pressure water systems for sink and showers, full-size electric refrigerators with big freezer tops.

Electric dishwashers are not uncommon, nor are clothes washer-dryer combinations on craft large enough to handle them.

Betty and Stan Wilson's luxurious 56-foot yacht, Contessa, though larger than most of the boats we refer to, offers many prime examples of conveniences and beauty used in cruisers of various sizes.

It has dishwasher ("the last thing I'd give up," says Betty), washer-dryer, all electric galley—just name it and Contessa probably has it. The Wilsons now are considering putting in a water-maker plant to change salt water into useable fresh water.

Even electric disposals are now frequently being installed. However, the drawback here is that they cannot be used in many marinas and harbors due to rules guarding pollution of bays.

SAID AREND LIND, designer of the Cedros Island (shown at boat show): "The next boat I design will have a dishwasher—large enough to handle a service for four."

The craft he has in mind: a 46-footer that will carry 260 gallons of water for ample supply.

"There is a special dishwasher which circulates water for most efficiency—specifically designed for boats and mobile homes."

He said, too, that he thinks they will be one of the biggest drawing cards in the sale of new boats.

Boat designers have an ear to the deck for what women want in more ways than cooking. Living areas are growing more and more sophisticated with decorator colors, fancy upholstery, drapes and luxurious carpeting.

FOR INSTANCE, the Wilson's yacht moored in front of their home on Corsi di Napoli, has super comfortable divans covered in dramatic orange and yellow floral print with color coordinated plush carpeting in rust, orange and gold tweed. The interior is paneled in warm walnut; matching marble-topped coffee table, chests and end tables dot the salon.

A pass-through breakfast bar from galley to salon makes entertaining aboard a pleasure for guests and first mate.

For those who don't want the fuss of standard

Money.

Europe.

Well-meaning friends told Maralin Niska that these are the three essentials for a singer aspiring to opera.

"Not so!" the San Pedro native, turned opera diva, contradicts cheerfully.

In a telephone interview from Tallahassee, Fla., where she appeared this week with the Metropolitan Opera National Company, the slender, dark-haired, dark-eyed soprano spoke of her career.

"I have had better training in Los Angeles than I could have had in Europe. I'm a grass roots product. My parents weren't rich. I didn't have an organization or wealthy individual to subsidize me.

"Money, of course, is staying power, time to study, to polish, to practice.

"My advice to young singers is this:

"Don't be discouraged—success will come if you have talent and the will to use it. Refuse to be satisfied with where you are; prove to yourself daily that you are worthy and you'll find you can do things you never dreamed you could."

MARALIN, in private life Mrs. Henry Niska of San Pedro, will return to Los Angeles with the Metropolitan company in its 15-performance run at the Music Center Feb. 14 through 27.

She will sing Cio-Cio-San in "Madame Butter-

Area Electronics Plants Plan Expansion

By KLEN CHICOTE
Business Editor

Already a titan in the industrial world, the electronics industry is looking toward far greater growth this year and will provide a decided boost to the Southern California economic pattern.

Although the Orange County area has shown sensational growth in electronic producing facilities the past few years, the years ahead will see continued expansions with East Coast concerns either moving to the area or opening branches.

Numerous plants in the area now have expansions under way.

Last year the electronics industry accounted for sales of $17 billion and a total of $18.3 billion sales is predicted for 1966.

Biggest customer will continue to be the U.S. government seeking more electronic equipment and components, but there will be great growth in sales computers.

The Pacific Coast region has 1,179 electronic manufacturing plants while the Middle Atlantic area has 1,963 and the East, North Central area 1,220. However, because of prime contracts with the government and other specialized products turned out in this area, 27% of the electronic engineers are employed here while the Middle Atlantic area has 25% and the East, North Central has 14%.

CONSTRUCTION in the greater Long Beach area is showing no sign of a letup. In fact, the week-by-week announcements are growing brighter.

Here are some samples of projects announced recently:

EL SEGUNDO — Edmund Sherman, Los Angeles, is having plans prepared for a $4 million office building on Sepulveda Boulevard between Palm and Mariposa Avenues.

STANTON—Bank of America has called for plans for a $200,000 branch here on a site not yet revealed. Another $200,000 branch is planned for San Juan Capistrano.

FULLERTON—Bids will be called on a $175,000 addition to Fullerton High School. Plans also are being prepared for a Catholic High School to be built on Acacia Street.

SANTA FE SPRINGS—Key Management Inc., Downey, will build 132 apartment units at once, costing in excess of $1.5 million.

HUNTINGTON BEACH — Plans are nearing completion for an $850,000 elementary school for the Ocean View District at 5682 Tilburg.

Beach City Chevrolet, Long Beach, has completed plans for a $141,000 new car service building at 19th Street and Orizaba Avenue.

SANTA FE SPRINGS — Huff Lumber Co. is building a $70,000 office structure on East Rosecrans Avenue.

BUENA PARK—A $300,000 lecture hall and little theater building will be erected at 10th Street and Magnolia Avenue for the North Orange County Junior College District.

SANTA ANA — Bids have been taken on an addition to the police station at an estimated cost of $216,000.

Clark & Bartell, builders, plan a 14-unit $200,000 apartment in Long Beach at 3605 Elm Ave.

NORWALK—Key Management Corp., Downey, has completed plans for a $1,500,000 apartment structure at Studebaker Road and Imperial Highway.

DOWNEY — Bids will be called in March on a proposed $240,000 addition to Pius X Catholic High School.

COMPTON — A $1,270,000 addition is to be built on Dominguez Valley Hospital, 3100 Susanna Road.

GARDENA — Bids will be taken in March on a $225,000 addition to Junipero Serra Catholic High School, 14830 Van Ness Ave.

SANTA FE SPRINGS — Dixson Chubbuck & Associates of Altadena will build a large pumice-grinding factory building at 11815 Slauson Ave.

GARDEN GROVE—St. Columban Parish Church, 10801 Stanford Ave., is having working plans drawn on a $600,000 church building.

LAGUNA BEACH — C. E. Siemonsma Buick & Pontiac will construct a $100,000 parking structure on Broadway at Beach Street.

WESTMINSTER — Preliminary plans have been prepared for a $553,000 elementary school at the northeast corner of Hazard Street and Magnolia Avenue. A school estimated at the same cost will be built west of Hazard and south of Bolsa Avenue.

SOUTH GATE—A food service building is planned at South Gate High School, 3351 Firestone Blvd., at an estimated cost of $230,000.

TORRANCE — Working drawings are nearing completion on two elementary school buildings for the Torrance Unified District to cost $1,600,000.

SEAL BEACH — The city has called for drawings on a lifeguard headquarters building and bandshell.

NEGOTIATIONS are under way between Tidewater Oil Co. and Getty Oil Co. toward a possible merger of the two. Getty Oil presently controls 72% of Tidewater's 13,348,000 outstanding shares of common stock. A merger would result in Getty Oil being the surviving company but the Flying A identification and colors would remain.

Ralph Wilson Plastics Inc. has merged with Rexall Drug in the latest of expansions by Rexall. Wilson makes laminated plastics for counter tops and paneling.

Youths 12 to 21 now get a 50% reduction in air fares with Braniff flights if they don't mind waiting, sometimes. The new rates for youth are on a standby basis but they must have a youth fare ID card which costs $3 and will be good until they reach the age of 22. No advance reservations can be made.

REPORTS published in San Francisco that the Office of Economic Opportunity is financing a drive to establish co-operative stores in that area has brought a big protest from the National Federation of Independent Business.

"If this report is true it can only mean that the war on poverty is actually a war on business," said C. Wilson Harder, president of the federation in a protest filed with Sargent Shriver, director of the OEO.

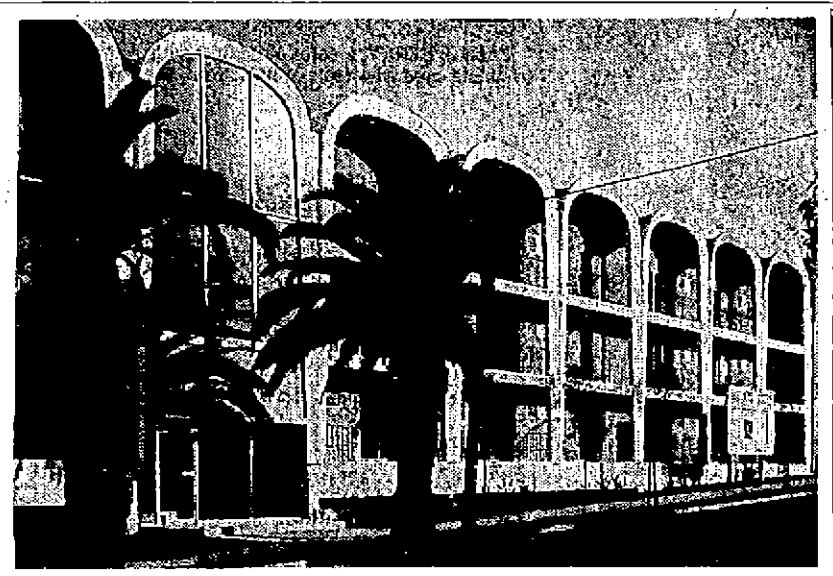
AUTOMOBILE DEALERS throughout the nation overwhelmingly favor newspapers as their main advertising media, Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp. announced after a survey.

The financing concern polled 1,500 dealers over the U.S. and found slightly more than 75% said newspapers were their favorites for advertising. Radio was second with 16% and television was third with 8%. Less than 1% considered some other method.

Paint Co. to Open 2 Branches



Standard Brands Paint Co. is negotiating for 11 additional acres adjacent to the main manufacturing plant and warehouse in Torrance as part of a planned $1,200,000 expansion.

This was reported to shareholders by Sid Greenberg, president, at the annual meeting.

Greenberg reported the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30, was a record-breaker in sales and profits and the three-month period ending Dec. 31 showed a 13% gain over the $5 million in sales the same period the previous year.

Two new stores will be opened this year, giving the firm 26 Standard Brands Paint retail stores.

Under the planned expansion the present plant of 225,000 square feet will be doubled.

NEAR FULL OCCUPANCY

Impressive foyer and landscaped inner court are marks of Laguna Vista, individually appointed balcony apartments at 500 Ximeno Ave., Long Beach, built by C. Robert Langslet Co., general contractors. Occupancy rate in recently completed all-electric building is rising. Other features: building-wide AM-FM sound system, subterranean parking, elevator, all outside views.

Mobil Announces Consolidations

The executive vice president of Mobil Oil Co., J. D. Moody, has announced the consolidation of four exploration and producing divisions into three regions and the consolidation of 28 districts into six new divisions.

Divisions now headquartered in Los Angeles, Houston and Midland, Tex., and in Denver, Colo., will become three new regions with headquarters at Houston, Denver, and Los Angeles, Moody said.

"There will be little immediate effect on district office personnel at Santa Fe Springs or at Bakersfield," said Moody.

He stated the consolidation will not substantially affect Mobil's field employees at or below the level of production supervisor and drilling supervisor.

* * * *

THE COMPANY executive said present district offices at Victoria, Tex., and Lafayette, La., would be closed.

Small staffs will be retained at other district offices which will be closed in the consolidation move, Moody said. To be closed are the offices at Durango, Colo.; Lubbock and Wichita Falls, Tex.; Roswell and Hobbs, N. M.; Wichita, Kan., and Jackson, Miss.

Owen H. Blexrud, president and general manager of Socony Mobil Oil of Canada, Ltd., said the Canadian company will consolidate six districts into a single exploration and producing organization with headquarters at Calgary.

Picturesque La Quinta Stirring to Exciting Life

On one side of Eisenhower Drive—in the desert community of La Quinta near Palm Springs—is a bit of the desert's past.

On the other side is its future.

On one side: desert stillness. On the other: buzz of power saws, hammering of nails and the roar of trucks carrying construction materials.

* * * *

WHAT'S BEHIND the latter?

The La Quinta Country Club and the La Quinta Development Company are responsible—the first by hurrying to completion a multimillion dollar clubhouse and the development company by launching its planned community of year-around homes, townhouses, weekenders, cluster houses and golf cottages.

The clubhouse, which will provide every modern convenience for its members, is scheduled for completion in March. Its styling will reflect the gracious manners and traditions of the 39-year-old La Quinta Hotel, located just across the street from the golf course.

* * * *

THE CLUBHOUSE is an impressive structure, even in its unfinished state, with 36,000 square feet under roof and another 3,335 square feet under arcades.

The golf facility is the La Quinta Country Club Championship Course — 18 holes spanning 6,904 yards of champion-challenging play, such as the Bob Hope Desert Classic there this weekend.

Other recreational facilities already available at La Quinta include tennis, riding, swimming and hiking in the mountains that slope down to the edge of the old hacienda grounds.

* * * *

FOR THOSE who want to live all or part of the year in this recreational paradise, La Quinta Development Company provides its wide range of living facilities and a good choice of sites are available now.

The "Islands," a planned unit development on a 21-acre area amidst the fairways, is under way.

Plans for the near future also include one-acre equestrian home sites and fairway townhouses.

Bank Executives in Three-Day Seminar

More than 150 chief executive officers of banks in California gathered today for a three-day seminar at Hotel Del Coronado in Coronado.

The first such meeting of the top officers in the state's history is sponsored by the California Bankers Association and will emphasize the role of top management in banking.

He hurried--slowly

"CELEBRATING their 25th wedding anniversaries at Coco Palms Hotel on the island of Kauai in Hawaii were . . ." So began a caption which accompanied the sunshiny photo on this page. It concerned Buck and Margaret Arnold, 2279 Albury Ave., Ray and Jane Powell, Garden Grove, and Madden and Gene Dietrich, Tustin, was received this week.

The information went on to state that all three couples were classmates at Wilson High, were married within six weeks of each other and ever since have always vacationed together as well as socialized as best friends the year round.

It's the kind of happy picture, happy story with an unusual twist we like. So we called to find out when they would be home. Who answered but retiree Margaret, herself. All the facts, she said, were true, but weren't we a little late in using it, she puzzled.

Ah, the leisurely pace of Hawaii! Time and deadlines? Who cares! The reporter-public relations man made that picture Oct. 17 . . . our anniversary couples returned here Oct. 26. In years of checking out PR stories this one really takes the cake for being latest ever.

AND THEN there's the case of the Edison Company "Carefree Living" diploma edged in black. Melba Fickling, a graduate in how to cook and make the most of electricity in the Edison course, put a stew on to simmer on the timer controlled burner of her fancy electric stove, then went shopping.

It malfunctioned (she didn't!) and when husband, Dorian came home for what was to have been a ready to eat hot luncheon he found the house choking full of dense white smoke. The timer that didn't time let the burner get so hot it melted the bottom of the pan completely and the meat and metal just burned on merrily together.

In addition to actual smoke damage the worst part about it was the odor. The Ficklings got a clean-up and deodorizing outfit from Los Angeles to come to their rescue. They brought a kind of cannon which shot a substance into each room to sop up smokey smells. Old hands at this kind of service, they assured Melba she was lucky. Severely burned chicken is at top of the "phew!" ratings with pork second, beef third.

FACTS SURROUNDING Sherry Beebe's approaching marriage are so romantic they have a story book lilt. She flies to New Zealand Feb. 5 to marry Philip Wells, the date still to be selected but probably early in March.

Philip, whom Sherry met while both were vacationing in Honolulu, manages his family's huge ranch land holdings which rims beautiful Mercury Bay. It is 125 miles from Auckland—very near the town of Whitianga. They raise heaven only knows how many head of cattle and sheep, also grow 73 types of fruit commercially.

Sherry leaves early to stay with his parents in the big home to get acquainted with, and be feted by, the many Wells relatives. Her parents, Dr. Ed and Joan Beebe, will fly over mid-February to be present for the ceremony. For the honeymoon the newlyweds will cruise New Zealand's coast in the family yacht.

Wedding bells are certainly breaking up that old gang of girl friends—Sherry, Kathy Osborne and Kristen Buck, who have been closer than grapes in a bunch since kindergarten days. Kathy became bride of Doug Trout Saturday—will move to Tulsa, Okla., and Kristen will marry John White March 12 and move to Chicago.

BIG TO-DO, and fancy too, when Bill Hardcastle was installed as commodore of new Huntington Harbour Yacht Club during dinner at Sheraton Beach Inn. With becoming modesty, Bill accepted his post with the remark, "I'm the best commodore this club has ever had." He is, too. He's the first one. Caroline and Bill entertained for several incoming officers, wives and friends at pre-dinner cocktail party in their home.

Among merry sailors enjoying a landlubber evening were LBYC Staff Commodore Bob Pierce, wife, Marge (he was installing officer), Les and Mary Alice Dahl, George and Juanita Heinrich. Also new officers and board members of HHYC Bob and Vivian Hoffman, Bayard and Jane Dod (he's vice commodore of new club), Bob and Millie Helfer, Don and Rosemary Leedom and Herb and Ida Beuhler.

HHYC has 85 charter members, will be limited to 100, at least for the present.

PRIMARILY they went to Las Vegas to see the Frank Sinatra show at the Sands. "They" meaning Dr. Jim and Mary Thompson, Burt and Norma Marter, Dr. Ed and Ann Beaubier, Jim and Joan Johnson, Dr. Russ and Maxine Spears and Dr. Richard and Nancy Daniels. Fortunately they loved the show and had a great lot of fun in general because no one, but no one, was making like break the bank—it was more like feed the kitty.

This being the Daniels first trip to the green felt jungle, Dick bought a book, "How to Break the Odds." With shrewd feminine logic Nancy aired opinion that they'd be lucky if their winnings covered simply cost of book.

AMONG THE world's most dedicated sport fishing enthusiasts are Art and Martha Hall. Art, who holds world records, and Martha just returned from a great three weeks of fishing, naturally.

First they went to the Masters Tournament at Palm Beach, Fla. Art didn't win this one but he wasn't too far down the line of runners-up. Then they flew to Pinas Bay, Panama, with a group of fishing friends to try for prized black marlin. The day before they arrived there a 740 pound one had been caught.

Sure Art caught one, a big one, but knowledgeable in the ways of the big ones, he released it, knowing it was no record breaker. Pinas Bay, Martha said, is a fabulous place with simply great accommodations. In fact, downright elegant.

COUPLES REPEAT VOWS

Weekend ceremonies unite couples

MRS. EDWARD F. TODD

Todd-Ball

In a quiet ceremony in the presence of members of their immediate families Friday in California Heights Methodist Church, Lynn Louise Ball and Edward F. Todd repeated their wedding vows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted H. Ball of Hollywood and the bridegroom the son of Dr. and Mrs. Floyd H. Todd of 1160 Bryant Road.

Dr. and Mrs. Todd have invited friends to a buffet supper next Sunday to introduce the young couple.

Attendants were Mrs. Todd Hanna, sister of the bridegroom, and Edward Miller, best man. The bridal gown was a white sheath with bell sleeves, trimmed with bugle beads which also edged the hemline.

* * * *

THE BRIDEGROOM is an alumnus of Polytechnic High School and USC School of Business where he was affiliated with Sigma Phi Epsilon. His bride attended USC and was an Alpha Delta Pi.

Williams-Talbot

Enroute to San Francisco on a honeymoon trip are Mr. and Mrs. Michael G. Williams (Bonnie Jean Talbot) who exchanged wedding vows Saturday before 150 guests in St. Maria Goretti Church.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Talbot, 3807 Snowden Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis J. Williams, 4859 Coldbrook Ave.

The bride wore a gown of Chantilly lace with a crystal and pearl crown holding her veil. Attending her was her sister, Bari-Jill Talbot.

The bridegroom was served by Lynn Williams, a brother, as best man and Don and Jim Williams.

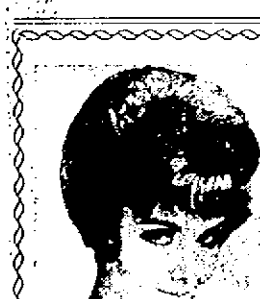
A RECEPTION at El Dorado Park clubhouse preceded the couple's departure on their honeymoon trip. They will reside in Long Beach.

Both young persons were graduated from Lakewood High and attended Long Beach City College. Mrs. Williams will complete her studies in dental assisting at LBCC in June.

MRS. M. G. WILLIAMS

Antique in the bath

An antique low dresser can be made into an unusual and serviceable bathroom fixture. Properly cut, it can be fitted around the lavatory sink. With its top surfaced with durable ceramic tile, it becomes a waterproof counter with already built-in storage space below. Antique-looking faucets and spout will add even more interest.



Alamitos Library Association to mark founding

Members of the Alamitos Library Association will mark the group's 71st Founder's Day at its February meeting Wednesday.

A musical program by Mrs. Elmer Longfellow accompanied by Mrs. Rex Bottomley will highlight the 12:30 p.m. luncheon program.

The original library was constructed by the association in 1897, was in service until the City of Long Beach built a new library in 1929.

Hostesses will be Mrs. J. W. Good and Mrs. Merritt D. Walrod.

INDUSTRY EXECUTIVE SPEAKS OUT

Nation's Shipbuilding Threatened

By JACK O. BALDWIN

If the proposal of the Interagency Maritime Task Force to build U. S. merchant ships in foreign shipyards is followed it would seriously affect the nation's shipyard mobilization base in times of emergency and undermine the industry, Edwin M. Hood, president of the Shipbuilders Council of America, charged in an address before the Propeller Club in San Diego.

Hood claimed the "build abroad" proposal would cost industries $5 billion and 1.4 billion man-hours of work during the next decade.

"Though American shipyards have suffered alternatively from a feast-or-famine existence, there was never any serious effort to tamper with the principle that we must always have available our own shipbuilding facilities, under our own jurisdiction, within our own borders," he said.

* * * *

HOOD CHARGED the Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation and the Maritime Administrator "... are openly advocating foreign construction of ships for the merchant marine."

"They would build 17 merchant ships annually in the U. S. shipyards and 37 each year in foreign shipyards," Hood claimed.

"They would, through governmental edict, automatically limit the growth of the U. S. Shipyard industry for many years to come, and could, through their actions, bring about circumstances which might destroy the art of merchant shipbuilding in this great country of ours," he said.

The speaker claimed that of the nine governmental agencies comprising the Interagency Maritime Task Force only two of the individuals serving on the force ever have been identified.

Hood posed the question:

"Could it be that they (the seven unidentified members) do not wish to be publicly numbered among those who would destroy a vital national industry?"

* * * *

THE SHIPBUILDERS Council president compared the emphasis Russia has placed on new ship construction with that of the U.S.

"As of Oct. 31, 1965 there were 464 vessels, totaling more than 4 million deadweight tons under construction or on order for the Soviet Union. This listing included 298 dry cargo vessels, 111 tankers, seven bulk carriers and 48 miscellaneous vessels."

"As of the same date the U. S. had only 39 merchant ships totaling almost a half million dead weight tons under construction or on order. The Russians are outbuilding us by a ratio of 12-to-1 on numbers of ships and by 8-to-1 in tonnage," he alleged.

"While 100 ships were delivered to the 'hammer and sickle' fleet during 1965, only 16 were delivered by U. S. shipyards to the American merchant marine," Hood said.

* * * *

HOOD CLAIMED the Soviet Union is moving rapidly in-to control the oceans and trade routes of the world.

He said the Russians could "eventually eliminate free world shipping" by controlling ocean freight rates through the use of its expanding merchant ship fleet.

The shipyard official told the audience the proponents of foreign shipyards are enamored of the lower shipbuilding prices available overseas.

"Higher U. S. prices reflect added costs stemming from differences in vessel design philosophy, safety standards, contract procedures, government regulations and other factors which do not prevail abroad," Hood explained.

He estimated that relaxation of these requirements could reduce the price differential between U. S. and Foreign-built ships by as much as 35%.

L.B. Port Sets Pace Over '65

During the first quarter of the current fiscal year cargo shipments through the Port of Long Beach are up more than one-half million tons over the same period a year ago, Charles L. Vickers, port general manager, revealed last week.

"The port handled 3,781,672 tons during the first three months of our fiscal year to set a pace that could easily top last year's record of 13.6 million tons," Vickers said.

Value of the cargo handled by 549 vessels was $403 million, he added.

Tonnage figures released by Vickers showed the following monthly breakdown: July—1,060,925; August—1,422,906; September—1,299,741.

Nylok Co. to Open Plant in Torrance

A West Coast factory and sales office will be opened in Torrance in April by the Nylok Co., originators of the self-locking fastener.

From the 18,000-square-foot facility at 1501 Sepulveda Blvd., the firm will service the 13 Western states, according to John H. Heppy, manager of production.

The company, a division of United Shoe Machinery Corp., will operate a temporary sales, engineering and production facility at 611 Hawaii St. pending completion of its permanent plant.

Cabrillo District Architects Install Eight Officers

Richard Poper, partner in the firm of Jones & Poper, has been installed as president of the newly created Cabrillo District, American Institute of Architects.

The district includes the former Long Beach district and 32 adjacent communities.

Inducted to office with Poper were Robert Lane, vice president, of the Bellflower firm of Lane and Brodie; Edwin Ripperdan, secretary, with offices in Long Beach; Thomas Black, treasurer, of the San Pedro firm of Black and Pelusso.

ALSO installed at the ceremonies at Lafayette Hotel, Long Beach, were officers of the district's Women's Architectural League.

They are Mrs. William Locket, president; Mrs. Robert Schilling, vice president; Mrs. Ted Cushman, secretary, and Mrs. Irene McFall Pierce, treasurer.

Start Hamburger Cafe on Atlantic

Construction is underway at 1400 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach, on another McDonald's hamburger restaurant. This will be the firm's 84th unit in California.

Nationwide, the chain has 735 units in 44 states. The new restaurant will be built on the standard McDonald's design, using golden arches.

STEPS TO PROFITS

Stockholders' Rights Limited

(This is the fourth in a series of articles by an expert writer for Moody's Investors Service and distributed by NEA Special Services.)

By ROLAND GOODMAN

To have perspective on your position as a stockholder, you should understand how a corporation functions. Each corporation has a charter defining its scope, and is governed by a board of directors elected by the stockholders at an annual meeting.

The stockholders also vote on changes in the charter and capitalization, approve the selection of outside accountants, and hear reports on how things are going. All companies with widely traded stock issue printed annual reports before the meeting.

Most large companies permit stockholders to sign proxies which allow another person to cast their votes. This can become important if there is a dispute over the company's affairs. In any event, the small stockholder's voice in running the business is normally limited to his vote.

* * * *

HE HAS a right to know about major events that can affect the corporation's fortunes, but business secrets must be protected against the possibility that a rival company will buy a few shares and demand to know everything that is going on.

It is rare that a well-run company has an internal controversy which would give importance to the vote of the small shareowner. The directors choose the officers who carry on the day-to-day business and make decisions on dividends and major policy questions.

While the owner of 100 shares will receive courteous replies to sensible questions about what is going on in a million-share corporation, he is not in a good position to be consulted about important matters.

Thus, if the small investor is not satisfied with the way things are going in the company, his logical course is to sell his shares and reinvest his money in another corporation in which he has more confidence.

(NEXT: Reading the annual report.)

Escrow Assn. to Hear J. J. Lyman at Wed. Meeting

Recently installed officers of the Long Beach Escrow Association will be in charge of their first meeting Wednesday evening at Mr. C's Restaurant. Speaker will be John J. Lyman, vice president of the business division of Security Title Insurance Co.

New Officers include Marge Clearwater of Vivian Dodge Escrows, president; Lucy Weir, Security First National Bank, vice president; Merle Sorensen, Farmers & Merchants Bank, secretary, and Eunice Hallock, First Escrow and Title Co., treasurer.

Reservations for the dinner meeting should be made with Eunice Hallock, 9828 E. Flower St., Bellflower.

City National Bank Offers New System

City National Bank's 15 offices last week initiated a new streamlined savings system for its customers.

Now customers may handle checking and savings transactions at one teller window and the time-consuming savings passbook has been replaced with a new receipt book.

4 Area Men Elected to ATC Office

Four men from the Long Beach-Orange County area were named to offices in the Associated Tile Contractors of Southern California at the annual meeting in Los Angeles.

R. J. Venturelli of Capri Tile, Newport Beach was elected vice president; Jack Houser, Century Tile, Inglewood, secretary. Paul Setzer, Master Tilers of Bellflower, was elected to the Ceramic Tile Institute board of trustees and Romney Ballentine, Continental Marble & Tile Co., Artesia, was named to the CTI advisory board.

Wally Ernsdorf of Sun Valley was elected president.

WEDDING BELLS RING

Newlyweds say 'I do' in church ceremonies

MRS. MICHAEL E. WELSH

MRS. DAVID CARLAW

Mrs. MICHAEL LIGHTHIPE

MRS. JOHN BOSTON

MRS. HUBERT SANCHEZ

Mrs. Ronald E. Vermette

Welsh-Agee

Students at Long Beach State College, Sandra Jean Agee and Michael Edwin Welsh, sealed their wedding vows in a service at 8 p.m. Saturday in Bethel Lutheran Church before 175 guests.

The former Miss Agee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond P. Agee, 5516 Myrtle Ave., and her husband the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Welsh, 6457 St. Louis Ave. Both young people were graduated from Jordan High School.

Attired in satin organza with lace bodice and a lace edged train, the bride also wore an organza rose headdress holding her silk illusion veil.

Her sister, Mrs. Frank Berry, served as matron of honor, with Terri McColeman and Cathy Gerlach as bridemaids. Judy Rasmussen and Ronnie Agee were flower girl and ring bearer.

Best man was Thomas Commeau with William Zingg and Ray Agee Jr. ushering. After a Northern California honeymoon the couple will live in Long Beach.

Lighthipe-Esses

San Diego was destination of a wedding trip made by Mr. and Mrs. Michael James Lighthipe after their exchange of vows Friday in Bethel Lutheran Church.

The bride is the former Audrey Gail Esses, daughter of Mrs. Belte Esses, 905 E. 70th St. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James A. Lighthipe, 3500 Lama Lane.

A gown of rosepoint lace styled with a Basque bodice and voluminous skirt of tiered lace extending into a chapel-length train was worn by the bride.

Preceding her to the altar were LesLey McCance, maid of honor; Judith Ashley, Nancy Fair, Terrie Esses and Delores Ashley, bridesmaids.

The bridegroom asked his brother, Rodney, to be his best man. Ushers were Frederick Ashley, Gary O'Neil and Thomas Lighthipe.

A reception followed in American Legion Hall.

The bride is an alumna of Jordan High School and attended Long Beach City College. Her husband was graduated from Poly High School and is a student at Long Beach State College.

Sanchez-Poling

North Long Beach Christian Church was setting for Saturday rites uniting in marriage Sheila Naomi Poling and Hubert Edwin Sanchez.

After a ski trip to Mammoth, the pair will be at home in Santa Ana.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. Homer H. Poling, Lakewood; Mrs. Edith Sanchez, Torrance; and Edward Sanchez, Montebello.

Attending the pair were Mary M. Graves, maid of honor; Andrea Bodnar, Gale Haworth, bridesmaids; Thomas Sanchez, best man; Ben Rosin and Ralph Scarrow, ushers.

For her vows the bride was gowned in silk organza and Chantilly lace.

A champagne reception followed in the home of the bride's parents.

Carlaw-Hopkins

St. Pancratius Catholic Church was setting for nuptials Saturday which united Leone M. Hopkins and David M. Carlaw.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Leo B. Hopkins, 2696 55th Way, and the late Mr. Hopkins. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. David Carlaw, 3882 Platt St., Lynwood.

Honor attendants were the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Jerald Hopkins, and Eugene Poertner. The bride's niece, Lucille Hopkins, was flower girl; Jerald Hopkins and Donald Hopkins seated guests.

The newlyweds were feted at a wedding breakfast at Lakewood Country Club before they left for a honeymoon trip to Arizona. They will reside in Lynwood.

The bride attended Long Beach City College. Her husband was graduated from Lynwood High School and Long Beach State College.

Boston-O'Rourke

After a wedding trip to Carmel, 4679 Banner will be home address for Mr. and Mrs. John S. Boston, who exchanged nuptial vows Saturday in St. Bartholomew's Church.

The bride is the former Patricia L. O'Rourke, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph L. O'Rourke, 147 Park Ave.

Parents of the bridegroom are M/Sgt. and Mrs. Samuel Boston of Cypress.

A traditional bridal gown of Chantilly lace was worn by the bride. Her assistants were her sister, Peggy, maid of honor; Kathleen O'Rourke, Mary O'Rourke, Mary Boston and Frances Maceyka, bridesmaids.

Timothy Gormly performed best man duties. Ushers were Joseph O'Rourke, Lawrence Tochluk, Michael Klein and Joseph Svidergol.

A reception followed in the Commissioned Officers' Club at Terminal Island.

Vermette-Bradshaw

In the presence of 300 guests in St. Barnabas Catholic Church on Saturday at 10 a.m., the wedding of Patricia A. Bradshaw and Ronald E. Vermette was solemnized.

Now honeymooning at Big Bear Lake, the new Mr. and Mrs. Vermette will make their future home in Dover, N. H., home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Vermette.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Bradshaw, 4373 Falcon Ave. Her gown was of peau de soie trimmed with Alencon lace on skirt and train, and seed pearl crown held her veil of imported silk illusion.

* * * *

PRECEDING her to the altar were Jeanette Perciach, maid of honor, Mrs. Neal Van Dyke, Bonnie and Carol Weidenkopf. Kelly Van Dyke was the flower girl.

Best man duties were handled by Richard Quinto, and ushers were Leo and William Bradshaw and Lupe Lopez.

Pair united in Colorado

During a Saturday ceremony in First Presbyterian Church of Littleton, Colo., former Long Beach resident Gary M. Givens claimed Mimi Ann Simmons in marriage.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Monroe Simmons of Littleton, was attired in a floor-length white velveteen gown styled with A-line skirt. A long-sleeved jacket was worn over the fitted bodice accented by a jewel neckline.

She was attended by Hilary Heidt, maid of honor; Judy Givens, Ginger Givens and Paula White.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Carl Meyer, 2839 Tulane Ave., and Lew Givens of Littleton, asked Robert Eggars to be his best man. Ushers were the bridegroom's brother, Dane Meyer of Long Beach, Wayne Fitzpatrick and Tom Cassaway.

* * * *

MRS. GIVENS is employed as a ballet instructor. She attended Denver University, where she was affiliated with Gamma Phi Beta Sorority. Her fiance is an alumnus of Millikan High School and attended Long Beach City College.

They will make a home in Colorado Springs.

Big Admiral Facility for Mexico City

CHICAGO — Construction has begun of a new manufacturing facility for Admiral de Mexico in Mexico City, the subsidiary's parent company, Admiral Corp. announced.

The new one story brick plant and 5½-acre plot of land will represent an investment of $800,000. Radios, stereo phonographs, television receivers and automatic record changers will be manufactured initially, as well as a variety of components for these products.

Admiral de Mexico produced its first television sets and radios in February 1955 and shortly afterward achieved first place in TV sales in the Mexican market, a position it has retained 11 years.

MRS. POND (L.), MRS. PORTER, MRS. KEENAN . . . Great Accomplishment

Three Career Women at Buffums' Retiring

If there's no place in the business world for career women, then three women at Buffums' Long Beach store have been out of place for a total of 95 years.

But, of course, there's only infrequent opposition to women in the business circles in this era.

It was still a bit rigid, however, in 1932 when Mrs. Rena Keenan began at Buffums' as a sales clerk; in 1935 when Mrs. Mabel Porter began there as a seamstress, or in 1936 when Mrs. Jessie Pond went to Buffums' as a "temporary" fitter.

All three will retire this week.

Mrs. Keenan stayed to become buyer of main floor accessories, personally searching the world markets for new fashions.

* * * *

MRS. PORTER stayed to become supervisor of the all-important alteration room where the store's noted penchant for pleasing the customer gets the last of a succession of checks.

Mrs. Pond's 30-year "temporary" stay saw her rise to the store's exacting position of buyer of foundations.

Mrs. Keenan first worked as a clerk in a Boston store and when her husband, John, was transferred by the Navy to the West Coast, she followed him to Long Beach and on Oct. 8, 1932, made her first sale in the infants department and her Buffums' career was under way.

Later, Mrs. Keenan was named assistant to the buyer, then buyer of downstairs lingerie and made her first buying trip to New York.

Her last such trip was No. 62.

* * * *

MEANWHILE, in a department not far removed, Mrs. Pond began giving fittings in foundations and, after turning down buyership opportunities in two other departments, was asked by her own section buyer, Miss Katherine Hinton, to accompany her on a trip.

Mrs. Pond became Miss Hinton's assistant and, upon the latter's promotion to merchandise manager, became "the buyer."

Through the years, Buffums' executives estimate Mrs. Pond has purchased over $8 million worth of foundations, girdles and bras.

* * * *

MRS. PORTER was quietly shaping her career, too, and Buffums' estimates 7,000 garments are processed through her department annually.

Career highlights:

Mrs. Keenan — Three European and three trips to the Orient in her search for fashions of value.

Mrs. Pond — Callouses on the inside of her little fingers from years of lacing up dayslwhen (two-piece) corsets.

Mrs. Porter — Altering a wedding gown almost as the bride began her trek down the aisle because the date had been suddenly advanced.

Home-O-Rama Will Pick Queen Feb. 14

In keeping with Valentine's Day, the Long Beach Builders Exchange will select a Home-O-Rama Sweetheart at its general membership meeting Monday, Feb. 14, at 6 p.m. in the French Room of the Lafayette Hotel.

The winner will reign over the annual home show scheduled March 2-6 in the Long Beach Arena.

George Colouris, producer of the Home-O-Rama which is held under sponsorship of the Builders Exchange, said selection of the sweetheart and two princesses will be made by a builders' group committee.

Each will receive an array of prizes from exhibitors in the show, the Home-O-Rama management and the Builders Exchange.

"SHOWCASE for Modern Living" is the theme of the home show which will provide the public an opportunity to see the latest in furnishings, building materials, decorative items, appliances and other products of interest to home owners and prospective homeowners.

Don Anderson, general chairman, and Lou Anfinson, co-chairman, said this year's show will emphasize sections, allowing visitors to see furnishings and appliances in individual settings such as kitchens, bedrooms, bathrooms, family and living rooms.

Set Sales Course for Health Insurance

Formation of a local class in the Life Underwriter Training Council's course in health insurance sales has been announced by Harvey L. Harms of Provident Life & Accident.

He was recently appointed committee chairman by Donald M. Tippett, CLU, of Massachusetts Mutual, president of the Long Beach Association of Life Underwriters.

Enrollments for the 12-week course will be accepted to Feb. 1.

ARMS OUTSTRETCHED

In time of family crisis ...a best friend

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN

"Mentally ill mother. Seven children, three in diapers. Father insensitive to mother's problems."

"Mr. B. returned from hospital following heart attack to find his wife had left him and five children, ages 12, 10, 7, 5 and 18 months."

So read the necessarily cryptic, yet heart-rending case histories on file at Homemaker Service of Long Beach.

But let's take the case of Mr. and Mrs. T.

"Mother in need of surgery requiring lengthy post-operative recovery time. Father diabetic. Intermittent hospitalization interrupts steady income. Two children, 8 and 18-months."

SAYS MRS. T, "I was terribly frightened about the surgery. You never think about death when you're single. When you're married it becomes so much more important to stay alive... to see that your children grow up."

"That's why it was such a blessing while I was in the hospital to know that the children were being cared for and that my husband's special diet was being prepared. You know the homemakers are experienced, backed by an agency, trained to just walk in and take over.

"Knowing she was there helped me ease the tension that my doctor said was so important to recovery. I felt like a woman of 50. Now I feel 20 again!"

Or, let's listen to Mrs. H.:

"My husband is 92 and recently had pneumonia. Along with being deaf and blind, he was quite a handful. I'm 85, and when I had an attack of phlebitis on top of a heart condition, I knew I needed help. I called for a homemaker—they're the most wonderful people—and they certainly helped me out. Now that I'm better, I'm trying to help myself, but they have promised me more help if I need it."

Just what is this service that brings such effusive praise from the people it helps?

HOMEMAKER SERVICE, was established a year and a half ago by Junior League of Long Beach as "a short term home help program to assist families and individuals by providing temporary household aid and personal care in a time of crisis."

To meet what the Community Welfare Council termed the greatest unmet need in the city, Junior League undertook a three year pilot program to get the service underway, pledging $15,000 a year for three years from its Community Trust Fund realized from moneys made on annual rummage sale and debutante ball. The league also provides volunteer clerical help at the service headquarters in the Fairfield Building, 3515 Linden Ave. Other costs are met through a sliding fee scale charged service users on the basis of their ability to pay.

Now mid-way through the Junior League-sponsored period, Homemaker Service and its board headed by Leo Vander Lans, assured of its worth to Long Beach, are looking for additional sources of income through organizations and individuals. The goal: perhaps establishing its own self-supporting foundation.

In the words of its executive director Helen Collins, "You can't put the lid on a growing agency any more than you can on a 12-year-old child. Not baby sitters, not cleaning ladies, our agency provides a service that speaks directly to the people in times of emergency."

And, in addition to the people it helps, it also provides part-time employment for its homemakers, she points out.

THESE WOMEN, trained to step into any home situation and take over with a firm hand and a warm smile, are marvelous, says their director.

Pre-requisite for service is attendance at an adult education course, Homemaking for Everyday Use, given at Long Beach City College.

New classes, according to Miss Collins, will open Feb. 3 and will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. each Thursday for 18 weeks on the Business and Technology Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway. In addition to training potential homemakers, the course is invaluable, she said, to housewives, experienced or inexperienced, in teaching care of children, food and nutrition, health and safety, care of the sick, convalescent and elderly, as well as effeciency in home management.

A Homemaker for just a year, and currently taking the LBCC course for a second time, Kathleen Kaczor says, "It's wonderful. I'm learning things I THOUGHT I knew!

She also eloquently sums up the service given by herself and her fellow homemakers:

"People are thrilled to find someone they can trust to come in and take over. Our thrill is in being able to help."

Bertea Products in Orange County Move

Marking the first step of moving Bertea Products of Pasadena to larger facilities near the Orange County Airport, the firm has established an advance engineering office at 4500 Campus Drive, Newport Beach, in the University Plaza Engineering Office Building.

Some of Bertea's key engineering personnel are staffing the office and other electronic and electro-mechanical engineers are being sought in the area.

The plant, which will employ over 1,000, is due for completion by August. It is being constructed in the Irvine Industrial Complex adjacent to the airport near the intersection of Von Karmen Boulevard and the San Diego Freeway.

All of Bertea's administrative, engineering and production departments will be combined into the new facility which will contain 160,000 square feet.

* * * *

BERTEA PRODUCTS was founded in 1939 by Alex Bertea. It has been producing highly sophisticated electro-hydraulic servomechanisms over 25 years. Sales now are at a $15 million annual rate.

Typical of the company's aircraft products are flap controls, nose wheel steering valves, stabilizer controls, main landing gear selector valves, aileron actuators, rudder controls and flight controls.

Tom R. Gilliam, president of the Gilliam Co., hospital public relations counselors, has been named principal account executive for St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach.

BUSY IN HIS SPARE TIME

Hughes-Fullerton Exec Aids Small Businesses

FULLERTON — More than a score of small businesses in Orange County, whose owners are faced with the unexpected and often vexing peripheral problems crucial to successful administration, are receiving skilled spare-time consultation from an interested official of Hughes Aircraft Co. here.

C. E. White, director of administration at Hughes-Fullerton, has devoted countless evenings and weekends during the past year to providing free consultation on business practices to enthusiastic, but often unexperienced, newcomers in the business field.

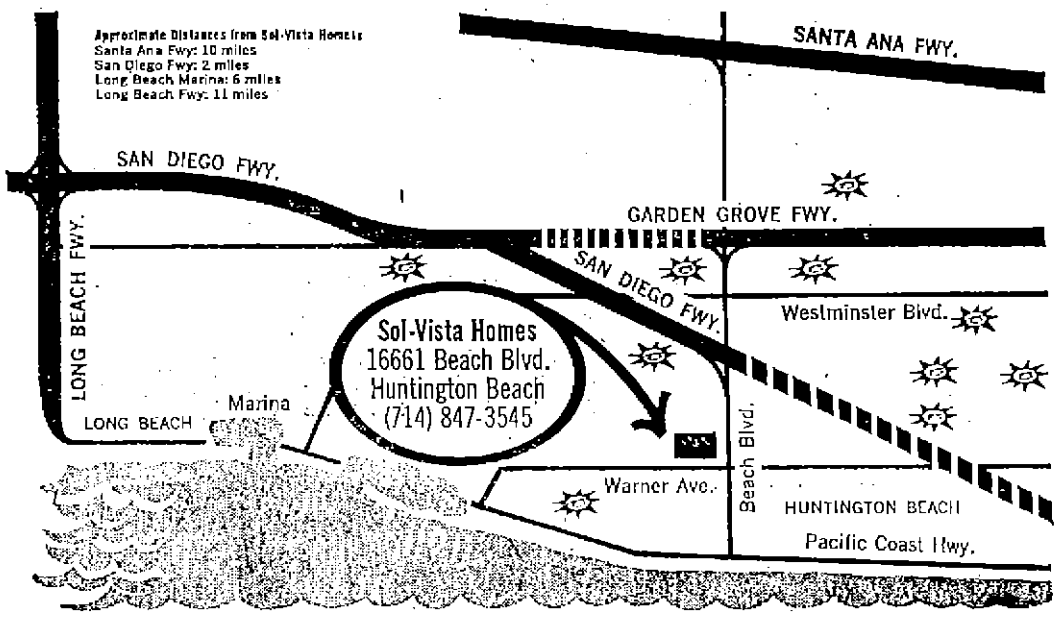
"BOTH LARGE and small businesses have common problems in production, promotion and administration," White said. "The big firms, however, are able to hire staffs of experts in each activity area. The small business owner must cope with these problems on his own."

White said many small businesses fail each year not because they lack a better product or service but simply because their owners cannot succesfully solve the problems of marketing, financing or producing that product or service.

According to White, some businessmen use baseball or golf or a hobby as an outside interest. He said he finds the same challenge and escapism in tackling the problems of small businesses.

THE 14 FIRMS counseled locally by White include a broasted chicken shop, a precision machine shop, a door-to-door selling enterprise, a retail outlet, a contractor, a taco stand, and a small, automotive-repair firm.

In his spare-time effort, White is active in a new U.S. Small Business Administration program called SCORE, which stands for Service Corps of Retired Executives. While not waiting to retire, White has joined more than a hundred Southern California businessmen serving as SCORE volunteers, by lending their business know-how to struggling businessmen who are having management problems and want help.



He has found that more people "need management than money in operating a small business."

Lends $592,986 on L.B. Realty

The Prudential Insurance Co. invested $592,986 in Long Beach real estate loans in 1965, it was announced today by Edward J. Ahearn, Southern California regional investments manager for the company's mortgage loan department.

The loans for 1965 were $257,986 for residential purposes, and $335,000 for commercial and industrial loans.

BALANCED POWER HOMES

Life at sea is a breeze for the lady of the yacht

PERT boat show hostess, Yvonne Osborne, above, poses in head (bedroom to landlubbers). New yachts feature showers, with hot and cold water; toilets that are flushed electrically.

carpeting, there are many handsome vinyl floor coverings. Some are textured to give the look of carpet. Easy to care for with the swish of a mop, they have non-skid qualities which appeal to both men and women.

R. M. Tollefson, president of Tollycraft Corp., Kelso, Wash., says he never overlooks an idea presented by a woman. One time he added a $3.50 bread board and sold a boat. Another woman suggested a pastry board would be handy. A pastry board was added.

His boats feature plastic, moulded drawers which are easy to clean, never warp. "I'm SURE it was the suggestion of a woman," he said.

BOAT galleys, or kitchens, now have all conveniences of home. Linda La Marre, right, is seen in galley of 50-foot Stephens. Like other new craft, it has all electric facilities.

SINBAD WOULD HAVE FLIPPED OVER THESE BUNKS what first mate wouldn't enjoy luxury of master stateroom like this? Linda La Marre aboard Stephens yacht.

THE TREND to dressing up boats includes use of decorative bric-a-brac for homelike atmosphere. With this in mind, designers are figuring ways to build areas where such items can be used.

What colors do women prefer—cool tones or warm ones? This choice is as individual as the woman herself.

One thing is sure. Women want and are getting big windows instead of small port holes. They like to see out when "below" decks. The "see out" factor has a very real effect on women's enjoyment of boating. Many suffer a form of claustophobia while cruising and big windows alleviate this problem.

Privacy, when she wants it, is important to women. So builders, strictly with feminine desires in mind, arrange sleeping areas and staterooms which can be shut off by doors.

WHILE LARGER vessels go in for such additional niceties as air conditioning, full heating, deep freezes, two, three or more heads (bathrooms), even small runabouts are getting into the luxury swing.

One 20-foot sport cruiser at the show was not only carpeted, it had a completely reclining contoured chair for the lady who, after whizzing along at 40 knots an hour, wants to stretch out for a sun bath during more leisurely cruising.

Men want to know all about construction of hull, quality of motors, RPMs, knots, rudders, props, accuracy of safety equipment. That's as it should be.

But horses under the hatches don't mean a thing to a woman if she's working like a horse, or hemmed in like one, while trying to enjoy family boating.

The makers of Pacemaker yachts probably put it best in one of their ads: "We have long been guided by a philosophy which says that the exterior be designed for a man, a real man, and the interior for his lady."

Saturday events mark Youngs' golden year

Mr. and Mrs. William Frederick Young, 3915 E. 10th St., were honored at two events Saturday in observance of their golden wedding anniversary.

A reception at East Long Beach Methodist Church was followed by a buffet supper at Puccini's for family and relatives.

The couple's children, who served as hosts and hostesses, are Florence Young, Oakland; Joseph Young, Los Angeles; Kenneth and Ellen Young, Pomona; Dorothy and Nick Misciagna, Piedmont.

Mr. and Mrs. Young were married Jan. 26, 1916, in the Methodist parsonage at Littleton, Colo. They resided in Colorado Springs where their four children were born until 1935, when they moved to Long Beach. Mr. Young retired from his own wholesale candy and tobacco business in 1959. They have five grandchildren.

THE MEDITERRANIA . . . Luxury Home Overlooks Golf Course

Ultra-Modern Home Previewing

Outstanding in construction and location, a tri-level home, "The Mediterrania" will have a premier showing today at 3902 Country Club Drive, the corner of Hayter Avenue and Country Club Drive.

With 3,500 square feet of custom designed construction, the tri-level home overlooks the 14th green of the Lakewood Country Club and sets the tempo for an island of beautiful custom homes—an island in the middle of the country club golf course.

* * * *

THE HOME has a roomy, airy interpretation of modern living at its best. There are four above average size bedrooms with plenty of closet space. There are three baths. The large family room is unique with its intimate "conversation corner."

Refreshments will be served to viewers from noon until 4 p.m. today.

The Mediterrania was built by Brown and Brown Construction Co., to Gold Medallion specifications.

Clark Realty Co., is the exclusive sales agent for the home. The firm reported several other sites are available in the area priced from $26,500 to $36,000.

Rossmoor Townhouse Final Unit of Homes Opens

Rossmoor Townhouses, the outstanding community of modern-day homes immediately adjacent to the Rossmoor Shopping and Business Center on Los Alamitos Boulevard, announced the grand opening of its final unit today.

Moderately priced at $22,950 and $23,950, these three and four-bedroom homes provide up-to-date conveniences found in residences costing much more, a spokesman points out. Features include wall-to-wall nylon carpeting; carports; private concrete patios; breakfast bar; built-in vanities; shake and cedar roofs; complete landscaping and sprinklers; all utilities underground; forced-air heating and ample guest parking. Wives are impressed with the efficient all-electric kitchens including built-in Americana oven and range, disposal, dishwasher and combination washer-dryer.

* * * *

LUXURY RECREATIONAL facilities provide Rossmoor residents hours of relaxation. There is swimming in one of four pools, (one of which is a special therapeutic pool), a children's wading pool; putting greens; shuffleboard courts; barbecue pits; and a special private club house.

Rossmoor Townhouse homeowners enjoy Southern California leisure living to the fullest. All necessary exterior maintenance, including pool servicing, yard work, mowing the lawn, etc., is taken care of by a professional maintenance staff.

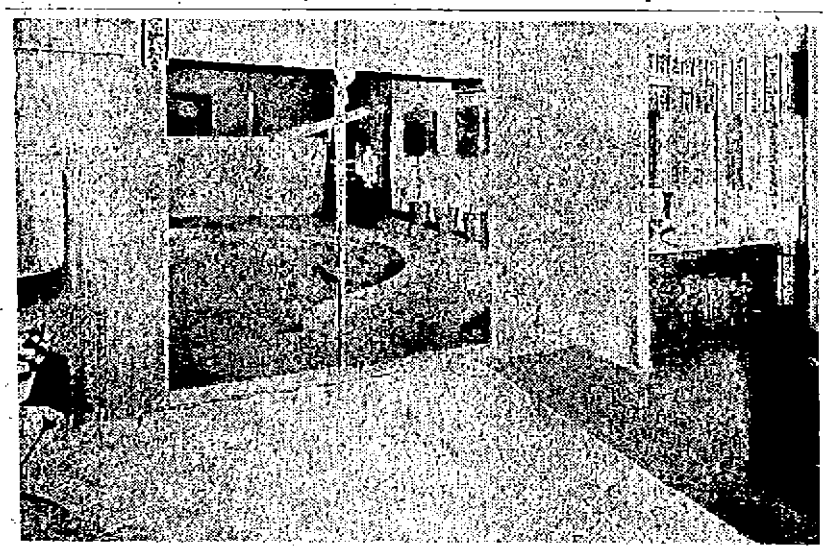
* * * *

ACCORDING to Bill Ballon, president and Bernard Solomon, chairman of the board, Jaymarc Corp. developers of the $4 million project, there are homes available in a wide choice of floor plans and exterior elevations.

Rossmoor Townhouses may be reached via Seventh Street to the Los Alamitos-Bay Boulevard exit, then right two blocks on Los Alamitos to the Rossmoor Shopping and Business Center.

PRICED FROM $26,050

The new Fashion Valley homes in Fountain Valley, priced from $26,050, contain a host of features for a relatively lower-priced home. The one and two-story homes may be purchased on various financing terms, some with no down except closing costs and impounds.



Fashion Valley's Big Homes Offer Varied Finance Terms

Excellent lower priced homes are not found easily in the Los Angeles-Orange County Metropolitan area. However, the new Fashion Valley homes meet the criteria of quality construction and features with a lower full price, a spokesman stresses.

Fashion Valley's one and two-story homes, priced from $26,050, with three, four and five bedrooms; two and two-and-a-half bathrooms feature built-in ranges and ovens; carpeting in all bedrooms, living rooms, halls and stairways; fireplaces and family rooms; a "country-style" kitchen in one plan; and side and rear yard fencing.

Built by Mervin B. Johnson, Fashion Valley homes may be purchased with no down VA financing; low FHA terms, including a new plan whereby veterans may purchase homes regardless of length of service or in which war they fought; Cal-Vet financing; or any of several conventional plans.

Four furnished model homes are open. From the Long Beach area: Drive east on the San Diego Freeway to Beach Boulevard, then south to Edinger Avenue, turn left (east) to Harbor Boulevard, then south to Hell Avenue and right on Hell a short distance to the models in Fountain Valley.

ATTRACTIVE INTERIOR

Here is an interior view of one of the new Casa La Palma homes in the new community of La Palma. The big homes are priced from $24,950 and may be purchased on VA no-down or FHA terms. They are on La Palma Boulevard, which is an extension of Del Amo, between Carmenita Road and Walker Street.

JUST TOUCH THE BUTTON

Pushing a button is all it takes to activate 21 miles of pipeline from Torrance refinery of Mobil Oil Company to Santa Fe yards at Redondo Junction. Diesel fuel is delivered to locomotives without interruption, replacing tank car delivery to yards. On hand to initiate system are W. H. MARALIN NISKA (RIGHT) IN TITLE ROLE, 'SUSANNAH' fly" Feb. 16 and the title role in "Susannah" Feb. 21.

New laurels for Niska

"There always was something different about Maralin," recalls her first voice teacher, Miss Louise Mansfield, who taught music at San Pedro High School. "She was so pretty and vivacious and eager to learn. She worked hard — always seemed to have in her mind some sort of plan for the future."

"Miss Mansfield worked with those of us who wanted to stay after school for extra study," Maralin says. "It was she who encouraged me to enter my first two contests."

Maralin won first prize in each—one a PTA award for vocal excellence in the Los Angeles City Schools, the other in the voice category of the Los Angeles Women's Committee of the Philharmonic Orchestra.

"MISS MANSFIELD'S training was so sound that when I studied with Los Angeles voice coach Ernest St. John I could apply what I had learned — didn't have to unlearn all my previous training and start over," Maralin says gratefully.

Meanwhile, she got her teaching credential at UCLA and was teaching elementary school in Downey when she was called to audition for the chorus in a Palos Verdes College production of "Faust." She came away with the leading role of Marguerite.

The following year she taught at Hollywood Riviera School, Torrance.

"No matter how busy she was, she always was interested in her community and very generous about her singing. She wasn't aloof — she'd entertain where she was asked—at community, civic or political affairs," says Miss Mansfield.

For 15 years, until June, 1965, Maralin was soloist at the Seventh Church of Christ in San Pedro.

THE MORE people heard her, the more they urged her to make singing her career. Finally she said, "I'll go to USC for one year."

That decision changed her life, but she admits it wasn't an easy course.

"You work unbelieveably hard and long. Many a night I drove home alone from Los Angeles at 2 or 3 a.m. when there were no freeways to speed you. But in this very competitive field, where the stakes are so high, I felt I must perfect myself so that nothing could touch me."

Her operatic training continued at the graduate schools of both UCLA and USC, the Music Academy of the West and Los Angeles Conservatory of Music, where she was a fellow student with Mary Costa.

IT WAS AT USC that she premiered the title role of Carlisle Floyd's "Susannah," which the opera workshop did from manuscript under direction of Dr. Walter Ducloux.

"It was such a thrill for me to meet Mr. Floyd when the Metropolitan Opera National Company performed his opera as its very first production last September in Indianapolis.

"Because it's unfamiliar, people resist it, but once they reach the theater, no one ever goes away disappointed. It's not modern in the sense of having no melodies. It evokes more response than any other opera we do."

In addition to "Susannah" and "Madame Butterfly," the touring company performs "Cinderella" and "Carmen."

During her learning years, Maralin perfected 37 roles in less than 9 years, singing major roles, always heeding her own precept: Just sing from performance to performance, doing the very best you can.

SHE CREDITS much of her training in professional conduct to Edwin Lester of Los Angeles Civic Light Opera and remembers the time she stepped into Patrice Munsel's starring role in "Song of Norway" with 40 minutes notice.

"I could hear the audience groan when it was announced tht I would sing instead of Patrice. But after the first aria I coud just feel them thinking, 'Hey, this kid isn't so bad, after all.'"

The new Metropolitan Opera company is, for the San Pedro soprano, "an answer to my wildest dreams come true."

It's purpose is to take live opera to many communities and to give young artists opportunity to sing with a major company. Under the co-management of Rise Stevens and Michael Manuel, the company will cover 25,000 miles and visit 70 cities between September, 1965 and June, 1966.

MARALIN received a call from the company to audition at Greek Theater last spring, then was flown to New York in April to sign her contract and be measured for costumes and wigs.

Just after the tour began, she was asked to sign for next season. No one else had been approached and no one else was until January—but she signed, confident of the company's success.

Community response has been tumultuous,

"Audiences applaud and cheer us so that sometimes we say to ourselves, 'Look, they're too excited — we can't really be that good.'"

As for the future, Maralin says philosophically, "I'll just take it as it comes. You have to learn to bounce with the jolts that come along — but always be in voice!"

FRED WARING

LINDA WICKER

Bright new stars add luster to Waring show

Linda Wicker is one of the bright new discoveries who will make "The Magic Music of Fred Waring" show glitter with entertainment March 10 in Municipal Auditorium.

The newcomers will add their talents to that of favorite Waring standbys, The Pennsylvanians, in a program of popular classics, Broadway tunes, chorales, folksongs, vignettes and novelty numbers.

Tickets are on sale at Humphrey's Music Store, 135 E. Third St.

Duo to play

Dorothy Wade, violinist, and Xenia Chasman, pianist, will perform "Sonata for Violin and Piano" by William Piston and additional music by Bach and Brahms Thursday at 8:15 p.m. in Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. The program is the ninth on the current museum concert series. Admission is free.

Munch to conduct

Charles Munch, former music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra in the Music Center Thursday at 8:30 p.m. and Friday at 2 p.m. David Frisina, concertmaster, will be violin soloist.

Search uncovers five 'New Faces'

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

A talent search by Jerry Darnell, Long Beach City College gallery director, has produced "New Faces," an exhibit by five young Southern California artists which opens Friday at the college gallery, Faculty Avenue and Harvey Way. It will hang through March 4.

Darnell toured major schools in the area to find recent graduates who are considered by their art departments to be among the outstanding young professionals today.

The show includes sculpture by Ed Dron and paintings by Lewis Ott, Joella Mahoney, Andrew Wing and Ian Gatley. The two latter artists are products of Long Beach State College.

The public is invited to a reception from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday. Regular gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fridays.

LONG BEACH Art Association will receive entries for its February "Shibui" show Monday from 1 to 7 p.m. The selector, Koo Ito, is an authority on Shibui which he defines as a sensitiveness and awareness of beauty reflected in the simplest of art forms. These are always understated, with a single brush stroke portraying strength, force and beauty.

Gallery director Deen Rickert emphasizes that participating artists need not follow the oriental theme. All entries will be eligible for judging and selection.

* * * *

MONDAY through Saturday some galleries of Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., will be closed to the public for installation of February exhibits, "Contemporary European and American Prints" and "City School Art."

The print show is on special loan from the Roten Galleries of Baltimore, "City School Art" was selected from work done by students in Long Beach Unified School District.

* * * *

A PREVIEW of work by four artists will precede a concert today at 8:30 p.m. by Harry Blumberg, violist, and Norma Ludmerer, pianist, in Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave.

Artists are Milton Gershgoren, Ted Gilien, Marvin Grayson and Dr. Samuel Pollach.

After the program, a reception will honor performing and exhibiting artists.

* * * *

ENTRY DEADLINE is Feb. 9 for the All-California Art Exhibition to be held March 10 through 20 at the National Orange Show in San Bernardino.

Cash awards will go to first place winners in five categories: traditional oil, modern oil, traditional watercolor, modern watercolor and sculpture.

Jurors are William Bender, Rex Brandt, Dr. Robert R. Harrison, Oswell Jackson, David Lawrence, Douglas McClellan, R. Brownell McGrew, Robert E. Wood and Jack Zajac.

ANNA HAYES, who has had six one-woman shows in the area, will show 15 watercolors at Bay Shore Library, 195 Bay Shore Ave., during February.

Cliburn returns on Feb. 6

Pianist Van Cliburn, who will devote half a program to the works of Frederic Chopin in his single Pavilion appearance next Sunday afternoon, Feb. 6, will present an entire evening of the Polish master's works in his Pasadena recital Tuesday, Feb. 15.

Cliburn will play two of Chopin's three sonatas (the B minor and the B-flat minor), three etudes, the F minor "Fantasie, Opus 49," and the B-flat minor "Scherzo."

At the Pavilion, Feb. 6, the program will include "Four Intermezzi," of Schumann, sonatas of Beethoven and Prokofiev, the "Trois Nouvelles Etudes," (opus posthumous), the F minor "Fantasie," and the C sharp-minor "Scherzo," of Chopin.

Cliburn's last appearance in the Southland was Dec. 7, 1964, when he presented the first solo recital in the Pavilion, during the opening week at the Music Center.

GERRE HANCOCK

Organist to perform for AGO

Gerre Hancock, young American organist, will be the second artist to be featured on Long Beach Chapter of American Guild of Organists current series. The public is invited to the 8:15 p.m. performance Tuesday in First Congregational Church.

The program will include compositions by J. S. Bach and Cesar Franck as well as "Ciacona in E Minor" by Dietrich Buxtehude, "Three Pieces for Mechanical Clock" by Haydn, and "Pageant" by Leo Sowerby.

There is no admission charge, but an offering will be received.

Hancock is organist and choirmaster of Christ Episcopal Church, Cincinnati.

Concerto concert

Robert Cole will conduct the 60-piece college-community orchestra of Immaculate Heart College in the school of music's annual senior Concerto Concert next Sunday, Feb. 6, at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium, 2021 N. Western Ave. There is no admission charge. Soloists will be sopranos Mary Canady, Eileen Duffy and Delia Surratt. Mary Spire, pianist, will perform the Bach "Brandenburg Concetro No. 5."

'LARGE HEAD OF WOMAN,' MATISSE, INDIA INK

Matisse retrospective is reflection of joy

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The Henri Matisse Retrospective at the Dickson Art Center, UCLA, 405 Hilgard Ave., Los Angeles, is wellnigh overwhelming. The 92 paintings, 47 sculptures, 83 drawings, 108 prints, and 5 books he illustrated are admirably hung in chronological progression in a number of galleries on two floors.

There is so much to see, it cannot possibly be assimilated in one visit. The viewer traces the artist's progress from the early fine academic work in painting and sculpture through his breakthrough into color before 1900, his toying with impressionism, pointillism, and cubism, his love-affair with North Africa, and to the works of his bedridden old age. He ultimately distilled his art into a free simplicity that speaks volumes. His subject is human joy.

* * * *

MATISSE (1869-1954) lived with all the excitement of the art revolution, yet never lost sight of his personal vision and his goal to create an art of strength and power which would refresh the physically exhausted and spiritually depleted man of our times.

The two most outstanding attributes of Matisse's work are his sinuous, arabesque line and his gorgeous colors.

* * * *

THERE ARE no social messages to be found here, no moral judgments. The sensitive, brilliant artist doesn't try to show us the world the way it was but the way he saw it. His work is a paean to the joy of life.

The show continues at UCLA through Feb. 27. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Thursdays; 1 to 9 p.m. Sundays.

Vocal bill to benefit church fund

Soprano Stella Herman will sing German, French and Italian art songs, contemporary numbers and Negro spirituals today at 8 p.m. in Pacific Unitarian Church Auditorium, 5621 Montemalaga Drive, Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Miss Herman, after majoring in music at the University of Nebraska, was active in UCLA's Opera Workshop, singing roles in "Italian Girl in Algiers," "Midsummer Night's Dream," Visitors." She also has appeared with the American Opera Company, Los Angeles Civic Light Opera and Nat King Cole's 1964 U. S. tour.

* * * *

OTHER performances have been as soloist with South Bay Civic Symphony and the Palos Verdes Community Art Association, and in premieres of "Song of Songs" by Castelnueva-Ledesco and "Shakespeare's Songs" by David Amram.

A donation will be received at the door to benefit the church piano fund.

Blow down: Harry James vs. Herman

Woody Herman and his orchestra will play a concert today at 8 p.m. in Cerritos College Gymnasium. General admission tickets will be sold at the door before the performance.

Monday, Woody and his musicians will engage trumpeter Harry James and his ochestra in a campaign to "blow the man down" in the "Battle of the Bands" at Carousel Theater, West Covina. Each group will play the music for which it is famous.

Tuesday through next Sunday Homer and Jethro, bucolic comedy singers, and The New Society, fast-rising vocal group, will join America's No. 1 Peapicker, Tennessee Ernie Ford, at the Carousel.

Big Homes Near Corona Have Attractive Price

REFRIGERATED AIR CONDITIONING . . . In Corona Homes

Home and Country residences, near Corona, are attracting many buyers because of the low-prices offered on the large homes, announced F. K. Shepard of the developing firm.

Models feature a variety of floor plans and 16 exterior styles. One and two-story homes are offered with three, four and five bedrooms, formal dining room, family room, two and three baths and in the two-story model, a big bonus family recreation room.

Prices range from $19,950 to $25,450 with down payments from $495, and 30-year conventional financing.

Included are central refrigerated air - conditioning systems, nylon wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, and block wall fencing on three sides.

* * * *

HOME & COUNTRY residences have rock wool insulation, massive block or brick fireplaces, mirrored sliding wardrobe doors in the master suite and many features found in homes costing thousands more.

Latest color-coordinated kitchens feature built-in appliances with double ovens, ceramic tile countertops, luminous ceilings and hardwood cabinets. Some models boast a walk-in kitchen pantry and serving counter.

Located in a tree-covered setting. Home and Country is within reach of schools and shopping and available in nearby Riverside, Corona and Arlington.

The residences may be reached via the Riverside Freeway through Corona to McKinley off-ramp, south to Magnolia Avenue then left to model homes and sales office.

Real Estate Club

Larry Moshier, city editor of the Herald American, will speak to members of the North Long Beach Real Estate Club at their weekly breakfast meeting Thursday at the Park Pantry, 17511 S. Susana Road.

Moshier will explain the background for many street, city and mountain names in this area.

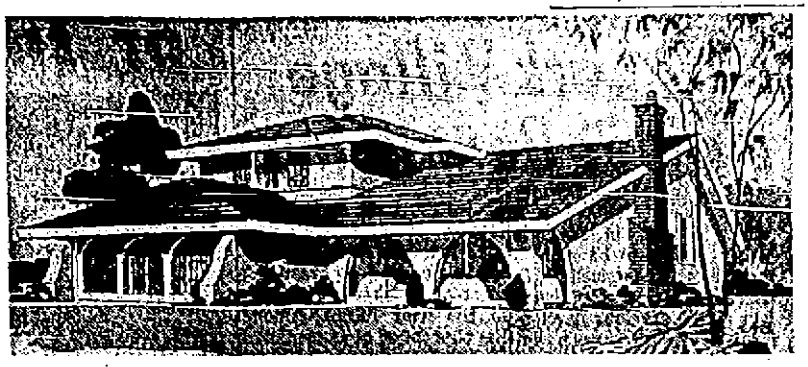
College Park Home Has 3-Car Garage

One of the plans in the new College Park community of Seal Beach offers a three-car garage, which should be of special appeal to boat enthusiasts, according to Mark Bader, project sales manager for S & S Construction Co., builders-developers.

"Our architectural department designed this specifically for the hobbyist or boat enthusiast," Bader said, "and we expect it to be popular especially among the men. The extra-large garage is actually a bonus area, convertible to many uses—from work shop to card room."

Proximity of the site to the marinas induced architects to give special study to the idea of a three-car garage, Bader added.

* * * *



COLLEGE PARK a $51 mil- residential development, is bounded by Los Alamitos Blvd. on the west, Garden Park in Garden Grove on the east, and the Garden Grove Freeway on the south. It is adjacent to a private country club and 18-hole golf course now under construction.

Model homes will be constructed and opened formally as soon as possible, according to Bader. Meanwhile, sales are already being made from blueprints, plat plans and renderings.

The homes, priced from $26,250, will be of three, four and five bedrooms, with two and three baths, in one-story, two-story and tri-level floor plans.

Purchase can be made on VA terms with no down payment to qualified veterans, with FHA and conventional financing also available.

To visit the sales office, take San Diego Freeway to Valley View turnoff. Go north on Valley View toward Lampson. Watch for entrance signs 1 block before Lampson and turn west.

EXCLUSIVE DESIGN . . . Tri-Level Orangewood Home

Orangewood Grand Opening to Feature Tri-Level Homes

Praise is being given the tri-level homes at the grand opening of his Orangewood development, according to Don Wilson, president of Don Wilson Builders. An exclusive feature for the Cypress area, this designing allows maximum use of living areas, with spacious efficiency.

On the upper level of this plan is a master bedroom, two other large bedrooms and a custom bath. The middle level has a separate living room, a roomy kitchen, and a nice-sized dining area.

* * * *

STEPPING DOWN to the lower level there is a family-size rumpus room, with sliding glass doors providing access to outside patio areas, plus two more bedrooms and full-size bathroom.

All models have quality wall - to - wall carpeting and built-in kitchen appliances.

* * * *

TOTAL COMMUNITY planning has gone into this development. Utilities are underground. Another community addition is Orangewood's own park, dedicated by Wilson. It includes a playground for children, paved courts, and braziers, benches and tables for family barbecues.

Front landscaping is another quality plus at Orangewood, with lawns and shrubbery giving an established air to the new development. Furnished models are open, with a wide range of styles and designs. These one and two-story homes are priced from $24,950 with $995 down. They may be reached by driving on the Garden Grove Freeway to Knott Avenue, then north to Orangewood.

Up to 6 Bedrooms in Valbrook Homes

Southern California families like big homes to take advantage of the expansive life enjoyed here, and Aaron Lipton is building homes to fit the desires in Fullerton and Placentia, he points out.

His Valbrook homes have up to 2,840 square feet of living space and a variety of floorplans and exterior stylings to make an attractive community. Valbrook homes have four, five or six bedrooms and from two to four bathrooms.

A preview showing is now being held at Valbrook in Fullerton to exhibit the wide choice of homes and the wide, sweeping views of the beautiful hills.

The homes sell for $28,950 to $37,950. There are convenient financing plans, including a trade program which allows an existing home to be traded in to make the down payment on a new Valbrook home.

* * * *

A NUMBER of features have been included, such as nylon carpeting, forced air heat, extra-large wardrobe closets, family rooms, all-electric kitchens, travertine entries, formal dining rooms, extra large wardrobes and upstairs studies. Some homes have two fireplaces.

Visitors are invited to the preview showing at 2241 Loma Alta Drive at Gilbert in Fullerton. Drive north from the Santa Ana Freeway on Brookhurst to Commonwealth and left to Gilbert and then right to Loma Alta.

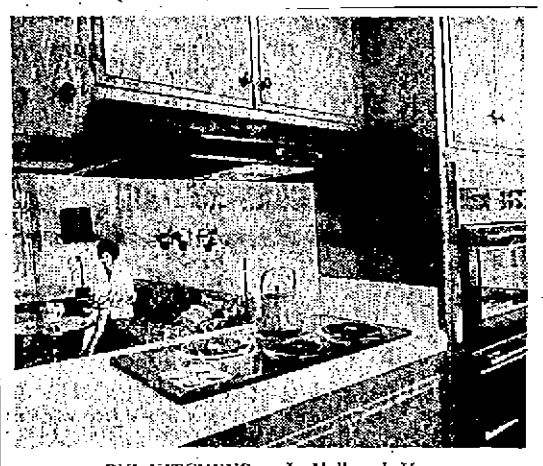
Gibraltar Leases Site in Fullerton

Gibraltar Savings has announced signing of a 40-year lease on a site for a new regional branch office in Fullerton.

President Herbert J. Young said more than an acre at 255 W. Orangethorpe Ave., just west of Harbor Boulevard, will be used for a two-story office and adjacent parking. Work will start on the building in early February.

Business Espionage Is Seminar Topic

A series of three day-long seminars on "Business and Corporate Espionage," will be presented this week, each at a different Southern California location.



Tuesday's seminar will be at the Disneyland Hotel, Wednesday's at the Orange Show grounds in San Bernardino and Thursday's at the Sportsmen's Lodge in North Hollywood.

Sponsored by the Industrial Market Research Associates of Los Angeles, the seminars —a registration fee is charged —are a repetition of a program held in December in Los Angeles.

Occidental Lends to Watson Center

Occidental Life Insurance Company of California has made a 20-year, $800,000 loan to Watson Land Company for a portion of the construction at the Watson Industrial Center, Dominguez area.

The money will be used to finance the building of 62,000 feet of display rooms and sales-service facilities for Cormier Chevrolet Company which has leased 10 acres at the center along the south side of the San Diego Freeway.

MRS. WALTER JOSEPH DESMOND JR.

NUPTIAL MASS

W. J. Desmond Jr., Ann Roberson Wed

St. Anthony's Catholic Church was the setting for an 11 a.m. Nuptial Mass on Saturday uniting in marriage Ann Elizabeth Roberson and Walter Joseph Desmond Jr.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Owen Roberson, 5520 La Pasada St., was escorted by her father and wore a silk faille gown with empire waist and trimmed with Alencon lace. A crown of pearlized orange blossoms held her veil, and she carried spider chrysanthemums and stephanotis.

Her attendants included Mrs. Robert Stang, matron of honor, Marie Plusch, Emily Wiltse, Susan Coombes and Debra Clardy.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Joseph Desmond, 2505 E. First St., are parents of the bridegroom, who chose his brother, Dennis Desmond, as best man.

Seating guests were two other brothers, Timothy and John Desmond, Alan Roberson; brother of the bride; Robert Stang, Raymond Grady and Kinne McCabe.

* * * *

A RECEPTION at the church was followed by a buffet luncheon at the home of the bride's parents for the wedding party. The new Mr. and Mrs. Desmond are honeymooning in Northern California and will live in Los Angeles while he works on his Ph.D. in biochemistry at UCLA.

A graduate of Wilson High School and UCLA, the bride is doing graduate work at Long Beach State College. Also a Wilson High grad, the bridegroom received his degree from University of Notre Dame.

McDannel-Gilmore in rite

In the presence of 400 friends and family members, wedding lines were recited by Susan Lorraine Gilmore and William Wallace McDannell III in a formal evening ceremony Friday in California Heights Methodist Church.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Palmer Gilmore, 1581 Ramillo Ave., was gowned in traditional white satin appliqued with jeweled roses and designed with bell skirt and a cathedral train which fell from her shoulders. Her silk illusion veil was caught to a crown of roses and seed pearls.

Her entourage, wearing moss green velveteen gowns, consisted of Kathleen Gilmore, maid of honor, Mmes. Robert Crosby, Wallace Laux, James Cross, Misses Lizbeth McDannel, Beverly Hoag, Julie Ann Gilmore with Deanne Gilmore as junior bridesmaid.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Jack Gibson Frost, 270 San Remo Drive, and Lt. Col William Wallace McDannel Jr. of Washington, D.C.

Handling best man duties was Robert L. Crosby, and serving as ushers were James Cross, Larry Drake, Roger Frost, Charles Brown, Douglas Schwarz and Jon Gilmore.

* * * *

FOLLOWING a champagne reception at the Pacific Coast Club, the newlyweds left for a honeymoon in San Francisco. They will live in Long Beach on their return.

The couple graduated from Wilson High School and Long Beach City College where she was president of Mahabharata and a member of Kassai. She is a senior at Whittier College and he at Long Beach State College. In 1962 she made her debut at the Assistance League Ball.

MRS. WILLIAM W. McDANNEL III

Stage fare --all free, is listed

Another free community program will be presented Monday night at Long Beach Municipal Auditorium and once again will feature the talented mother - daughter team of Bebe Carpenter and Barbara Gill.

They will present their "Theatrically Yours" variety show, spotlighting performers from age three to senior citizens in songs, dances and skits.

Frank Van Ee will lead community singing to open the program at 7:30 p.m. with Regenia Beam as accompanist.

The Tyo orchestra will play for old time and square dancing which will follow the stage show. Joe Marshall will be caller.

Mattade-Champlin wedding vows to be spoken in July

Engagement of Darlene Fern Mattade, a teacher at Garfield Elementary School, to Thad Loren Champlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Champlin of Los Angeles, is being announced.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Fern Mattade of Long Beach and the late Henry Mattade. She graduated from Poly High School, and both she and her fiance are graduates of Long Beach State College.

The future bridegroom attended Santa Monica City College and is now a student at USC Dental School, and affiliated with Psi Omega dental fraternity.

The wedding date has been set for July 9, 1966.

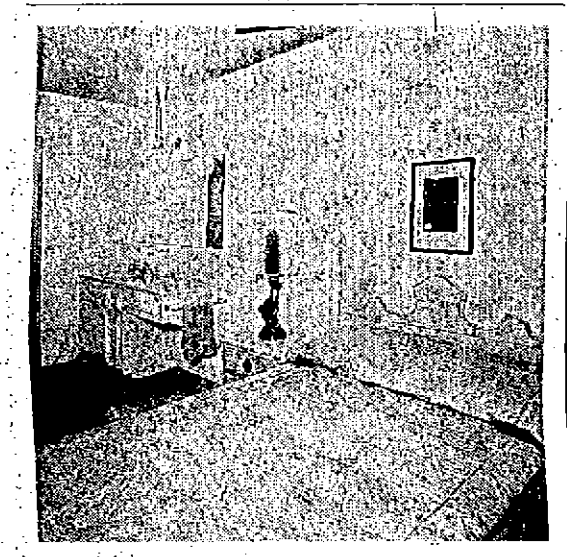
Few Lark Village Homes Remaining

Only a few popular Lark Village Homes in Fountain Valley remain to be sold on new terms and excellent financing of repossessed dwellings at the spacious development, a spokesman announced.



Representing one of Orange County's fine home investments in an area rapidly developing to its potential as a valued Southland location, Lark Village Homes offer a number of money-saving features for the new homeowner.

These include carpeting, fencing and fully equipped kitchens with built-in range, oven, dishwasher and disposal. There are spacious dining areas, extra-large cabinet space, wood paneling and the homes are built on pool-size lots.

LARK VILLAGE Homes are surrounded by freeways, most of which will be ready in the near future. Among the abundance of recreational facilities nearby are beaches, amusement and resort centers, golf courses, and desert and mountain areas within easy driving distances.

Close to both new and established schools and shopping centers, the homes are just minutes from the industrial areas of both Orange and Los Angeles Counties.

Located on Edinger Street east of Brookhurst, Lark Village can be reached from Long Beach by going east on Seventh Street to Brookhurst, then right to Edinger, then left to the homes.

IN PREMIER HOME
Premier Homes in Huntington Beach feature separate dressing-vanity area in master suite, as shown in this model home interior.

Buyer May Occupy New Home at Once

Basic value combined with a large influx of new residents to booming Huntington Beach are mainly responsible for the success of Premier Homes North and South, according to sales agent Frank McFarland.

The realtor said that large-scale transfers of professional people, mainly engineers and scientists, to the Orange Coast area had created a steady demand for new homes with immediate occupancy. Premier offers immediate move-in on its four-bedroom, two-bath plans, which also have a formal dining area, family room and a 17x22 playroom. The playroom is fully finished, with a tile floor and plumbing roughed in for either a wet bar or a third bath.

* * * *

PRICE of the "Premier Special" is $26,500, with 25 and 30-year loans at 5¾% and 6%. The homes feature a "Total Convenience" kitchen.

All Premier homes are sold with a fenced rear yard, with a gate, and with front landscaping included in the purchase price.

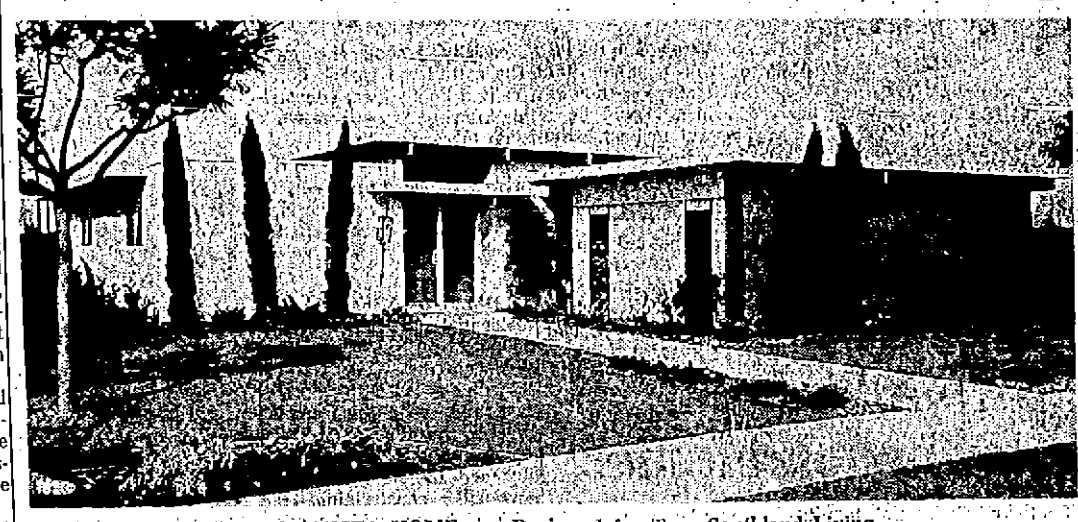
WSA Elects 2 Wilmington Men to Posts

Heads of two Wilmington shipyards have been elected area vice presidents of the Western Shipbuilding Association. They are Louis Fellows, president of Fellows and Stewart Inc., and Carl M. Lippincott, general manager of Todd Shipyards.

The association, meeting last week in San Francisco, took steps to promote the building of a larger, stronger and more effective American Merchant Marine, U.S. Navy and American shipyard complex.

* * * *

"NO WORLD power can remain such without a stronger navy and merchant marine," stressed Robert E. Mayer, San Francisco, president of the association of more than 150 Pacific Coast business firms.



"We mean to use all our energies in this crucial year doing our part in the national program to bring this message to the American people and our Congress," he added.

S. C. Gould Ends Career With Sears

After serving 29 years with Sears, Roebuck and Co., much of the time as store manager, S. C. Gould retired Thursday.

He had managed the Sears-Long Beach from 1952 until in 1959 when he was transferred to manage the Soto Street-Olympic Boulevard store in Los Angeles.

For Indoor or Outdoor Living

A SOL VISTA HOME . . . Designed for True Southland Living

Announces Promotions

Promotions for five employes of Autonetics Division of North American Aviation Inc., Anaheim, were announced by officials last week.

J. A. Brinkman, Woodland Hills, associate director of the aviation science center, was named director of physical sciences.

R. J. Sonners, of Fullerton, was named director of the advanced electronics technology laboratory.

Dr. Arnold Miller, of Fullerton, was appointed assistant to Vice President Cedric O'Donnell.

Leo W. Killen, of Fullerton, was named vice president to direct Autonetics planning and development of new military avionic systems.

Peter A. Kreider, of Brea, was named executive director of Stike Avionic Systems.

Outdoor living as well as indoor living is the preference of buyers of many Sol-Vista homes, says Baxter Caterson, sales manager.

"In Southern California we enjoy the comfortable climate to the fullest, and in Huntington Beach, location of Sol-Vista homes, there are dozens of incentives for outdoor living," he said.

Caterson said outdoor living, as demonstrated by residents of Sol-Vista homes at 16661 Beach Blvd., concerns everything from color to the barbecue pit.

"IT IS OBVIOUS," he said, "that design plays a major role in creating homes for outdoor enthusiasts. The latest in design concepts and ideas have to be given to Sol-Vista homes."

Sol-Vista homes are reached from the Santa Ana Freeway, Garden Grove Freeway or San Diego Freeway via Beach Boulevard to Huntington Beach.

Priced from $29,550, the homes have three, four and five bedrooms.

West'ghouse Buys KFWB

NEW YORK—Crowell-Collier Broadcasting Corporation has sold KFWB, Los Angeles radio station, to Westinghouse Broadcasting Company for $10,750,000 after adjustments for cash and accounts receivable which are not being transferred.

Announcement of the transaction was made jointly by Raymond C. Hagel, chairman of Crowell-Collier and MacMillan, Inc., Joseph C. Drilling, president of Crowell-Collier Broadcasting, and Donald H. McGannon, president and chairman of the board of Westinghouse Broadcasting Company.

McGannon said an application for the assignment of a license will be filed with the FCC in the near future. The sale is subject to approval of the FCC.

AFTER DRIVE WITH EXAMINER, SCORES (WHETHER YOU PASS OR FAIL) ARE EXPLAINED ...Martha Lee Croxen, applicant, and Frank Perry, examiner

TRY THE STARTER

Don't push panic button

By BETTY WENTWORTH

Since this is the time of year when throngs descend on the State Department of Motor Vehicles (your license must be renewed before Feb. 1, remember, or you're in for a penalty), we decided to hurry over and see what was going on at the Long Beach office at 2627 Pacific Ave.

There were lots of people milling around but things seemed to be moving at a good orderly clip. We met Howard R. Link, manager of the local office, one of the largest in the state.

He told us that last year—between Jan. 1 through October 31 — 10,629,227 vehicles were registered in California, including autos, trucks, trailers and motorcycles.

One-third of the total, he said, are in Los Angeles and Orange counties!

THESE ARE the vehicles that speed, crawl, joy-ride, meander, commute and generally clog our travel arterics.

And responsible for each one is a driver.

As of October there were 9,763,021 licensed drivers in the state—almost one per car registered.

We turned our attention to some of these self-same drivers who were queued up in front of us getting their licenses, new or renewals:

They were a real cross-section. Young, old, men, women, teenagers, homely, pretty—and four out of every five would walk out with permission to join the traffic stream.

YOU'RE WONDERING nervously about that fifth person who doesn't get his license? Mr. Link told us about him.

In October, out of 22% or 76,295 who failed, it breaks down this way: written test, 37,775; actual driving, 30,370; oral (some applicants who can't read may still demonstrate their ability to understand signs), 1,969; vision, 6,181.

Why did they fail?

If you haven't been tested lately, we'll refresh your mind. First you're given the written part—and if you haven't studied the vehicle code, you MAY be in trouble.

If you pass it and your vision test, you're turned over to a driving examiner with whom you'll go on a 20-minute spin.

You may as well confess that the prospect of said jaunt produces an immediate, strong and adverse reaction. Damp palms, maybe? Sudden recall of urgent business elsewhere, such as pasting in that backlog of blue chip stamps? Buck up and read on, please.

"ON THAT DRIVE practically everyone's nervous," said Frank Perry, the examiner we talked to. "It ranges from mild apprehension to outright panic. So the first thing we're trained to do is attempt to put the driver more at ease, so he'll be relaxed and give his best performance."

WRITTEN TEST REQUIRES CONCENTRATION ...Mrs. Rhea S. Wood

What causes applicants the most trouble? Perry said there are three main areas:

- First is the blind intersection with restricted visibility. The driver tends to approach it too fast (speed limit here is 15 mph); everything else is then out of sequence. The foot should be resting lightly on the brake, and the driver must look first right, then left.
- Second hazard, according to Perry, is unsafe lane changing. The driver must signal for 100 feet with hand or indicator, and should LOOK back, not just into rear view mirror.
- Third, offset backing—the public calls it parallel parking—is the most disturbing to the driver, being a skill maneuver, but not as dangerous done improperly as, say, failure to observe a signal, or speeding, and therefore doesn't take off as many points.

Other traps he mentioned: driving with one hand resting on window frame (if you don't have both hands on wheel when the unexpected happens you won't be as mobile), and not coming to a full stop at a signal (don't let your car inch forward).

YOU ARE REQUIRED to get 70 out of a 100 points to pass. And your highly experienced examiner IS watching like the trained hawk he is. He knows the far-reaching results of his job.

In his driver's manual it says, "Yours is a job of tremendous responsibility because the person you examine, in a sense, places his life in your hands; a responsibility because the lives of other highway users may be endangered by the action of the driver you examine.

"You are battling one of America's greatest social problems, that of traffic accidents. You are the one who can make sure that drivers who apply for a license possess the necessary knowledge, skill and physical ability to drive safely."

Resounding phrases, but they're deadly serious. Every applicant has the same driving test, and each of us should want a test that tells whether we're driving properly. You may take the results of your test to check through.

We know. You said it wasn't your idea to take a test in the first place. In fact, there was that urgent business of bringing your Christmas card list up-to-date, or whatever.

We've dwelt on some sobering facts, but they won't hurt—they're meant to help us not to be hurt.

Most of us drive constantly and will continue to do so.

Car manufacturers are aiding us with their increasing emphasis on safety features.

So, heads up! Go on in and take that test.

JAMES A. WORSHAM

Professionally he believes (and for good reason) that one should insure against the future. He's from the "show me" state, too, and an avid traveler . . . also for good reason. Today's Chef of the Week, James A. Worsham, is president of both Worsham & Associates, Insurance, and Worsham & Associates Travel Bureau.

Though he was born in Illinois, he spent most of his life in St. Louis, Mo. He graduated from Richmond Heights High School and attended Jefferson College and Washington University, where he majored in commerce and finance.

It was 26 years ago that he started an insurance business in St. Louis. In 1949 he came to California for vacation, liked what he saw—returned to Missouri—sold out—returned to Long Beach and Worsham was again in the insurance business.

HE AND HIS BRIDE of a year, the former Pauline Dilday, both expert students of history and geography, have just recently returned from a nine week tour in which they back-tracked to the Orient three times, Africa twice, and Australia once.

When the family gathers for special occasions, there are nine younguns ranging in ages from 24 to 11. They add up to seven boys and two girls. The girls, by the way, share the same birthdates in different years. They represent the University of California, Berkeley, California State College, Long Beach, Poly High and several grammar schools.

A MEMBER of the Armed Forces Committee of the Chamber of Commerce and the Boy Scouts Committee, Worsham is active in the Uptown Optimist Club, Scottish Rite and El Bekal Shrine. A founder member, he has ridden with Long Beach Mounted Police since 1950.

As a family the Worshams enjoy membership in the Long Beach Yacht Club and spend much time aboard their cabin cruiser, "The Foray."

His recipe today for Lamb Rice Turnovers is straight from Jordan.

LAMB-RICE TURNOVERS

- ½ cup salad oil
- 2 lbs. cubed lean lamb
- 2 large onions, sliced
- 1 head cauliflower, sliced
- 1½ tblsp. salt
- 1½ tsp. allspice, ground
- 2 cups rice (uncooked)
- 1 green pepper, sliced (optional)

Pan-brown lamb in oil in large kettle. Saute onions and cauliflower in oil and add to lamb. Add 1 quart AND 1 cup BOILING water, salt, and allspice. Heat until water boils again. Add rice slowly so all of rice is covered by water. Boil 5 minutes. Cover, reduce heat and simmer about 20 minutes, or until rice is tender and all water absorbed. Turn over onto a large, hot platter, so that lamb is on top of mound of rice. Garnish with strips of green pepper or cooked frozen peas if desired. Serve as a main dish. Serves 4-6.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD

False front wearing thin

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

Our friends think I'm a "very lucky woman." My husband is charming and everyone (men and women) thinks he's a wonderful man. I'm horribly tired of keeping up this front. I am far from lucky; I'm perfectly miserable.

My husband of many years tells me that our children are not "his." He doesn't openly accuse me because he "won't have people feeling sorry for him," but he KNOWS (says he) our three children were not sired by him.

I've always been a good wife and mother. I never ran around and there is no possible reason for him to doubt my loyalty.

How does a wife handle a thing like this? Keep up the front? Leave him and have everyone think "she's too stupid to know when she has a good (?) thing?"—BEWILDERED.

DEAR BEWILDERED:

It depends on what is best for you and the children and how much you can take. There are many families that appear ideal from the outside but are rotten on the inside. However, when a wife leaves a husband, there is always some question in people's minds about the man — and, many times, more people know the truth than you think.

It's still true that "you can fool some of the people most of the time but not all the people all the time."

You do whatever you think best for you and your children.—M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I met and fell in love with a wonderful guy. My problem is that he is 40 and I'm just 24. Friends say I would be making a mistake to marry him but I love him so much I am just not alive when we're apart. Some think it is a "father image" but that isn't true. I really love the guy.

Is age that important? Will our love fade when we are older? Will I resent the fact that I am still young when he is no longer the "fun loving" person he is now?

I would appreciate some help in this because I am going to have to make the Big Decision soon. Your thoughts and those of your readers will be most welcome.—IN LOVE.

DEAR IN LOVE:

No one can accurately predict just how much an age difference will affect a marriage. It depends on the individuals involved. The only thing I can tell you is that you are taking a bigger chance than you would be if you were about the same age.

When the bloom has worn off (and it always does!) and you've been married 10 or 15 years, the age difference will show up much more. He will be ready for the fireside long before you are but, I repeat, it all depends on the people involved.

Maybe some of our readers can give you first hand experience and advice. — M.M.

Altar society installation slated Tuesday

Tuesday is the date selected by Holy Innocent's Catholic Church Altar Society for its annual luncheon and installation.

Taking office during the noon event in the parish hall will be Mmes. Robert Langdon, president; Louis Mansfield, secretary; and Bernice Larkin, treasurer.

The Rev. J. J. O'Brien will conduct the installation. All past presidents have been invited.

With yachting boom at peak, whole new way of life at sea opens up for skipper's mate.

Lady sailors are no longer 'galley slaves

MRS. STAN WILSON AT SPACIOUS BREAKFAST BAR ABOARD POSH YACHT, CONTESSA

By Iola Masterson I.P-T Society Editor

What do you envision when you think of a yacht? A huge, haughty vessel, anchored aloof in some romantic cove?

Well, revise your thinking. Yachts come in all sizes. One very apt definition is, "Any private pleasure craft with living accommodations."

It's true that most skippers of small craft feel pretty silly referring to their boats as yachts.

With luxurious appointments previously found only on large yachts now being used lavishly on their smaller sisters of the sea, the term yacht can be tossed off by owners with nonchalance.

And luxury has really hit the small craft industry with the smash of a crashing wave.

A visit to the recent power boat section of the boat show here, or to any number of cruisers in this area, would prove it to anyone.

AND IT IS the lady sailors' influence that has brought about the dramatic transition. A woman who used to go boating with her husband was truly a galley slave.

But look at the new galleys (that means kitchen in sailor's lingo) in which she whips up meals with as many conveniences as at home. Now galleys, almost invariably placed in a light, airy section of the boat, feature electric stoves complete with ovens, rotisseries and broilers, ventilation hoods and fans, hot and cold pressure water systems for sink and showers, full-size electric refrigerators with big freezer tops.

Electric dishwashers are not uncommon, nor are clothes washer-dryer combinations on craft large enough to handle them.

Betty and Stan Wilson's luxurious 56-foot yacht, Contessa, though larger than most of the boats we refer to, offers many prime examples of conveniences and beauty used in cruisers of various sizes.

It has dishwasher ("the last thing I'd give up," says Betty), washer-dryer, all electric galley—just name it and Contessa probably has it. The Wilsons now are considering putting in a water-maker plant to change salt water into useable fresh water.

Even electric disposals are now frequently being installed. However, the drawback here is that they cannot be used in many marinas and harbors due to rules guarding pollution of bays.

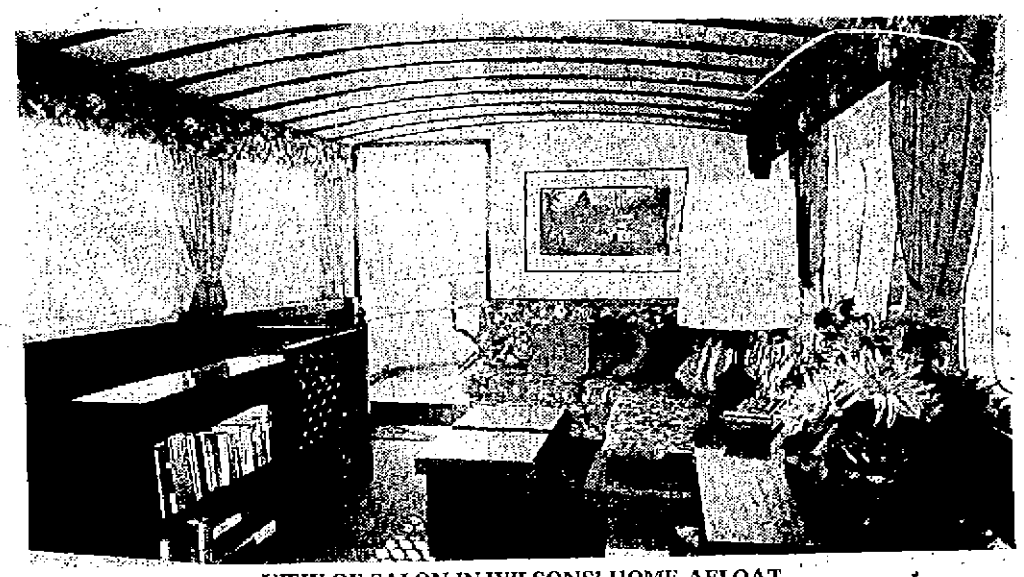
SAID AREND LIND, designer of the Cedros Island (shown at boat show): "The next boat I design will have a dishwasher—large enough to handle a service for four."

The craft he has in mind: a 46-footer that will carry 260 gallons of water for ample supply.

"There is a special dishwasher which circulates water for most efficiency—specifically designed for boats and mobile homes."

He said, too, that he thinks they will be one of the biggest drawing cards in the sale of new boats.

Boat designers have an ear to the deck for what women want in more ways than cooking. Living areas are growing more and more sophisticated with decorator colors, fancy upholstery, drapes and luxurious carpeting.



FOR INSTANCE, the Wilson's yacht moored in front of their home on Corsi di Napoli, has super comfortable divans covered in dramatic orange and yellow floral print with color coordinated plush carpeting in rust, orange and gold tweed. The interior is paneled in warm walnut; matching marble-topped coffee table, chests and end tables dot the salon.

A pass-through breakfast bar from galley to salon makes entertaining aboard a pleasure for guests and first mate.

For those who don't want the fuss of standard

Niska wins new laurels with Met

'MADAME BUTTERFLY' SCENE
Maralin Niska (the former Maralin Dice) in title role, center

By ELISE EMERY

Money.
Influence.
Europe.

Well-meaning friends told Maralin Niska that these are the three essentials for a singer aspiring to opera.

"Not so!" the San Pedro native, turned opera diva, contradicts cheerfully.

In a telephone interview from Tallahassee, Fla., where she appeared this week with the Metropolitan Opera National Company, the slender, dark-haired, dark-eyed soprano spoke of her career.

"I have had better training in Los Angeles than I could have had in Europe. I'm a grass roots product. My parents weren't rich. I didn't have an organization or wealthy individual to subsidize me.

"Money, of course, is staying power, time to study, to polish, to practice.

"My advice to young singers is this:

"Don't be discouraged—success will come if you have talent and the will to use it. Refuse to be satisfied with where you are; prove to yourself daily that you are worthy and you'll find you can do things you never dreamed you could."

SOME GO FOR HEALTH, OR TO RETIRE

Japanese-inspired retirement home on St. Croix, U. S. Virgin Islands.

Virgin Islands of U.S. boom as tourist spot

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

Christopher Columbus, bearing a southwest course through the Caribbean on his second voyage to America in 1493, unexpectedly sighted a group of uncommonly beautiful islands. As soft trade winds caressed the lush, tropical growth that stretched inland from the glistening white beaches, he was struck by the primeval, untouched scene before him.

He named them the Virgin Islands.

Last year, the half million tourists who visited the U. S. Virgin Islands discovered that the explorer knew beauty when he saw it. A still larger number is expected this year, the most on a vacation, others to take up a prolonged residence, or retire.

Many of the visitors come from California. To get there, they generally fly from New Orleans or Miami to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and hop an interisland plane for the last 50 miles due east to Charlotte Amalie (a-MAL-ya), the lovely capital tucked away behind a spectacular harbor on St. Thomas, one of about 30 islands, islets and cays in the U. S. Virgins (the British Virgin Islands lie directly east of the American group).

* * * *

VACATIONISTS from the eastern states often arrive on cruise ships. Before the winter season is over, 182 tourist vessels will drop anchor at Charlotte Amalie, another 31 at the nearby island of St. Croix, thereby adding to the U. S. Virgin Islands' claim as the "cruise capital of the Caribbean."

Because the islands are a U. S. possession, there is no annoying red tape on arrivals and departures.

"Once here," Gov. Ralph M.Paiewonsky points out, "they discover a wealth of natural advantages to keep them happy and relaxed. Our guaranteed weather, sunny skies, balmy breezes, famous white sand beaches with clear blue water, free port shopping and old world charm are a dependable part of our tourist-endorsed reputation."

Temperatures range from 70 to 90 degrees the year around, softened by trade winds. Humidity is low. Hurricanes are a rarety. Such a climate is conducive to golf and other sports activities at their finest. The passages between the islands are famous for sports fishing.

* * * *

SHOPS on the three principal islands, St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John, are the only ones in the world outside of American Samoa and Guam where Americans may still buy up to $200 retail value in merchandise and a gallon of liquor—duty free. From other overseas ports U. S. residents are allowed but $100 in such purchases and a fifth of a gallon of liquor.

In growing up from its former "Danish storehouse of the Caribbean" days (the U. S. purchased the islands from Denmark in 1917), St. Thomas has turned old warehouses with three-foot-thick stone walls into a delightful maze of walkways lined with colorful shops containing the finest merchandise from all parts of the world.

Prices are low. For instance, an ounce bottle of Chanel No. 5 perfume costs $12.55; a place setting of Royal Copenhagen china, $10; an Omega Seamaster watch, $61; a Nikon F. Photomic camera, $263. A fifth of Virgin Islands rum costs $1.25; Chevas Regal scotch, $4.75; Beefeater gin, $1.85; and so on. You must carry your liquor home; you cannot send it.

* * * *

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, with about 18,000 inhabitants, is the largest town. Christiansted and Frederiksted, Danish colonial in atmosphere, are on St. Croix. Two-thirds of the third main island, St. John, belongs to the Virgin Islands National Park. With camping facilities, it offers much for outdoor lovers.

About 85% of the U. S. Virgin Islands population is Negro.

* * * *

WHAT ABOUT retirement here?

Says Sally Cramer, deputy commissioner of the Virgin Islands Department of Commerce: "Our best advice to Californians is to take a preliminary exploratory trip before becoming uprooted. St. Croix, or any of the Virgin Islands, is not everyone's cup of tea and it can be an expensive mistake because of the distance involved."

In general, she points out, living costs run 15% higher than Washington. Food is higher because all food is imported. Depending upon location, monthly rentals run from $150 up on rooms or small apartments, $275 to $600 for homes. Land costs run from $2,000 an acre to $25,000, also depending on location. Several housing projects are being built.

Electricity and taxes are low. Water shortage is a threat; most islanders catch rainwater in cisterns which serves until spring. Then, if there are three months without rain, like last year, they buy local well water and watch their plants fade.

* * * *

HORSEBACK riding and roller skating are minor sports, but golf will become a major one after February with the opening of Rockefeller's 18-hole course being completed in Frederiksted. Four community concerts are given during the year in Frederiksted, and there is an active theater group. There are good schools. Movies change four times a week at the one theater. TV comes from St. Thomas and Puerto Rico.

But many do come to get away from rigorous winters or for health reasons. St. Croix is declared to be a great spot for people with arthritis and bursitis.

Others, says Miss Cramer, come to get away from hectic lives in the states. All get caught up in some way with the community life, either through local investments, civic groups, or social activities.

"And a few," she points out, "come to retire which, according to Webster, is 'to withdraw; retreat; recede from active life.' "

Bonefishing big sport in U.S. Virgins

ST. JOHN, U.S. Virgin Islands—Bonefishing, a word to make light-tackle fishermen salivate, is just now coming into its own here.

"The fightingest fish, pound-for-pound, on light tackle in the world" has been long known in the transparent waters of the shallow banks and flat surrounding St. John, St. Thomas, and St. Croix, as well as Virgin Gorda in the British Virgin Islands, but like the long neglected deep-sea fishing potential of these waters, inshore fishing here has not received the attention it merited due to the lack of expert guides and experience.

Now one of the best in the business, Capt. A. T. Horne, is not only exploring all of the potential areas and taking out parties himself but he is training natives of these islands to become qualified guides. This is developing new employment here and a new lure for vacationers to these islands in every month of the year. Horne was brought down here early last year.

* * * *

VIRTUALLY the same thing happened in tapping the great billfishing potential here. Capt. Johnny Harms was brought down from the Florida sportsfishing world in 1963 together with two sleek big game fishing cruisers by Caneel Bay Plantation through contributions of Laurence S. Rockefeller to give the islands another resource. It wasn't long before a 814-pound blue marlin was hauled in by John Battles aboard Harms' boat establishing a new world's record and turning promise to fact for big game fishing in the Virgin Islands.

Bonefishing and tarpon fishing is good "365 days a year in the Virgin Islands," Capt. Horne says. However, he candidly notes that October, November and December are "slack months" because the water on the flats is deeper then. Low tide is ideal for bonefishing.

And Horne explains that any fisherman who has never seen one of these quietly-moving battlers stand on its tail has no idea of the excitement waiting him. A bonefish, minding his own business and not bothering anyone, is galvanized into pure fury when he discovers someone is trying to fool him at snack time.

Knife-&-fork city

Seven miles south of the Russian River, in western Sonoma County, sits the tiny hamlet of Occidental, famed as a center of Italian cooking on the grand scale.

Legal service

The first legal advice service for English-speaking tourists in a foreign country has been established in Mexico City, the Mexican National Tourist Council reports, to assist visitors who may have problems with local laws.

February is festival month in Southland

Tourists who spend a billion dollars a year in the Southland, and local gadders who like such things, will find February a month of unusual and colorful festivals, according to the calendar issued by the All-Year Club last week.

There will be an art colony festival, date festival, carrot carnival, and a gold rush celebration called Whiskey Flat Days. The All-Year Club, community tourist promotion organization, uses the colorful events to attract visitor revenues.

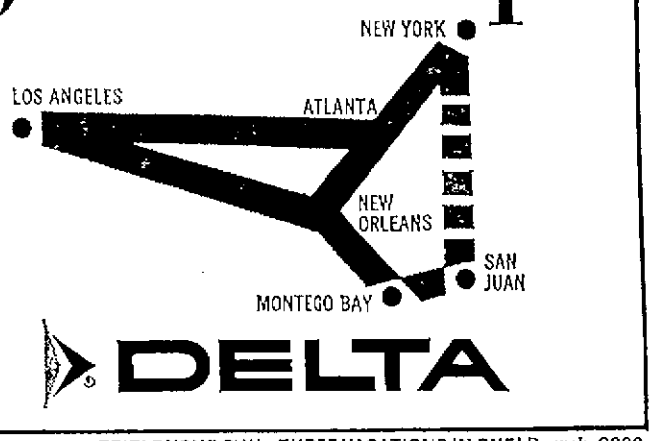
Laguna Beach holds its annual Winter Festival, Feb. 11-20, ten days of drama, sidewalk art shows, sand sculpturing, art carnival, arts and crafts auction, daily surf fishing derby, lawn bowling, cricket, an Indian parade and Indian arts and crafts exhibit, and a backstage tour of the famous Pageant of the Masters.

* * * *

DAILY camel and ostrich races are a hilarious feature of the National Date Festival to be held Feb. 18-27 at Indio, heart of the "Arabia of America" date-growing region.

Youngsters will fashion their own 4 by 6-foot Camellia decorated floats and propel them in a parade at 10 a.m. Feb. 26 during the 22nd annual Camellia Festival at Temple City, camellia nursery center. There will be a Camellia king, queen, two princesses and two princes —all of them first graders.

The annual Camellia Show will be held Feb. 26 and 27 at the world's biggest camellia planting—100,000 bushes and trees in peak bloom—at Descanso Gardens in La Canada, supplemented by thousands of choice cut flowers.



CARROTS will be tossed to spectators watching the parade during the Carrot Carnival at Holtville, the "World Carrot Capital," Feb. 16-20.

Also in Imperial Valley, Niland will hold its Tomato Festival Friday through next Sunday, and the California Mid-Winter Fair will be held at the county fairgrounds at the town of Imperial Feb. 25 to March 6.

Kernville, beside Lake Isabella, will hold Whiskey Flat Days, Feb. 17-20, to celebrate its gold rush period when a whiskey merchant set up a bar on a plank atop two barrels.

WILD WAVES SAY

He hurried--slowly

By Iola Masterson
I, P-T Society Editor

"CELEBRATING their 25th wedding anniversaries at Coco Palms Hotel on the island of Kauai in Hawaii were . . ." So began a caption which accompanied the sunshiny photo on this page. It concerned Buck and Margaret Arnold, 2279 Albury Ave., Ray and Jane Powell, Garden Grove, and Madden and Gene Dietrich, Tustin, was received this week.

The information went on to state that all three couples were classmates at Wilson High, were married within six weeks of each other and ever since have always vacationed together as well as socialized as best friends the year round.

It's the kind of happy picture, happy story with an unusual twist we like. So we called to find out when they would be home. Who answered but returnee Margaret, herself. All the facts, she said, were true, but weren't we a little late in using it, she puzzled.

Ah, the leisurely pace of Hawaii! Time and deadlines? Who cares! The reporter-public relations man made that picture Oct. 17 . . . our anniversary couples returned here Oct. 26. In years of checking out PR stories this one really takes the cake for being latest ever.

AND THEN there's the case of the Edison Company "Carefree Living" diploma edged in black. Melba Fickling, a graduate in how to cook and make the most of electricity in the Edison course, put a stew on to simmer on the timer controlled burner of her fancy electric stove, then went shopping.

It malfunctioned (she didn't!) and when husband, Dorian came home for what was to have been a ready to eat hot luncheon he found the house choking full of dense white smoke. The timer that didn't time let the burner get so hot it melted the bottom of the pan completely and the meat and metal just burned on merrily together.

In addition to actual smoke damage the worst part about it was the odor. The Ficklings got a clean-up and deodorizing outfit from Los Angeles to come to their rescue. They brought a kind of cannon which shot a substance into each room to sop up smokey smells. Old hands at this kind of service, they assured Melba she was lucky. Severely burned chicken is at top of the "phew!" ratings with pork second, beef third.

FACTS SURROUNDING Sherry Beebe's approaching marriage are so romantic they have a story book lilt. She flies to New Zealand Feb. 5 to marry Philip Wells, the date still to be selected but probably early in March.

Philip, whom Sherry met while both were vacationing in Honolulu, manages his family's huge ranch land holdings which rims beautiful Mercury Bay. It is 125 miles from Auckland—very near the town of Whitianga. They raise heaven only knows how many head of cattle and sheep, also grow 73 types of fruit commercially.

Sherry leaves early to stay with his parents in the big home to get acquainted with, and be feted by, the many Wells relatives. Her parents, Dr. Ed and Joan Beebe, will fly over mid-February to be present for the ceremony. For the honeymoon the newlyweds will cruise New Zealand's coast in the family yacht.

Wedding bells are certainly breaking up that old gang of girl friends—Sherry, Kathy Osborne and Kristen Buck, who have been closer than grapes in a bunch since kindergarten days. Kathy became bride of Doug Trout Saturday—will move to Tulsa, Okla., and Kristen will marry John White March 12 and move to Chicago.

BIG TO-DO, and fancy too, when Bill Hardcastle was installed as commodore of new Huntington Harbour Yacht Club during dinner at Sheraton Beach Inn. With becoming modesty, Bill accepted his post with the remark, "I'm the best commodore this club has ever had." He is, too. He's the first one. Caroline and Bill entertained for several incoming officers, wives and friends at pre-dinner cocktail party in their home.

Among merry sailors enjoying a landlubber evening were LBYC Staff Commodore Bob Pierce, wife, Marge (he was installing officer), Les and Mary Alice Dahl, George and Juanita Heinrich. Also new officers and board members of HHYC Bob and Vivian Hoffman, Bayard and Jane Dod (he's vice commodore of new club), Bob and Millie Helfer, Don and Rosemary Leedom and Herb and Ida Deuhler.

HHYC has 85 charter members, will be limited to 100, at least for the present.

PRIMARILY they went to Las Vegas to see the Frank Sinatra show at the Sands. "They" meaning Dr. Jim and Mary Thompson, Burt and Norma Marter, Dr. Ed and Ann Beaubier, Jim and Joan Johnson, Dr. Russ and Maxine Spears and Dr. Richard and Nancy Daniels. Fortunately they loved the show and had a great lot of fun in general because no one, but no one, was making like break the bank—it was more like feed the kitty.

This being the Daniels first trip to the green felt jungle, Dick bought a book, "How to Break the Odds." With shrewd feminine logic Nancy aired opinion that they'd be lucky if their winnings covered simply cost of book.

AMONG THE world's most dedicated sport fishing enthusiasts are Art and Martha Hall. Art, who holds world records, and Martha just returned from a great three weeks of fishing, naturally.

First they went to the Masters Tournament at Palm Beach, Fla. Art didn't win this one but he wasn't too far down the line of runners-up. Then they flew to Pinas Bay, Panama, with a group of fishing friends to try for prized black marlin. The day before they arrived there a 740 pound one had been caught.

Sure Art caught one, a big one, but knowledgeable in the ways of the big ones, he released it; knowing it was no record breaker. Pinas Bay, Martha said, is a fabulous place with simply great accommodations. In fact, downright elegant.

COUPLES REPEAT VOWS

Weekend ceremonies unite couples

MRS. EDWARD F. TODD

Todd-Ball

In a quiet ceremony in the presence of members of their immediate families Friday in California Heights Methodist Church, Lynn Louise Ball and Edward F. Todd repeated their wedding vows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted H. Ball of Hollywood and the bridegroom the son of Dr. and Mrs. Floyd H. Todd of 1160 Bryant Road.

Dr. and Mrs. Todd have invited friends to a buffet supper next Sunday to introduce the young couple.

Attendants were Mrs. Todd Hanna, sister of the bridegroom, and Edward Miller, best man. The bridal gown was a white sheath with bell sleeves trimmed with bugle beads which also edged the hemline.

THE BRIDEGROOM is an alumnus of Polytechnic High School and USC School of Business where he was affiliated with Sigma Phi Epsilon. His bride attended USC and was an Alpha Delta Pi.

MRS. M. G. WILLIAMS

Williams-Talbot

Enroute to San Francisco on a honeymoon trip are Mr. and Mrs. Michael G. Williams (Bonnie Jean Talbot) who exchanged wedding vows Saturday before 150 guests in St. Maria Goretti Church.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Talbot, 3807 Snowden Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis J. Williams, 4859 Coldbrook Ave.

The bride wore a gown of Chantilly lace with a crystal and pearl crown holding her veil. Attending her was her sister, Bari-Jill Talbot.

The bridegroom was served by Lynn Williams, a brother, as best man and Don and Jim Williams.

A RECEPTION at El Dorado Park clubhouse preceded the couple's departure on their honeymoon trip. They will reside in Long Beach.

Both young persons were graduated from Lakewood High and attended Long Beach City College. Mrs. Williams will complete her studies in dental assisting at LBCC in June.

Antique in the bath

An antique low dresser can be made into an unusual and serviceable bathroom fixture. Properly cut, it can be fitted around the lavatory sink. With its top surfaced with durable ceramic tile, it becomes a waterproof counter with already built-in storage space below. Antique-looking faucets and spout will add even more interest.

Alamitos Library Association to mark founding

Members of the Alamitos Library Association will mark the group's 71st Founder's Day at its February meeting Wednesday.

A musical program by Mrs. Elmer Longfellow accompanied by Mrs. Rex Bottomley will highlight the 12:30 p.m. luncheon program.

The original library was constructed by the association in 1897, was in service until the City of Long Beach built a new library in 1929.

Hostesses will be Mrs. J. W. Good and Mrs. Merritt D. Walrod.

'MAKE IT SEVEN AND I'M IN HEAVEN'

London becomes Europe's biggest gambling center

A good many visitors land at London Airport these days resolved to carry home more money than they had when they arrived!

For London, in 1965, was the biggest gambling center in Europe.

In February, 1963, the British Parliament passed into law the Betting, Lotteries and Gaming Act. Its intention was to rationalize and regularize gambling in Britain and to modernize a multitude of old laws.

Its effect, however, was to spark off the biggest gambling boom seen by Europe in a centry. The new law laid down that gambling could take place where the odds favored all players equally.

Thus, at the host of gambling clubs which mushroomed, the cry was heard at the start of each game, "Messieurs, qui veut la banque?" In effect, who would like to take the bank? If a player can afford it, he is offered the chance of taking the bank in games where it has a better chance of winning than the players.

In such games where the house has no part in the proceedings and the guests play each other, the gambling clubs make a charge—and here again they score over their rivals on the Continent.

* * * *

IN LONDON it is the practice to make a charge on each player at the start of every game. On the Continent a percentage is taken of a player's winnings. London gambling clubs thereby encourage bigger betting to make better use of the player wins on the Continent the more he must pay the house as his fee.

The range of games offered for the visitor's delectation is immense. Chemin-de-fer, roulette, blackjack, craps, boule, poker, baccarat, bridge, backgammon—the lot, it seems. Experts estimate that with the exception of bridge and blackjack, the odds in favor of the unitiated winning money are about the same at pretty well every game.

A large number of clubs are hunting for the gambler's business in London today, and they dangle a sparkling variety of inducements in front of his eyes.

* * * *

DURING ONE cut-throat spell of competition, a top club was offering a Rolls Royce as a prize to the gambler with the biggest succession of winning coups. Another offered sumptious banquets, free.

The biggest gambling centers provide free drinks, and at remarkably low prices serve some of the choicest food to be found in London. Others give free parking, serve free snacks, have supper dancing or tempt the visitor by suggesting that theirs is the club used by the stars.

Most clubs offer special membership arrangements to overseas visitors who carry their passports as proof, according to British Overseas Airways Corporation travel advisors.

Monarch of the gambling scene is undoubtedly Crockford's, a world-renowned club situated in elegant

TRAVEL and RESORTS

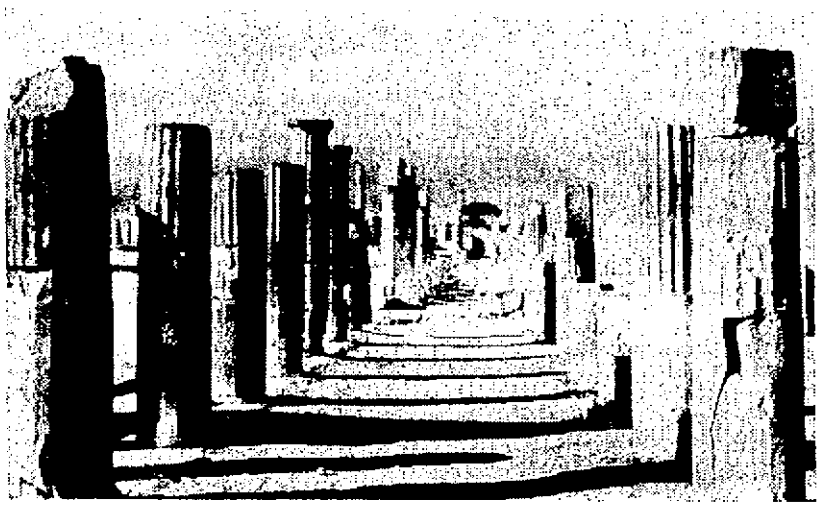
Carlton House Terrace and a near neighbor of the British Foreign Secretary's official residence. Gambling has been Crockford's forte for more than 100 years, but up until 1963 it was strictly between the wealthy members and was confined to permitted games such as bridge, or scatterbrained bets on anything from pugilists to pennyfarthing bicycles.

* * * *

FOR THE SLIGHTLY less earnest gambler, many of the night clubs offer a roulette wheel or two, with perhaps a $5.60 limit on bets, designed to amuse rather than abuse the wallet. Many of them offer a 25 cent minimum stake. Noteworthy among these are the Cromwellian Club, Cromwell Road, which has a complete gaming room, with limits on all its tables of about $5.60 or $8.40; and the Blue Angel, Berkeley Street, where a couple of roulette tables offer a rest from drinking, dancing and the first-rate cabaret.

Both these clubs have limits on the stakes, and each offers some of the most reasonably priced food to be found in any London night spot.

The same Gaming Act which made gambling also permits betting shops. These have sprouted in every main street and allow the horse fancier to put his money on a nag with efficiency and without looking over his shoulder for a blue-helmeted policeman.



ON THE EDGE OF SUCCESS? That little white ball has a will of its own as it skips around the whirring face of a London roulette wheel. (BOAC photo.)

BINGO is all the rage in Britain's provincial towns. Former cinema and dance halls now sport giant signs enticing players, and queues form outside eraly in the day. The stakes may be somewhat lower than a gambler is used to, but the enthusiasm of the players is a lot more evident.

Also, inevitably, one-armed bandits can be found in clubs throughout the country.

What about the sort of player who likes to gamble, but who hates to lose his money? There is an answer for him too. It's the British Government's unique contribution to the gambling rush, Premium Bonds. Regular players stand to win prizes up to $14,000; and any time they feel like it, they can just pick up their chips and walk away!

The many faces of Italy

POMPEII, the city where time came to a halt in 79 A. D. as Vesuvius exploded in a gigantic eruption. Today the tourist can wander through these ruins. (BOAC photo.)

Italy has probably more faces than any other country in Europe. They include those of the Roman Empire and the Renaissance . . . those of Grand Opera, industry and fashion . . . and those of sun, lakes and mountains.

The capital of these many Italies, Rome, is just two hours from London by British Overseas Airways Corp. jetliner. Bathed in its famous rosy golden light Rome is both stylish and rich . . . and THE Eternal City. Throw a coin into the famous Fountain of Trevi and, legend has it, you will certainly return one day.

The Vatican, the fount of Roman Catholicism, is a city within a city. The Pope appears on his balcony at St. Peter's Square every Sunday and Wednesday at noon (except at the height of summer when he resides at Castelgandolfo, south of Rome).

Italy's loveliest city is without a doubt Florence, a jewel of the Renaissance, set in the Tuscan hills. And the most romantic is certainly Venice, with streets of water spanned by delicate bridges.

TO THE SOUTH, sun-washed Naples is within easy reach of the volcano, Vesuvius, and the city of Pompeii which it ruined. To the north, Milan is worth visiting for its beautiful "wedding cake" cathedral as well as La Scala, its incomparable opera house.

The Italian economy is closely geared to the tourist industry and, as a result, English is widely spoken. The climate is clear and sunny, and Rome has an average temperature of 75 degrees.

The country's staple food is pasta with a basis of flour and water in various forms, such as spaghetti, ravioli, tagliatelli, lasagna, pastaciutta. There is plenty of fresh fruit. Italian ice cream is superb — probably the world's best.

* * * *

ITALY has a tremendous variety of wines — among them the incomparable Frascati which is best drunk in Frascati, a small town about 12 miles from Rome, because it doesn't travel well.

Shopping is a pleasure all over Italy, and Rome is one of the world's foremost fashion centers. There are many expert tailors, dressmakers, shoemakers and knitters, who work quickly and at reasonable prices. Outstanding buys are couture clothes, silk shirts and ties, gloves and suits, and knit sweaters and suits.

Few countries are as attractive as Italy — and few hosts so gay, gallant and charming as the Italians.

Try your luck at gold panning

Some 100 years ago, Wickenburg, northwest of the all-year resort of Phoenix in the Valley of the Sun, was a thriving gold town. Today it's a thriving dude ranch locale that hasn't forgotten its colorful past.

That means the annual Gold Rush Days, slated Feb. 11-13 when the whole town and thousands of visitors get in the frontier spirit with a batch of exciting events. The opening shot comes with panning for gold in the Hassayampa River, and this activity keeps up for the duration of the festival. The Gold Shirt Gang hauls in gold-bearing ore beforehand, and visitors can keep — without charge—all the gold they can pan out of the rich gravel.

While the gold-panning attracts most tourists, there is plenty of other activities every day — from miner's jack-drilling contests to parades and old-time costume balls. Indeed, it's one of the choice family events during the current season in Arizona's Valley of the Sun.

Mardi Gras tour by rail

The 20th annual Mardi Gras "Fun-tour" to New Orleans, under direction of John Sousa, departs Los Angeles at 11:30 a.m. Feb. 16 aboard the Santa Fe Chief. Return arrival will be Feb. 26.

A feature of the train will be a special lounge fitted out as a "fun car." Programmed for the 10-day trip are games and events, reserved parade seats in New Orleans, dinner parties, sightseeing, a Mississippi Riverboat trip, and visit to New Orleans' French Quarter.

Airline offers Florida bonanza

Southern Californians may visit dozens of Florida resorts for the price of an airline ticket to Miami under a fare proposal filed by National Airlines with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Travelers from the Long Beach-Orange County area may make free stopovers at any or all points in Florida that are in line of travel to their destination.

The individual round-trip excursion fare between Los Angeles and Miami is $220. Cities to be visited must be designated prior to departure.

SWING WITH SPRING IN THE ISLANDS OF HAWAII

March through early June is the "in" time to visit our mid-Pacific paradise. The pace is easier, the enjoyment bigger. You have your widest choice of luxurious accommodations in all price ranges. It's a balmy, carefree time . . . Hawaii's ideal season!

IN MARCH, and continuing into April, Hawaii's outstanding Japanese celebration—the Cherry Blossom Festival—holds sway. Nine weeks of exciting pageants, sports, ceremonial events.

IN APRIL, highlight is the Merry Monarch Festival at Hilo on the Orchid Isle of Hawaii. A gala, five-day festival honoring King Kalakaua. There are Pa'u riders, a Coronation Pageant, arrival of the S.S. Lurline, a Royal Court, contests, paniolos, and a broadcast of "Hawaii Calls."

IN MAY, there's Lei Day, the only festival of its kind in the world. Everybody wears a flower lei and every island has a Lei Day queen and court. Then comes the Captian Cook Festival, a three-day celebration at Kailua-Kona on the Orchid Isle, honoring the English circumnavigator who discovered the Hawaiian Islands in 1778.

IN JUNE, Hawaii's most exciting celebration, Kamehameha Day, commemorates the "Napoleon of the Pacific," who united all of the islands of Hawaii into one kingdom. And Hawaii's proud Filipino community celebrates with their month-long Fiesta Filipina.

COME JOIN IN THE FUN!
YOU COULD BE HERE TOMORROW!
We're only 4½ hours away by air and 4½ days by sea from the Pacific Coast . . . and surprisingly inexpensive. Jet fares are as low as $200 roundtrip from the Pacific Coast, $380 from the Midwest, $490.20 from the East Coast; luxury ocean liner economy class from $280, first class from $414 roundtrip from the Pacific Coast. Modern hotel rooms start at just $5 a day per person double occupancy. And most of Hawaii's best attractions are free! See your travel agent, airline or steamship representative and ask him to prepare an itinerary for you. Or mail the coupon below.

WEDDING BELLS RING

Newlyweds say 'I do' in church ceremonies

MRS. MICHAEL E. WELSH

MRS. DAVID CARLAW

Mrs. MICHAEL LIGHTHIPE

MRS. JOHN BOSTON

MRS. HUBERT SANCHEZ

Mrs. Ronald E. Vermette

Welsh-Agee

Students at Long Beach State College, Sandra Jean Agee and Michael Edwin Welsh, sealed their wedding vows in a service at 8 p.m. Saturday in Bethel Lutheran Church before 175 guests.

The former Miss Agee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond P. Agee, 5516 Myrtle Ave., and her husband the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Welsh, 6457 St. Louis Ave. Both young people were graduated from Jordan High School.

Attired in satin organza with lace bodice and a lace edged train, the bride also wore an organza rose headdress holding her silk illusion veil.

Her sister, Mrs. Frank Berry, served as matron of honor, with Terri McColeman and Cathy Gerlach as bridemaids. Judy Rasmussen and Ronnie Agee were flower girl and ring bearer.

Best man was Thomas Conmeau with William Zingg and Ray Agee Jr. ushering. After a Northern California honeymoon the couple will live in Long Beach.

Lighthipe-Esses

San Diego was destination of a wedding trip made by Mr. and Mrs. Michael James Lighthipe after their exchange of vows Friday in Bethel Lutheran Church.

The bride is the former Audrey Gail Esses, daughter of Mrs. Bette Esses, 905 E. 70th St. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James A. Lighthipe, 3500 Lama Lane.

A gown of rosepoint lace styled with a Basque bodice and voluminous skirt of tiered lace extending into a chapel-length train was worn by the bride.

Preceding her to the altar were LesLey McCance, maid of honor; Judith Ashley, Nancy Fair, Terrie Esses and Delores Ashley, bridesmaids.

The bridegroom asked his brother, Rodney, to be his best man. Ushers were Frederick Ashley, Gary O'Neil and Thomas Lighthipe.

A reception followed in American Legion Hall.

The bride is an alumna of Jordan High School and attended Long Beach City College. Her husband was graduated from Poly High School and is a student at Long Beach State College.

Sanchez-Poling

North Long Beach Christian Church was setting for Saturday rites uniting in marriage Sheila Naomi Poling and Hubert Edwin Sanchez.

After a ski trip to Mammoth, the pair will be at home in Santa Ana.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. Homer H. Poling, Lakewood; Mrs. Edith Sanchez, Torrance; and Edward Sanchez, Montebello.

Attending the pair were Mary M. Graves, maid of honor; Andrea Bodnar, Gale Haworth, bridesmaids; Thomas Sanchez, best man; Ben Rosin and Ralph Scarrow, ushers.

For her vows the bride was gowned in silk organza and Chantilly lace.

A champagne reception followed in the home of the bride's parents.

Carlaw-Hopkins

St. Pancratius Catholic Church was setting for nuptials Saturday which united Leone M. Hopkins and David M. Carlaw.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Leo B. Hopkins, 2696 55th Way, and the late Mr. Hopkins. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. David Carlaw, 3882 Platt St., Lynwood.

Honor attendants were the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Jerald Hopkins, and Eugene Poertner. The bride's niece, Lucille Hopkins, was flower girl; Jerald Hopkins and Donald Hopkins seated guests.

The newlyweds were feted at a wedding breakfast at Lakewood Country Club before they left for a honeymoon trip to Arizona. They will reside in Lynwood.

The bride attended Long Beach City College. Her husband was graduated from Lynwood High School and Long Beach State College.

Boston-O'Rourke

After a wedding trip to Carmel, 4679 Banner will be home address for Mr. and Mrs. John S. Boston, who exchanged nuptial vows Saturday in St. Bartholomew's Church.

The bride is the former Patricia L. O'Rourke, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph L. O'Rourke, 147 Park Ave.

Parents of the bridegroom are M/Sgt. and Mrs. Samuel Boston of Cypress.

A traditional bridal gown of Chantilly lace was worn by the bride. Her assistants were her sister, Peggy, maid of honor; Kathleen O'Rourke, Mary O'Rourke, Mary Boston and Frances Maceyka, bridesmaids.

Timothy Gormly performed best man duties. Ushers were Joseph O'Rourke, Lawrence Tochluk, Michael Klein and Joseph Svidergol.

A reception followed in the Commissioned Officers' Club at Terminal Island.

Vermette-Bradshaw

In the presence of 300 guests in St. Barnabas Catholic Church on Saturday at 10 a.m., the wedding of Patricia A. Bradshaw and Ronald E. Vermette was solemnized.

Now honeymooning at Big Bear Lake, the new Mr. and Mrs. Vermette will make their future home in Dover, N. H., home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Vermette.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Bradshaw, 4373 Falcon Ave. Her gown was of peau de soie trimmed with Alencon lace on skirt and train, and seed pearl crown held her veil of imported silk illusion.

* * * *

PRECEDING her to the altar were Jeanette Perciach, maid of honor, Mrs. Neal Van Dyke, Bonnie and Carol Weldenkopf. Kelly Van Dyke was the flower girl.

Best man duties were handled by Richard Quinto, and ushers were Leo and William Bradshaw and Lupe Lopez.

Pair united in Colorado

During a Saturday ceremony in First Presbyterian Church of Littleton, Colo., former Long Beach resident Gary M. Givens claimed Mimi Ann Simmons in marriage.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Monroe Simmons of Littleton, was attired in a floor-length white velveteen gown styled with A-line skirt. A long-sleeved jacket was worn over the fitted bodice accented by a jewel neckline.

She was attended by Hilary Heidt, maid of honor; Judy Givens, Ginger Givens and Paula White.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Carl Meyer, 2839 Tulane Ave., and Lew Givens of Littleton, asked Robert Eggars to be his best man. Ushers were the bridegroom's brother, Dane Meyer of Long Beach, Wayne Fitzpatrick and Tom Cassaway.

* * * *

MRS. GIVENS is employed as a ballet instructor. She attended Denver University, where she was affiliated with Gamma Phi Beta Sorority. Her fiance is an alumnus of Millikan High School and attended Long Beach City College.

They will make a home in Colorado Springs.

Party set for life members

Luncheon, social time and card play are in store for the nearly 100 life members of Woman's City Club when they gather at noon Monday at the clubhouse, 1309 E. Third St., for a party hostessed by Vada Cox, chairman. She will be assisted by Mmes. L. J. Oberson, S. F. Stipp and Earl T. Nickerson.

Why Grow Old?

By Josephine Lowman

Want to know how to lose up to 20 pounds in eight weeks?

Rogers-Kalin names linked

Upon their return from a honeymoon in Hawaii newly wed Mr. and Mrs. David H. Rogers will be at home at 3729 Locust Ave.

The bride, the former Patricia Ann Kalin, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kalin of South Gate. She was graduated from South Gate High and Long Beach State College where she is presently doing graduate work.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Rogers, 1234 E. 55th St. He is an alumnus of Jordan High School and attended Long Beach City College. He is past president of Bachelors Club and a member of Exchange Club of Uptown Long Beach.

For the 8 p.m. ceremony Friday in Huntington Park Christian Church the bride chose a gown of peau de soie with an overlay of Chantilly lace cascading from neckline to hem. A seed pearl headpiece held her veil of illusion.

ATTENDANTS for the couple were Mrs. Arnold Samardichs, her sister's matron of honor; Donna Connole, Madelon Gaier, bridesmaids; Don Rogers, his brother's best man; Nick Rogers, another brother, Dann Samowski and Jerry Gianni, ushers for the 200 guests.

MRS. DAVID H. ROGERS

Couples set July 9 date for nuptials

Lavia-Garwood

Planning to wed on July 9 are Toni Kaye Lavia and Richard Gordon Garwood according to announcement by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emilio A. Lavia. The bridegroom-elect is the son of Roy G. Garwood. All are of Long Beach.

Miss Lavia is a graduate of St. Anthony High School and now attends Long Beach City College. Her fiance, a graduate of Poly High, also is enrolled at LBCC.

Gregg-Creel

Engagment of Linda Sue Gregg and Richard Lowell Creel has been revealed as well as plans for their wedding on July 9. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene T. Gregg, Fullerton, and his parents are Mr. and Mrs. James L. Creel, Long Beach.

Man with a 'gun' on the 'big daddy'

Hand me my "gun," man, and let's hit the "heavies" off Waikiki. The "soup" is fine for "hot doggin," but let's try for a "quasimoto" in one of the "big daddies" without a "wipe out."

That's surf talk, ma, and it's very much the "in" lingo among the beachniks in Hawaii. Here, in this surfer's valhalla, everyone who is really in the swim has a smattering of basic surfese. A "gun," for example, is a big wave surfboard which the pros prefer to the 20-pound fiberglass slabs used by beginners.

The "heavies" or "big daddies" are the giant breakers that have been known to tower up to 35 or 40 feet before crashing into the beach. The "soup" is the foam from broken waves, ideal for novices, and "hot doggin" is stunt riding, usually in the foam. The "hot doggers" who try a bold stance as the board takes the wave are doing a "quasimoto." If they don't make it, they do a "wipe out" or "take gas," or to put it bluntly, they get dunked.

* * * *

A "DING" IS a dent in the board, and a "tube" is the hollow section in the wave. There are all sorts of terms, too, to describe ways to maneuver the board — spinners, standing islands, cut backs and so on.

Surfing addicts not only talk their own language, but subscribe to surfing magazines, belong to surf clubs and sport surf togs. The surferettes in Hawaii wear bikinis, but neoprene "wet suits" with bootles and mittens are the fashion in cold waters up north. What is more, they go in for music-to-surf-by, and flock to surfing films such as "Going My Wave."

There was a time when surfing had its share of bad publicity, thanks to a cult of oddballs who threw tin cans at old ladies and staged beer brawls on the beaches. Today, however, surfing is as respectable a sport as skiing, and nowhere is it more respectable music-to-surf-by, and flock to surfing beaches at every turn.

* * * *

SURFING, REPORTS Pan American Airways, was once the sport of the Hawaiian kings who rode the waves off Waikiki. No novices were they, since they used giant koa wood boards weighing up to 160 pounds, now on display at the Bishop Museum in Honolulu.

The sport was introduced abroad by Duke Kahanamoku, one of Hawaii's Olympic swimmers, who is now in his 70s but is still a surfing buff. One out of every five Hawaiians is reputed to have tried his skill in the surf, and it is no novelty to see a tot of four or five belly-flopping in the foam.

When the surf is really rolling, dedicated surfers in Honolulu leave schools and offices, grab their boards and dash to Makaha Beach, 45 minutes from Waikiki on the west side of the island. Here, the great show is the International Surfing Championships, staged between Dec. 18 and 26. The event draws surfers and spectators from Miami and Malibu, from Australia and New Zealand, from Europe and south Africa, from Central and South America, and from the Southern California coastal towns.

* * * *

CHAMPION SURFERS, male and female, test their ability on mountainous waves thundering more than 300 yards into the beach. Experts ride from the curl of the wave down the watery slope at some 30 miles an hour into the receding surge of the previous wave. The collision produces an upward thrust which sends all but the most skillful surfers hurtling from their boards. The sight is a brilliant demonstration of man's use of balance and movement to outwit nature's wind and waves.

The gentle surf at places like Waikiki is fine for beginners, and provides a long, easy trip to shore. There's surf to suit the most timid, but watch out for "hot doggers" and don't try a "quasimoto."

Traveling with Stan Delaplane

RIO DE JANEIRO Carnaval starts soon after the first of the year with weekend practice parades. The dancers get progressively keyed up to the Carnaval. Dance and parade for three days—they get a glassy-eyed, drugged look. It is the wildest, most colorful Mardi Gras you'll ever see.

Get there by Pan American or Varig—(Varig has a first-class dinner service that takes up four of the nine flying hours from New York to Rio). The best hotels are along the curve of Copacabana Beach. Restaurant Churrasceria Gaucho is good for the barbecue called churrasco.

Weather: Hot, humid and rainy.

* * * *

". . . our first trip to Europe and wonder whether it is best to go with a tour or go it alone."

I'VE DONE IT both ways. The advantages of a tour are: Your hotels, meals, transportation, tips, sightseeing are all arranged for you. Not even a momentary language problem. Against it, I'd say, are: You must go when the group goes. And tours often try to pack in too much. Move too fast.

For going it alone: If you find a place you like you can stop awhile. You can change your routing if you like. Against it: You must get hotels (difficult in summer season). Buck the language, the tipping, the transportation.

* * * *

"If we go alone, we will rent a car. Must we return it to the city where we rented?"

USUALLY you do. Though occasionally there's no charge if you're going from one city to another popular place in the same country. Paris to Deauville, for example. Otherwise you pay the cost of returning the car to the original city. Hertz seems to have most flexibility. And get one of their mileage-between-European-cities charts here before you go. Helps plan the days — 150 miles a day is enough on European roads.

* * * *

"For driving in Mexico, how are the roads? How many miles a day can we average?"

MAIN HIGHWAYS are usually good. But can suddenly develop chuckholes. So I think 50 miles an hour is top speed. You can be into bad road before you can slow down over 50. And Mexican roads aren't fenced much. Always a burro drifting across. (If a burro's head is pointed toward you or in the direction of the road, he's almost certain to cross at the last minute — slowly. If his head is pointed away, he probably won't.)

I average about 300 miles a day in Mexico. Start about 6 a.m. and take a jug of coffee and one of purified water. Stop about 4 in the afternoon. Don't drive after dark. Road work is rarely marked with anything. A tree branch across the highway means something is ahead. Anything from a pile of gravel to a bridge out.

* * * *

"At one point, our ship will be in Naples for the day and we wonder if there's time to go to Pompeii."

TAKES ABOUT an hour as I remember. There's an Italian tourist office at the docks. They get you a car—$10 (without tip as the driver will remind you). About halfway, he'll stop at a coral factory (when he gets 25% on whatever you buy). So tell him to get going.

He waits for you while you go through Pompeii — two or three hours is enough. There's guide service. The price is fixed. I think $2. There's a restaurant in the ruins and one outside where your driver is waiting. On the way back, he'll make one more try at the coral place. Prices are probably better in Naples. But I haven't actually compared them. I just know ALL drivers and ALL sightseeing buses try to make that one factory. But go to Pompeii. It's really worth the trip.

Japanese art, culture await Hawaii visitors

By Dorothy Gale Vigil

Diamond Head is a long leap from Fujiyama, but Hawaii visitors can find plenty of Japan in Honolulu this spring.

To the usual Honolulu teahouse parties, samurai movies and exhibits of Oriental art will be added elaborate cultural displays of Old Japan.

High point of Hawaii's tropical springtime will be the annual Cherry Blossom Festival Feb. 19-April 23, staged by Japanese-Americans of the community.

Ancient Nipponese ceremonies, antique art objects, classic sports and historic costumes draw islanders of all races to Waikiki Beach and the exhibit halls of Honolulu.

* * * *

CARP KITES fly against the tropic sky and artificial cherry blossoms deck stages and store windows, as well as Oriental bazaars and restaurants.

Graceful children dance to koto and samisen and brightly costumed folk dancers perform to the beat of drums.

This year's celebration should bring out the biggest parade of kimonos and obis Honolulu has ever seen, according to the Hawaii Visitors Bureau. Plus fashion shows galore, all stressing the exotic Polynesian and Oriental note for which the city is famous!

* * * *

ALONG WITH Hawaiians, Siamese, Filipinos, Koreans, Puerto Ricans, Tahitians, Chinese and Caucasians from around the world spring visitors will see sumo, judo, kendo and the arts of Japanese paper-cutting and flower-arranging.

A show of contemporary art runs in mid-town Honolulu March 16-April 16.

Honolulu's girls of Japanese ancestry are among the city's loveliest, and one of the prettiest of all is to be chosen Cherry Blossom Queen March 19 at the civic auditorium.

After mornings of Polynesian sightseeing or surfing, vacationing housewives will be able to attend lessons in Japanese cooking April 13 at the Honolulu International Center. Everything from how to turn out lacy shrimp tempura to fancy vegetable carvings is taught.

* * * *

IF THEY skip Waikiki's nightly hula entertainment for Cherry Blossom fun, visitors catch the pageantry of a young Japanese-American ruling at a gala coronation ball at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel March 26.

Not to be missed is the Cherry Blossom Concert April 9 at the Honolulu International Center.

Elaborate cultural shows are scheduled at the Hilton Hawaiian Village Dome April 5-9.

A top draw, particularly among islanders themselves, will be the dazzling show of dances imported from Japan. It runs April 14-23 at the concert theater of Honolulu International Center. Costumes are lavish and the girls perform both classic Japanese numbers and jazzy contemporary routines.

Helicopter fare savings offered

Southern California travelers wanting to use local helicopter service, and destined for cities more than 500 miles from Los Angeles International Airport, now may save money through an airline-helicopter joint fare arrangement, announced by Western Air Lines.

WAL and Los Angeles Airways have made it possible for travelers to save up to half the regular helicopter fare.

LAA helicopter service flies between Los Angeles and heliports in Anaheim/Disneyland, Burbank, Glendale, Newport Beach, Ontario, Pomona, Riverside, San Bernardino, Van Nuys and Whittier.

New cycle course

The world's finest motorcycle course will be opened in May when the remodeled Hockenheim Ring is inaugurated with the Grand Prix of Germany. Improvements costing $5 million have transformed the track, which is seven miles long and has facilities for 400,000 spectators.

ARMS OUTSTRETCHED

In time of family crisis ...a best friend

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN

"Mentally ill mother. Seven children, three in diapers. Father insensitive to mother's problems."

"Mr. B. returned from hospital following heart attack to find his wife had left him and five children, ages 12, 10, 7, 5 and 18 months."

So read the necessarily cryptic, yet heart-rending case histories on file at Homemaker Service of Long Beach.

But let's take the case of Mr. and Mrs. T.

"Mother in need of surgery requiring lengthy post-operative recovery time. Father diabetic. Intermittent hospitalization interrupts steady income. Two children, 8 and 18-months."

SAYS MRS. T, "I was terribly frightened about the surgery. You never think about death when you're single. When you're married it becomes so much more important to stay alive . . . to see that your children grow up."

"That's why it was such a blessing while I was in the hospital to know that the children were being cared for and that my husband's special diet was being prepared. You know the homemakers are experienced, backed by an agency, trained to just walk in and take over.

"Knowing she was there helped me ease the tension that my doctor said was so important to recovery. I felt like a woman of 50. Now I feel 20 again!"

Or, let's listen to Mrs. H.:

"My husband is 92 and recently had pneumonia. Along with being deaf and blind, he was quite a handful. I'm 85, and when I had an attack of phlebitis on top of a heart condition, I knew I needed help. I called for a homemaker—they're the most wonderful people—and they certainly helped me out. Now that I'm better, I'm trying to help myself, but they have promised me more help if I need it."

Just what is this service that brings such effusive praise from the people it helps?

HOMEMAKER SERVICE, was established a year and a half ago by Junior League of Long Beach as "a short term home help program to assist families and individuals by providing temporary household aid and personal care in a time of crisis."

To meet what the Community Welfare Council termed the greatest unmet need in the city, Junior League undertook a three year pilot program to get the service underway, pledging $15,000 a year for three years from its Community Trust Fund realized from moneys made on annual rummage sale and debutante ball. The league also provides volunteer clerical help at the service headquarters in the Fairfield Building, 3515 Linden Ave. Other costs are met through a sliding fee scale charged service users on the basis of their ability to pay.

Now mid-way through the Junior League-sponsored period, Homemaker Service and its board headed by Leo Vander Lans, assured of its worth to Long Beach, are looking for additional sources of income through organizations and individuals. The goal: perhaps establishing its own self-supporting foundation.

In the words of its executive director Helen Collins, "You can't put the lid on a growing agency any more than you can on a 12-year-old child. Not baby sitters, not cleaning ladies, our agency provides a service that speaks directly to the people in times of emergency."

And, in addition to the people it helps, it also provides part-time employment for its homemakers, she points out.

THESE WOMEN, trained to step into any home situation and take over with a firm hand and a warm smile, are marvelous, says their director.

Pre-requisite for service is attendance at an adult education course, Homemaking for Everyday Use, given at Long Beach City College.

New classes, according to Miss Collins, will open Feb. 3 and will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. each Thursday for 18 weeks on the Business and Technology Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway. In addition to training potential homemakers, the course is invaluable, she said, to housewives, experienced or inexperienced, in teaching care of children, food and nutrition, health and safety, care of the sick, convalescent and elderly, as well as effeciency in home management.

A Homemaker for just a year, and currently taking the LBCC course for a second time, Kathleen Kaczor says, "It's wonderful. I'm learning things I THOUGHT I knew!

She also eloquently sums up the service given by herself and her fellow homemakers:

"People are thrilled to find someone they can trust to come in and take over. Our thrill is in being able to help."

Girl Scout Council Names new slate

Mrs. Ann Benedict was elected president of the Greater Long Beach Girl Scout Council at its annual banquet in Bellflower High School auditorium.

Mrs. Benedict, 1133 Atlantic Ave., Lynwood, succeeds founding president Mrs. Harold W. Hodges, 1053 Cartagena Dr., Long Beach, who served from Oct. 1, 1962, to the present.

MRS. ANN BENEDICT

A former vice president of the council, Mrs. Benedict has been active in Girl Scouting for six years. She has served on the board of directors, development and employed personnel committees and on the steering committee for sustaining membership enrollment. In addition she has been assistant finance chairman.

* * * *

A GRADUATE of Smith College, she is manager-owner of Drilite Foods Co., Lynwood. Among many civic activities, Mrs. Benedict is a trustee of University of California, Idyllwild Arts Foundation and is a member of the Izaak Walton League.

Also elected were Mrs. John R. Pownall, Long Beach, Mrs. Bernard J. Perry, La Mirada, vice presidents; and Mrs. Douglas S. Hazelton, Norwalk, as secretary.

Board members elected were Mmes. Harold W. Hodges, William Smith, Francis M. Lowry, John Wills, Richard L. Vaughan, Gus A. Walker, Donald C. Wallace Jr. and Kenneth S. Wing Jr., all of Long Beach; Mmes. Millard Urton, Charles Moomey, Bellflower; Dewain E. Rynerson, Lakewood and Mrs. Thomas J. Thomas, Compton.

Also Messrs Harold L. Eiterman, La Mirada, Richard Mars, Long Beach and Robert M. Vasseur, Lynwood.

Data is too much, wrong

South won the first trick with dummy's ace of spades and took stock of the hand. He had one spade loser, one trump loser, no diamond losers and one or two club losers depending how the suit developed.

He decided to postpone the club play as long as he possibly could and to attempt to gather information along the way.

Therefore he led a diamond to his ace, returned to dummy's king and ruffed a diamond in his own hand.

Then he led a low spade toward dummy. Lew Mathe who sat East overtook his partner's eight with the nine in order to lead a trump. Bob Hamman sitting West rose with his ace and led another trump back.

* * * *

SOUTH won in dummy, ruffed dummy's last diamond in his hand and then ruffed his last spade in dummy.

Now South was down to the all-important club play. He led a club from dummy and Lew Mathe played low. This didn't help South a bit. Lew was sure to play a low club if he had one and irrespective of what higher ones he might hold.

However, South had acquired a lot of information from the play. Bob Hamman, West, had already shown up with the queen of spades, ace of hearts and queen of diamonds. That gave him a total of eight high card points outside the club suit. If Bob also held the club ace he would have 12 points.

Bob is known as a man who likes to open the bidding and Bob had dealt and passed. It looked almost certain that Bob would not have that ace of clubs. South played the king and down he went.

Lakewood rite joins Millers

More than 250 guests witnessed the Saturday afternoon rite in Lakewood Community Methodist Church uniting in marriage Carrie Lynn Giessler and John Frederick Miller.

Parents of the bridal pair are Mr. and Mrs. John J. Giessler, 4134 Knoxville Ave., Lakewood, and the F. J. Millers, 3833 Marber Ave.

As she recited nuptial promises, the bride wore a formal length creation of Italian silk and Chantilly lace fashioned with a watteau train which fell from the shoulders of the fitted bodice. A peacock front accented the voluminous hoop skirt.

* * * *

PRECEDING the bride to the altar were Alicia B. Ooten, maid of honor; Judith C. Kline, Libby A. Johnson and Mrs. James E. Crayton. Gerald McGinnis was best man. Ushers were Noel Wymaster, James E. Crayton and William Matzke.

After a church reception, the newlyweds departed on a wedding trip to Northern California.

The bride is an alumna of Lakewood High School. Her husband was graduated from Millikan High. Both attended Long Beach City College.

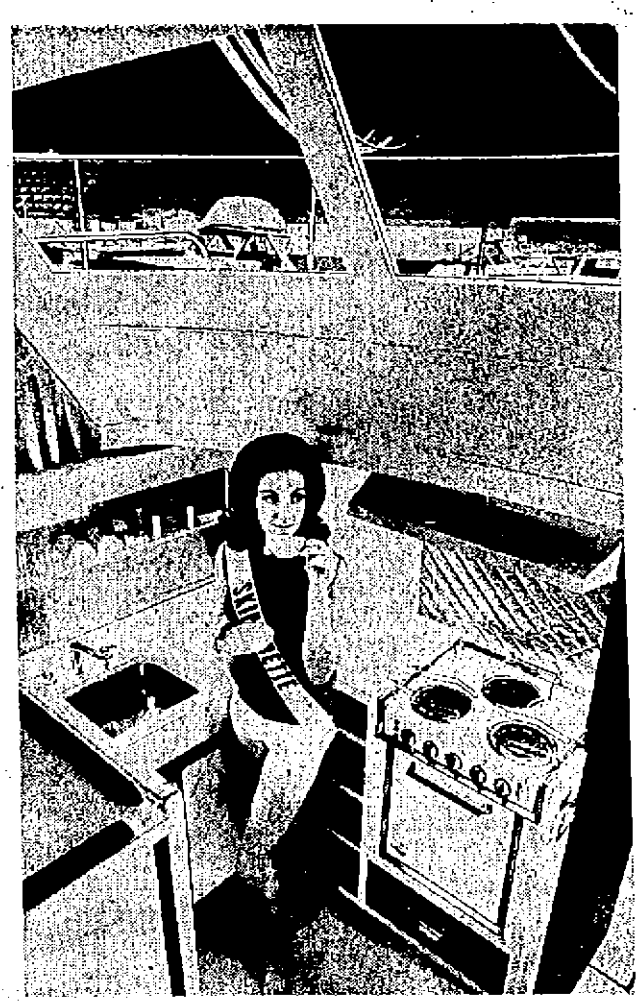
Life at sea is a breeze for the lady of the yacht

PERT boat show hostess, Yvonne Osborne, above, poses in head (bedroom to landlubbers). New yachts feature showers, with hot and cold water; toilets that are flushed electrically.



BOAT galleys, or kitchens, now have all conveniences of home. Linda La Marre, right, is seen in galley of 50-foot Stephens. Like other new craft, it has all electric facilities.

carpeting, there are many handsome vinyl floor coverings. Some are textured to give the look of carpet. Easy to care for with the swish of a mop, they have non-skid qualities which appeal to both men and women.

R. M. Tollefson, president of Tollycraft Corp., Kelso, Wash., says he never overlooks an idea presented by a woman. One time he added a $3.50 bread board and sold a boat. Another woman suggested a pastry board would be handy. A pastry board was added.

His boats feature plastic, moulded drawers which are easy to clean, never warp. "I'm SURE it was the suggestion of a woman," he said.

SINBAD WOULD HAVE FLIPPED OVER THESE BUNKS what first mate wouldn't enjoy luxury of master stateroom like this? Linda La Marre aboard Stephens yacht.

THE TREND to dressing up boats includes use of decorative bric-a-brac for homelike atmosphere. With this in mind, designers are figuring ways to build areas where such items can be used.

What colors do women prefer—cool tones or warm ones? This choice is as individual as the woman herself.

One thing is sure. Women want and are getting big windows instead of small port holes. They like to see out when "below" decks. The "see out" factor has a very real effect on women's enjoyment of boating. Many suffer a form of claustophobia while cruising and big windows alleviate this problem.

Privacy, when she wants it, is important to women. So builders, strictly with feminine desires in mind, arrange sleeping areas and staterooms which can be shut off by doors.

WHILE LARGER vessels go in for such additional niceties as air conditioning, full heating, deep freezes, two, three or more heads (bathrooms), even small runabouts are getting into the luxury swing.

One 20-foot sport cruiser at the show was not only carpeted, it had a completely reclining contoured chair for the lady who, after whizzing along at 40 knots an hour, wants to stretch out for a sun bath during more leisurely cruising.

Men want to know all about construction of hull, quality of motors, RPMs, knots, rudders, props, accuracy of safety equipment. That's as it should be.

But horses under the hatches don't mean a thing to a woman if she's working like a horse, or hemmed in like one, while trying to enjoy family boating.

The makers of Pacemaker yachts probably put it best in one of their ads: "We have long been guided by a philosophy which says that the exterior be designed for a man, a real man, and the interior for his lady."

Saturday events mark Youngs' golden year

Mr. and Mrs. William Frederick Young, 3915 E. 10th St., were honored at two events Saturday in observance of their golden wedding anniversary.

A reception at East Long Beach Methodist Church was followed by a buffet supper at Puccini's for family and relatives.

The couple's children, who served as hosts and hostesses, are Florence Young, Oakland; Joseph Young, Los Angeles; Kenneth and Ellen Young, Pomona; Dorothy and Nick Misciagna, Piedmont.

Mr. and Mrs. Young were married Jan. 26, 1916, in the Methodist parsonage at Littleton, Colo. They resided in Colorado Springs where their four children were born until 1935, when they moved to Long Beach. Mr. Young retired from his own wholesale candy and tobacco business in 1959. They have five grandchildren.

Sulkies—from L.B. to Winner's Circle

PAUL DONNER (L.), DALE J. BERRY . . . Steamed Hickory Goes Into Molding Braces

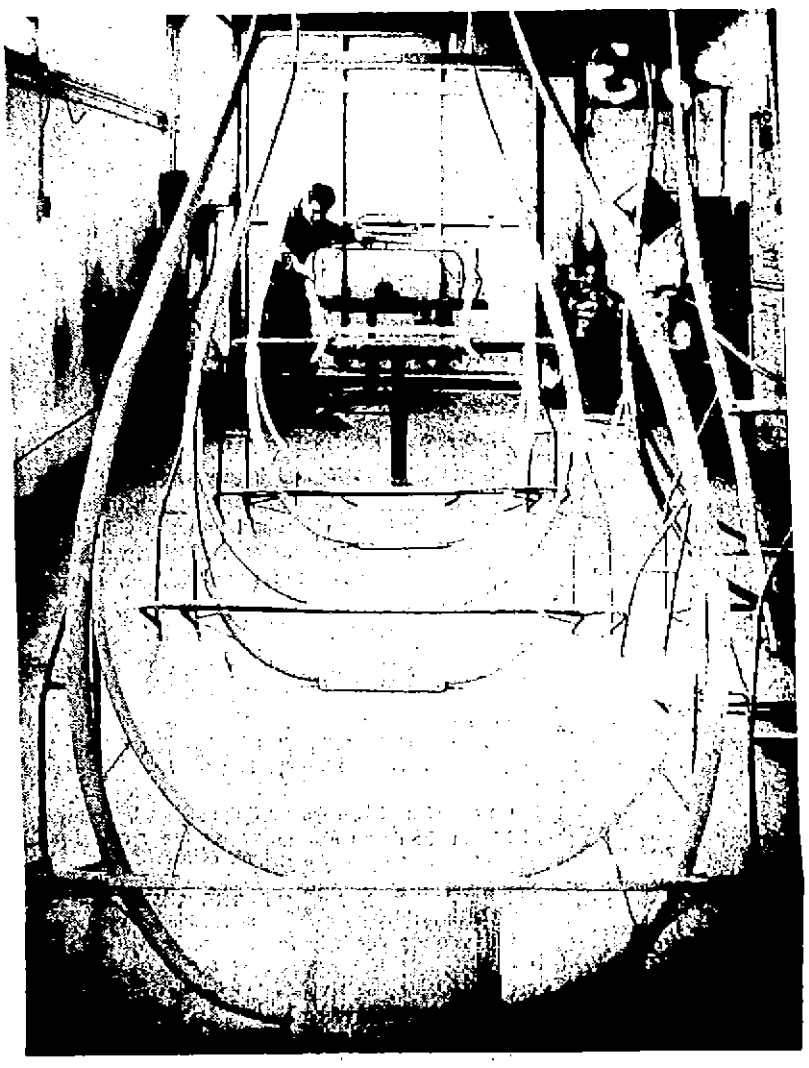
By ROBERT BECKMAN
Southland Progress Editor

Wilform Buggy Works of Long Beach isn't a firm name that was popular at the turn of the century—or during the administration of William H. Taft—or at the advent of World War I.

Wilform was born in 1945.

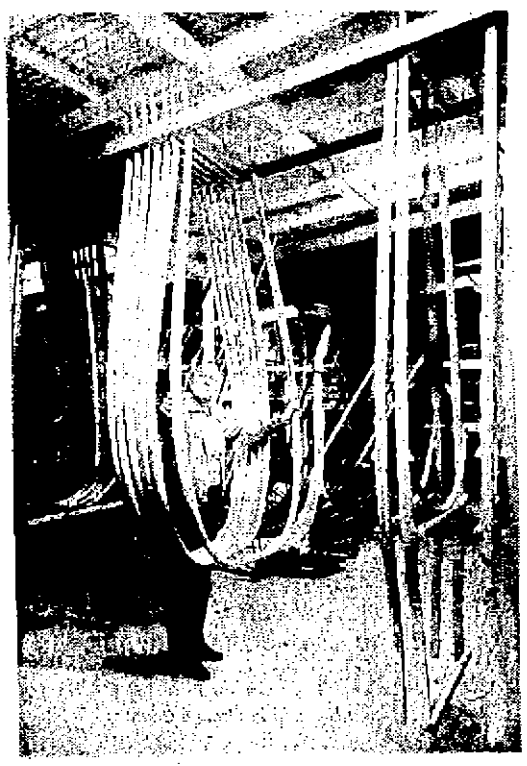
That year, in a little building at 1322 Coronado Ave., the first horse show carts and harness racing sulkies ever manufactured east of Iowa came off the assembly line.

Year after year, horse show enthusiasts and harness racing businessmen watched as the Wilform vehicles flashed and glimmered in the sun—and in the winners' circles.



• • • •

DALE J. BERRY, a soft-voiced man with twinkling eyes who took over Wilform recently when its founder died, estimates nearly 600 buggies, viceroys and other carts are shipped annually from the small plant.



It's also been estimated 90% of such vehicles seen in California races and shows came from Wilform. At that, 90% of the output goes outside the state, principally to the East, Midwest, Hawaii and Canada.

Each of Berry's 10 employes is a skilled technician—from the man who first steams the hickory for shaft-shaping to his son, Dale Lee, who makes final inspection and tediously wraps the product for shipment.

The odors of sawdust, hot metal and paints permeate the rooms and it's a pleasant atmosphere. ("We're a small company. We're a team here," Berry says.)

Long Beach Port Projects Total $27 Million

Current building projects now under construction within the Port of Long Beach last week topped the $27 million mark, according to Charles L. Vickers, port general manager.

Among the major projects is the $12.7 million Gerald L. Desmond Bridge, the state's sixth largest. With a clearance of 225 feet above high tide water the bridge will eventually replace the pontoon bridge built as a "temporary" structure during World War II.

A project to raise 116 acres an overall average of 20 feet is continuing under a $6,496,900 contract to bring subsided land back up to normal grade.

A second fill project for a section of the abandoned San Gabriel River, north of Berths 83-87, has started under a contract totaling $2,942,000, Vickers reported. The project is part of a plan to build a supertanker terminal for use by Texaco.

The port's new $1,731,552 bulkloader iron ore pellet facility with traveling stacker and conveyor is due for completion in April.

Erection of two traveling gantry cranes, costing $1,331,200 on Pier Y, is nearing completion, the port manager said. The 35-ton capacity cranes will be used primarily to load and unload 20-ton truck vans from container-carrying vessels.

Completed during 1965 was the $18,500,000 Pier J, largest man-made municipal pier in the world. The pier created a new basin complex that enabled the port to double its berthing capacity to 80 berths.

Among the $23,722,613 in new construction completed last year, according to Vickers, were two new container terminals at a cost of $1,072,234; a banana terminal berth, $956,134; banana unloading gantries, $608,808; and Berth 83 for National Gypsum, $764,255.

MARALIN NISKA (RIGHT) IN TITLE ROLE, 'SUSANNAH'

fly" Feb. 16 and the title role in "Susannah" Feb. 21.

"There always was something different about Maralin," recalls her first voice teacher, Miss Louise Mansfield, who taught music at San Pedro High School. "She was so pretty and vivacious and eager to learn. She worked hard — always seemed to have in her mind some sort of plan for the future."

"Miss Mansfield worked with those of us who wanted to stay after school for extra study," Maralin says. "It was she who encouraged me to enter my first two contests."

Maralin won first prize in each—one a PTA award for vocal excellence in the Los Angeles City Schools, the other in the voice category of the Los Angeles Women's Committee of the Philharmonic Orchestra.

MISS MANSFIELD'S training was so sound that when I studied with Los Angeles voice coach Ernest St. John I could apply what I had learned — didn't have to unlearn all my previous training and start over," Maralin says gratefully.

Meanwhile, she got her teaching credential at UCLA and was teaching elementary school in Downey when she was called to audition for the chorus in a Palos Verdes College production of "Faust." She came away with the leading role of Marguerite.

The following year she taught at Hollywood Riviera School, Torrance.

"No matter how busy she was, she always was interested in her community and very generous about her singing. She wasn't aloof — she'd entertain where she was asked—at community, civic or political affairs," says Miss Mansfield.

For 15 years, until June, 1965, Maralin was soloist at the Seventh Church of Christ in San Pedro.

THE MORE people heard her, the more they urged her to make singing her career. Finally she said, "I'll go to USC for one year."

That decision changed her life, but she admits it wasn't an easy course.

"You work unbelieveably hard and long. Many a night I drove home alone from Los Angeles at 2 or 3 a.m. when there were no freeways to speed you. But in this very competitive field, where the stakes are so high, I felt I must perfect myself so that nothing could touch me."

Her operatic training continued at the graduate schools of both UCLA and USC, the Music Academy of the West and Los Angeles Conservatory of Music, where she was a fellow student with Mary Costa.

IT WAS AT USC that she premiered the title role of Carlisle Floyd's "Susannah," which the opera workshop did from manuscript under direction of Dr. Walter Ducloux.

"It was such a thrill for me to meet Mr. Floyd when the Metropolitan Opera National Company performed his opera as its very first production last September in Indianapolis.

"Because it's unfamiliar, people resist it, but once they reach the theater, no one ever goes away disappointed. It's not modern in the sense of having no melodies. It evokes more response than any other opera we do."

In addition to "Susannah" and "Madame Butterfly," the touring company performs "Cinderella" and "Carmen."

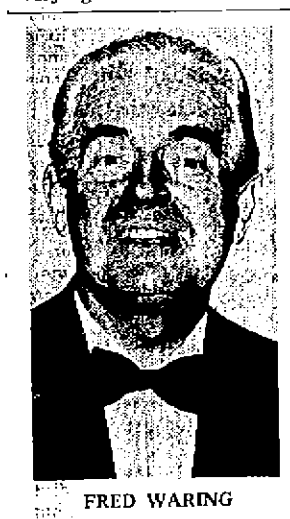
During her learning years, Maralin perfected 37 roles in less than 9 years, singing major roles, always heeding her own precept: Just sing from performance to performance, doing the very best you can.

SHE CREDITS much of her training in professional conduct to Edwin Lester of Los Angeles Civic Light Opera and remembers the time she stepped into Patrice Munsel's starring role in "Song of Norway" with 40 minutes notice.

"I could hear the audience groan when it was announced tht I would sing instead of Patrice. But after the first aria I could just feel them thinking, 'Hey, this kid isn't so bad, after all.'"

The new Metropolitan Opera company is, for the San Pedro soprano, "an answer to my wildest dreams come true."

It's purpose is to take live opera to many communities and to give young artists opportunity to sing with a major company. Under the co-management of Rise Stevens and Michael Manuel, the company will cover 25,000 miles and visit 70 cities between September, 1965 and June, 1966.



MARALIN received a call from the company to audition at Greek Theater last spring, then was flown to New York in April to sign her contract and be measured for costumes and wigs.

Just after the tour began, she was asked to sign for next season. No one else had been approached and no one else was until January—but she signed, confident of the company's success.

Community response has been tumultuous,

"Audiences applaud and cheer us so that sometimes we say to ourselves, 'Look, they're too excited — we can't really be that good.'"

As for the future, Maralin says philosophically, "I'll just take it as it comes. You have to learn to bounce with the jolts that come along — but always be in voice!"

LINDA WICKER

Bright new stars add luster to Waring show

Linda Wicker is one of the bright new discoveries who will make "The Magic Music of Fred Waring" show glitter with entertainment March 10 in Municipal Auditorium.

The newcomers will add their talents to that of favorite Waring standbys, The Pennsylvanians, in a program of popular classics, Broadway tunes, chorales, folksongs, vignettes and novelty numbers.

Tickets are on sale at Humphrey's Music Store, 135 E. Third St.

Duo to play

Dorothy Wade, violinist, and Xenia Chasman, pianist, will perform "Sonata for Violin and Piano" by William Piston and additional music by Bach and Brahms Thursday at 8:15 p.m. in Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. The program is the ninth on the current museum concert series. Admission is free.

Munch to conduct

Charles Munch, former music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra in the Music Center Thursday at 8:30 p.m. and Friday at 2 p.m. David Frisina, concertmaster, will be violin soloist.

Search uncovers five 'New Faces'

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

A talent search by Jerry Darnell, Long Beach City College gallery director, has produced "New Faces," an exhibit by five young Southern California artists which opens Friday at the college gallery, Faculty Avenue and Harvey Way. It will hang through March 4.

Darnell toured major schools in the area to find recent graduates who are considered by their art departments to be among the outstanding young professionals today.

The show includes sculpture by Ed Dron and paintings by Lewis Ott, Joella Mahoney, Andrew Wing and Ian Gatley. The two latter artists are products of Long Beach State College.

The public is invited to a reception from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday. Regular gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fridays.

LONG BEACH Art Association will receive entries for its February "Shibui" show Monday from 1 to 7 p.m. The selector, Koo Ito, is an authority on Shibui which he defines as a sensitiveness and awareness of beauty reflected in the simplest of art forms. These are always understated, with a single brush stroke portraying strength, force and beauty.

Gallery director Deen Rickert emphasizes that participating artists need not follow the oriental theme. All entries will be eligible for judging and selection.

* * * *

MONDAY through Saturday some galleries of Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., will be closed to the public for installation of February exhibits, "Contemporary European and American Prints" and "City School Art."

The print show is on special loan from the Roten Galleries of Baltimore. "City School Art" was selected from work done by students in Long Beach Unified School District.

A PREVIEW of work by four artists will precede a concert today at 8:30 p.m. by Harry Blumberg, violist, and Norma Ludmerer, pianist, in Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave.

Artists are Milton Gershgoren, Ted Gilien, Marvin Grayson and Dr. Samuel Pollach.

After the program, a reception will honor performing and exhibiting artists.

* * * *

ENTRY DEADLINE is Feb. 9 for the All-California Art Exhibition to be held March 10 through 20 at the National Orange Show in San Bernardino.

Cash awards will go to first place winners in five categories: traditional oil, modern oil, traditional watercolor, modern watercolor and sculpture.

Jurors are William Bender, Rex Brandt, Dr. Robert R. Harrison, Oswell Jackson, David Lawrence, Douglas McClellan, R. Brownell McGrew, Robert E. Wood and Jack Zajac.

ANNA HAYES, who has had six one-woman shows in the area, will show 15 watercolors at Bay Shore Library, 195 Bay Shore Ave., during February.

Cliburn returns on Feb. 6

Pianist Van Cliburn, who will devote half a program to the works of Frederic Chopin in his single Pavilion appearance next Sunday afternoon, Feb. 6, will present an entire evening of the Polish master's works in his Pasadena recital Tuesday, Feb. 15.

Cliburn will play two of Chopin's three sonatas (the B minor and the B-flat minor), three etudes, the F minor "Fantasie, Opus 49," and the B-flat minor "Scherzo."

At the Pavilion, Feb. 6, the program will include "Four Intermezzi," of Schumann, sonatas of Beethoven and Prokofiev, the "Trois Nouvelles Etudes," (opus posthumous), the F minor "Fantasie," and the C sharp-minor "Scherzo," of Chopin.

Cliburn's last appearance in the Southland was Dec. 7, 1964, when he presented the first solo recital in the Pavilion, during the opening week at the Music Center.

GERRE HANCOCK

Organist to perform for AGO

Gerre Hancock, young American organist, will be the second artist to be featured on Long Beach Chapter of American Guild of Organists current series. The public is invited to the 8:15 p.m. performance Tuesday in First Congregational Church.

The program will include compositions by J. S. Bach and Cesar Franck as well as "Ciacona in E Minor" by Dietrich Buxtehude, "Three Pieces for Mechanical Clock" by Haydn, and "Pageant" by Leo Sowerby.

There is no admission charge, but an offering will be received.

Hancock is organist and choirmaster of Christ Episcopal Church, Cincinnati.

Concerto concert

Robert Cole will conduct the 60-piece college-community orchestra of Immaculate Heart College in the school of music's annual senior Concerto Concert next Sunday, Feb. 6, at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium, 2021 N. Western Ave. There is no admission charge. Soloists will be sopranos Mary Canady, Eileen Duffy and Delia Surratt. Mary Spire, pianist, will perform the Bach "Brandenburg Concetro No. 5."

'LARGE HEAD OF WOMAN,' MATISSE, INDIA INK

Matisse retrospective is reflection of joy

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The Henri Matisse Retrospective at the Dickson Art Center, UCLA, 405 Hilgard Ave., Los Angeles, is wellnigh overwhelming. The 92 paintings, 47 sculptures, 83 drawings, 108 prints, and 5 books he illustrated are admirably hung in chronological progression in a number of galleries on two floors.

There is so much to see, it cannot possibly be assimilated in one visit. The viewer traces the artist's progress from the early fine academic work in painting and sculpture through his breakthrough into color before 1900, his toying with impressionism, pointillism, and cubism, his love-affair with North Africa, and to the works of his bedridden old age. He ultimately distilled his art into a free simplicity that speaks volumes. His subject is human joy.

* * * *

MATISSE (1869-1954) lived with all the excitement of the art revolution, yet never lost sight of his personal vision and his goal to create an art of strength and power which would refresh the physically exhausted and spiritually depleted man of our times.

The two most outstanding attributes of Matisse's work are his sinuous, arabesque line and his gorgeous colors.

* * * *

THERE ARE no social messages to be found here, no moral judgments. The sensitive, brilliant artist doesn't try to show us the world the way it was but the way he saw it. His work is a paean to the joy of life.

The show continues at UCLA through Feb. 27. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Thursdays; 1 to 9 p.m. Sundays.

Vocal bill to benefit church fund

Soprano Stella Herman will sing German, French and Italian art songs, contemporary numbers and Negro spirituals today at 8 p.m. in Pacific Unitarian Church Auditorium, 5621 Montemalaga Drive, Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Miss Herman, after majoring in music at the University of Nebraska, was active in UCLA's Opera Workshop, singing roles in "Italian Girl in Algiers," "Midsummer Night's Dream," Visitors." She also has appeared with the American Opera Company, Los Angeles Civic Light Opera and Nat King Cole's 1964 U. S. tour.

* * * *

OTHER performances have been as soloist with South Bay Civic Symphony and the Palos Verdes Community Art Association, and in premieres of "Song of Songs" by Castelnueva-Ledesco and "Shakespeare's Songs" by David Amram.

A donation will be received at the door to benefit the church piano fund.

Blow down: Harry James vs. Herman

Woody Herman and his orchestra will play a concert today at 8 p.m. in Cerritos College Gymnasium. General admission tickets will be sold at the door before the performance.

Monday, Woody and his musicians will engage trumpeter Harry James and his ochestra in a campaign to "blow the man down" in the "Battle of the Bands" at Carousel Theater, West Covina. Each group will play the music for which it is famous.

Tuesday through next Sunday Homer and Jethro, bucolic comedy singers, and The New Society, fast-rising vocal group, will join America's No. 1 Peapicker, Tennessee Ernie Ford, at the Carousel.

Area Electronics Plants Plan Expansion

By KLEN CHICOTE
Business Editor

Already a titan in the industrial world, the electronics industry is looking toward far greater growth this year and will provide a decided boost to the Southern California economic pattern.

Although the Orange County area has shown sensational growth in electronic producing facilities the past few years, the years ahead will see continued expansions with East Coast concerns either moving to the area or opening branches.

Numerous plants in the area now have expansions under way.

Last year the electronics industry accounted for sales of $17 billion and a total of $18.3 billion sales is predicted for 1966.

Biggest customer will continue to be the U.S. government seeking more electronic equipment and components, but there will be great growth in sales computers.

The Pacific Coast region has 1,179 electronic manufacturing plants while the Middle Atlantic area has 1,963 and the East, North Central area 1,220. However, because of prime contracts with the government and other specialized products turned out in this area, 27% of the electronic engineers are employed here while the Middle Atlantic area has 25% and the East, North Central has 14%.

CONSTRUCTION in the greater Long Beach area is showing no sign of a letup. In fact, the week-by-week announcements are growing brighter.

Here are some samples of projects announced recently:

EL SEGUNDO — Edmund Sherman, Los Angeles, is having plans prepared for a $4 million office building on Sepulveda Boulevard between Palm and Mariposa Avenues.

STANTON—Bank of America has called for plans for a $200,000 branch here on a site not yet revealed. Another $200,000 branch is planned for San Juan Capistrano.

FULLERTON—Bids will be called on a $175,000 addition to Fullerton High School. Plans also are being prepared for a Catholic High School to be built on Acacia Street.

SANTA FE SPRINGS—Key Management Inc., Downey, will build 132 apartment units at once, costing in excess of $1.5 million.

HUNTINGTON BEACH — Plans are nearing completion for an $850,000 elementary school for the Ocean View District at 5682 Tilburg.

Beach City Chevrolet, Long Beach, has completed plans for a $141,000 new car service building at 19th Street and Orizaba Avenue.

SANTA FE SPRINGS — Huff Lumber Co. is building a $70,000 office structure on East Rosecrans Avenue.

BUENA PARK—A $300,000 lecture hall and little theater building will be erected at 10th Street and Magnolia Avenue for the North Orange County Junior College District.

SANTA ANA — Bids have been taken on an addition to the police station at an estimated cost of $216,000.

BELLFLOWER — Foursquare Church, 9336 Rose Ave., is building a $60,000 addition.

Clark & Bartell, builders, plan a 14-unit $200,000 apartment in Long Beach at 3605 Elm Ave.

NORWALK—Key Management Corp., Downey, has completed plans for a $1,500,000 apartment structure at Studebaker Road and Imperial Highway.

DOWNEY — Bids will be called in March on a proposed $240,000 addition to Pius X Catholic High School.

COMPTON — A $1,270,000 addition is to be built on Dominguez Valley Hospital, 3100 Susanna Road.

GARDENA — Bids will be taken in March on a $225,000 addition to Junipero Serra Catholic High School, 14830 Van Ness Ave.

SANTA FE SPRINGS — Dixson Chubbuck & Associates of Alladena will build a large pumice-grinding factory building at 11815 Slauson Ave.

LAGUNA BEACH — C. E. Siemonsma Buick & Pontiac will construct a $100,000 parking structure on Broadway at Beach Street.

WESTMINSTER — Preliminary plans have been prepared for a $553,000 elementary school at the northeast corner of Hazard Street and Magnolia Avenue. A school estimated at the same cost will be built west of Hazard and south of Bolsa Avenue.

SOUTH GATE—A food service building is planned at South Gate High School, 3351 Firestone Blvd., at an estimated cost of $230,000.

TORRANCE — Working drawings are nearing completion on two elementary school buildings for the Torrance Unified District to cost $1,600,000.

SEAL BEACH — The city has called for drawings on a lifeguard headquarters building and bandshell.

NEGOTIATIONS are under way between Tidewater Oil Co. and Getty Oil Co. toward a possible merger of the two. Getty Oil presently controls 72% of Tidewater's 13,348,000 outstanding shares of common stock. A merger would result in Getty Oil being the surviving company but the Flying A identification and colors would remain.

Ralph Wilson Plastics Inc. has merged with Rexall Drug in the latest of expansions by Rexall. Wilson makes laminated plastics for counter tops and paneling.

Youths 12 to 21 now get a 50% reduction in air fares with Braniff flights if they don't mind waiting, sometimes. The new rates for youth are on a standby basis but they must have a youth fare ID card which costs $3 and will be good until they reach the age of 22. No advance reservations can be made.

REPORTS published in San Francisco that the Office of Economic Opportunity is financing a drive to establish co-operative stores in that area has brought a big protest from the National Federation of Independent Business.

"If this report is true it can only mean that the war on poverty is actually a war on business," said C. Wilson Harder, president of the federation in a protest filed with Sargent Shriver, director of the OEO.

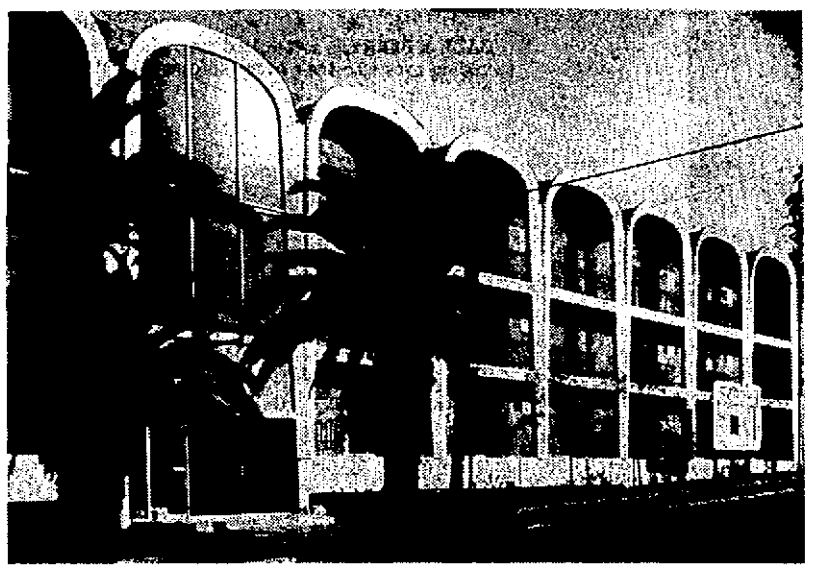
AUTOMOBILE DEALERS throughout the nation overwhelmingly favor newspapers as their main advertising media, Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp. announced after a survey.

The financing concern polled 1,500 dealers over the U.S. and found slightly more than 75% said newspapers were their favorites for advertising. Radio was second with 16% and television was third with 8%. Less than 1% considered some other method.

Paint Co. to Open 2 Branches



Standard Brands Paint Co. is negotiating for 11 additional acres adjacent to the main manufacturing plant and warehouse in Torrance as part of a planned $1,200,000 expansion.

This was reported to shareholders by Sid Greenberg, president, at the annual meeting.

Greenberg reported the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30, was a record-breaker in sales and profits and the three-month period ending Dec. 31 showed a 13% gain over the $5 million in sales the same period the previous year.

Two new stores will be opened this year, giving the firm 26 Standard Brands Paint retail stores.

Under the planned expansion the present plant of 225,000 square feet will be doubled.

NEAR FULL OCCUPANCY

Impressive foyer and landscaped inner court are marks of Laguna Vista, individually appointed balcony apartments at 500 Ximeno Ave., Long Beach, built by C. Robert Langslet Co., general contractors. Occupancy rate in recently completed all-electric building is rising. Other features: building-wide AM-FM sound system, subterranean parking, elevator, all outside views.

Mobil Announces Consolidations

The executive vice president of Mobil Oil Co., J. D. Moody, has announced the consolidation of four exploration and producing divisions into three regions and the consolidation of 28 districts into six new divisions.

Divisions now headquartered in Los Angeles, Houston and Midland, Tex., and in Denver, Colo., will become three new regions with headquarters at Houston, Denver, and Los Angeles, Moody said.

"There will be little immediate effect on district office personnel at Santa Fe Springs or at Bakersfield," said Moody.

He stated the consolidation will not substantially affect Mobil's field employees at or below the level of production supervisor and drilling supervisor.

* * * *

THE COMPANY executive said present district offices at Victoria, Tex., and Lafayette, La., would be closed.

Small staffs will be retained at other district offices which will be closed in the consolidation move, Moody said. To be closed are the offices at Durango, Colo.; Lubbock and Wichita Falls, Tex.; Roswell and Hobbs, N. M.; Wichita, Kan., and Jackson, Miss.

Owen H. Blexrud, president and general manager of Socony Mobil Oil of Canada, Ltd., said the Canadian company will consolidate six districts into a single exploration and producing organization with headquarters at Calgary.

Picturesque La Quinta Stirring to Exciting Life

On one side of Eisenhower Drive—in the desert community of La Quinta near Palm Springs—is a bit of the desert's past.

On the other side is its future.

On one side: desert stillness. On the other: buzz of power saws, hammering of nails and the roar of trucks carrying construction materials.

* * * *

WHAT'S BEHIND the latter?

The La Quinta Country Club and the La Quinta Development Company are responsible—the first by hurrying to completion a multimillion dollar clubhouse and the development company by launching its planned community of year-around homes, townhouses, weekenders, cluster houses and golf cottages.

The clubhouse, which will provide every modern convenience for its members, is scheduled for completion in March. Its styling will reflect the gracious manners and traditions of the 39-year-old La Quinta Hotel, located just across the street from the golf course.

* * * *

THE CLUBHOUSE is an impressive structure, even in its unfinished state, with 36,000 square feet under roof and another 3,335 square feet under arcades.

The golf facility is the La Quinta Country Club Championship Course — 18 holes spanning 6,904 yards of champion-challenging play, such as the Bob Hope Desert Classic there this weekend.

Other recreational facilities already available at La Quinta include tennis, riding, swimming and hiking in the mountains that slope down to the edge of the old hacienda grounds.

* * * *

FOR THOSE who want to live all or part of the year in this recreational paradise, La Quinta Development Company provides its wide range of living facilities and a good choice of sites are available now.

The "Islands," a planned unit development on a 21-acre area amidst the fairways, is under way.

Plans for the near future also include one-acre equestrian home sites and fairway townhouses.

MRS. WALTER JOSEPH DESMOND JR.

NUPTIAL MASS

W. J. Desmond Jr., Ann Roberson Wed

St. Anthony's Catholic Church was the setting for an 11 a.m. Nuptial Mass on Saturday uniting in marriage Ann Elizabeth Roberson and Walter Joseph Desmond Jr.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Owen Roberson, 5520 La Pasada St., was escorted by her father and wore a silk faille gown with empire waist and trimmed with Alencon lace. A crown of pearlized orange blossoms held her veil, and she carried spider chrysanthemums and stephanotis.

Her attendants included Mrs. Robert Stang, matron of honor, Marie Plusch, Emily Wiltse, Susan Coombes and Debra Clardy.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Joseph Desmond, 2505 E. First St., are parents of the bridegroom, who chose his brother, Dennis Desmond, as best man.

Seating guests were two other brothers, Timothy and John Desmond, Alan Roberson; brother of the bride; Robert Stang, Raymond Grady and Kinne McCabe.

* * * *

A RECEPTION at the church was followed by a buffet luncheon at the home of the bride's parents for the wedding party. The new Mr. and Mrs. Desmond are honeymooning in Northern California and will live in Los Angeles while he works on his Ph.D. in biochemistry at UCLA.

A graduate of Wilson High School and UCLA, the bride is doing graduate work at Long Beach State College. Also a Wilson High grad, the bridegroom received his degree from University of Notre Dame.

McDannel-Gilmore in rite

In the presence of 400 friends and family members, wedding lines were recited by Susan Lorraine Gilmore and William Wallace McDanneli III in a formal evening ceremony Friday in California Heights Methodist Church.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Palmer Gilmore, 1581 Ramillo Ave., was gowned in traditional white satin appliqued with jeweled roses and designed with bell skirt and a cathedral train which fell from her shoulders. Her silk illusion veil was caught to a crown of roses and seed pearls.

Her entourage, wearing moss green velveteen gowns, consisted of Kathleen Gilmore, maid of honor, Mmes. Robert Crosby, Wallace Laux, James Cross, Misses Lizbeth McDannel, Beverly Hoag, Julie Ann Gilmore with Deanne Gilmore as junior bridesmaid.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Jack Gibson Frost, 270 San Remo Drive, and Lt. Col William Wallace McDannel Jr. of Washington, D.C.

Handling best man duties was Robert L. Crosby, and serving as ushers were James Cross, Larry Drake, Roger Frost, Charles Brown, Douglas Schwarz and Jon Gilmore.

* * * *

FOLLOWING a champagne reception at the Pacific Coast Club, the newlyweds left for a honeymoon in San Francisco. They will live in Long Beach on their return.

The couple graduated from Wilson High School and Long Beach City College where she was president of Mahabharata and a member of Kassai. She is a senior at Whittier College and he at Long Beach State College. In 1962 she made her debut at the Assistance League Ball.

MRS. WILLIAM W. McDANNEL III

Stage fare --all free, is listed

INDUSTRY EXECUTIVE SPEAKS OUT

Nation's Shipbuilding Threatened

By JACK O. BALDWIN

If the proposal of the Interagency Maritime Task Force to build U. S. merchant ships in foreign shipyards is followed it would seriously affect the nation's shipyard mobilization base in times of emergency and undermine the industry, Edwin M. Hood, president of the Shipbuilders Council of America, charged in an address before the Propeller Club in San Diego.

Hood claimed the "build abroad" proposal would cost industries $5 billion and 1.4 billion man-hours of work during the next decade.

"Though American shipyards have suffered alternatively from a feast-or-famine existence, there was never any serious effort to tamper with the principle that we must always have available our own shipbuilding facilities, under our own jurisdiction, within our own borders," he said.

* * * *

HOOD CHARGED the Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation and the Maritime Administrator "... are openly advocating foreign construction of ships for the merchant marine."

"They would build 17 merchant ships annually in the U. S. shipyards and 37 each year in foreign shipyards," Hood claimed.

"They would, through governmental edict, automatically limit the growth of the U. S. Shipyard industry for many years to come, and could, through their actions, bring about circumstances which might destroy the art of merchant shipbuilding in this great country of ours," he said.

The speaker claimed that of the nine governmental agencies comprising the Interagency Maritime Task Force only two of the individuals serving on the force ever have been identified.

Hood posed the question:

"Could it be that they (the seven unidentified members) do not wish to be publicly numbered among those who would destroy a vital national industry?"

* * * *

THE SHIPBUILDERS Council president compared the emphasis Russia has placed on new ship construction with that of the U.S.

"As of Oct. 31, 1965 there were 464 vessels, totaling more than 4 million dead-weight tons under construction or on order for the Soviet Union. This listing included 298 dry cargo vessels, 111 tankers, seven bulk carriers and 48 miscellaneous vessels."

"As of the same date the U. S. had only 39 merchant ships totaling almost a half million dead weight tons under construction or on order. The Russians are outbuilding us by a ratio of 12-to-1 on numbers of ships and by 8-to-1 in tonnage," he alleged.

"While 100 ships were delivered to the 'hammer and sickle' fleet during 1965, only 16 were delivered by U. S. shipyards to the American merchant marine," Hood said.

* * * *

HOOD CLAIMED the Soviet Union is moving rapidly into control the oceans and trade routes of the world.

He said the Russians could "eventually eliminate free world shipping" by controlling ocean freight rates through the use of its expanding merchant ship fleet.

The shipyard official told the audience the proponents of foreign shipyards are enamored of the lower shipbuilding prices available overseas.

"Higher U. S. prices reflect added costs stemming from differences in vessel design philosophy, safety standards, contract procedures, government regulations and other factors which do not prevail abroad," Hood explained.

He estimated that relaxation of these requirements could reduce the price differential between U. S. and Foreign-built ships by as much as 45%.

L.B. Port Sets Pace Over '65

During the first quarter of the current fiscal year cargo shipments through the Port of Long Beach are up more than one-half million tons over the same period a year ago, Charles L. Vickers, port general manager, revealed last week.

"The port handled 3,781,672 tons during the first three months of our fiscal year to set a pace that could easily top last year's record of 13.6 million tons," Vickers said.

Value of the cargo handled by 549 vessels was $403 million, he added.

Tonnage figures released by Vickers showed the following monthly breakdown: July—1,060,925; August—1,422,906; September—1,299,741.

Nylok Co. to Open Plant in Torrance

A West Coast factory and sales office will be opened in Torrance in April by the Nylok Co., originators of the self-locking fastener.

From the 18,000-square-foot facility at 1501 Sepulveda Blvd., the firm will service the 13 Western states, according to John H. Heppy, manager of production.

The company, a division of United Shoe Machinery Corp., will operate a temporary sales, engineering and production facility at 611 Hawaii St. pending completion of its permanent plant.

Cabrillo District Architects Install Eight Officers

Richard Poper, partner in the firm of Jones & Poper, has been installed as president of the newly created Cabrillo District, American Institute of Architects.

The district includes the former Long Beach district and 32 adjacent communities.

Inducted to office with Poper were Robert Lane, vice president, of the Bellflower firm of Lane and Brodie; Edwin Ripperdan, secretary, with offices in Long Beach; Thomas Black, treasurer, of the San Pedro firm of Black and Pelusso.

ALSO installed at the ceremonies at Lafayette Hotel, Long Beach, were officers of the district's Women's Architectural League.

They are Mrs. William Locket, president; Mrs. Robert Schilling, vice president; Mrs. Ted Cushman, secretary, and Mrs. Irene McFall Pierce, treasurer.

Start Hamburger Cafe on Atlantic

Construction is underway at 1400 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach, on another McDonald's hamburger restaurant. This will be the firm's 84th unit in California.

Nationwide, the chain has 735 units in 44 states. The new restaurant will be built on the standard McDonald's design, using golden arches.

STEPS TO PROFITS

Stockholders' Rights Limited

(This is the fourth in a series of articles by an expert writer for Moody's Investors Service and distributed by NEA Special Services.)

By ROLAND GOODMAN

To have perspective on your position as a stockholder, you should understand how a corporation functions. Each corporation has a charter defining its scope, and is governed by a board of directors elected by the stockholders at an annual meeting.

The stockholders also vote on changes in the charter and capitalization, approve the selection of outside accountants, and hear reports on how things are going. All companies with widely traded stock issue printed annual reports before the meeting.

Most large companies permit stockholders to sign proxies which allow another person to cast their votes. This can become important if there is a dispute over the company's affairs. In any event, the small stockholder's voice in running the business is normally limited to his vote.

* * * *

HE HAS a right to know about major events that can affect the corporation's fortunes, but business secrets must be protected against the possibility that a rival company will buy a few shares and demand to know everything that is going on.

It is rare that a well-run company has an internal controversy which would give importance to the vote of the small shareowner. The directors choose the officers who carry on the day-to-day business and make decisions on dividends and major policy questions.

While the owner of 100 shares will receive courteous replies to sensible questions about what is going on in a million-share corporation, he is not in a good position to be consulted about important matters.

Thus, if the small investor is not satisfied with the way things are going in the company, his logical course is to sell his shares and reinvest his money in another corporation in which he has more confidence.

(NEXT: Reading the annual report.)

Escrow Assn. to Hear J. J. Lyman at Wed. Meeting

Recently installed officers of the Long Beach Escrow Association will be in charge of their first meeting Wednesday evening at Mr. C's Restaurant. Speaker will be John J. Lyman, vice president of the business division of Security Title Insurance Co.

New Officers include Marge Clearwater of Vivian Dodge Escrows, president; Lucy Weir, Security First National Bank, vice president; Merle Sorensen, Farmers & Merchants Bank, secretary, and Eunice Hallock, First Escrow and Title Co., treasurer.

Reservations for the dinner meeting should be made with Eunice Hallock, 9828 E. Flower St., Bellflower.

City National Bank Offers New System

AFTER DRIVE WITH EXAMINER, SCORES (WHETHER YOU PASS OR FAIL) ARE EXPLAINED ... Martha Lee Croxen, applicant, and Frank Perry, examiner

TRY THE STARTER

Don't push panic button

By BETTY WENTWORTH

Since this is the time of year when throngs descend on the State Department of Motor Vehicles (your license must be renewed before Feb. 1, remember, or you're in for a penalty), we decided to hurry over and see what was going on at the Long Beach office at 2627 Pacific Ave.

There were lots of people milling around but things seemed to be moving at a good orderly clip. We met Howard R. Link, manager of the local office, one of the largest in the state.

He told us that last year—between Jan. 1 through October 31 — 10,629,227 vehicles were registered in California, including autos, trucks, trailers and motorcycles.

One-third of the total, he said, are in Los Angeles and Orange counties!

THESE ARE the vehicles that speed, crawl, joy-ride, meander, commute and generally clog our travel arteries.

And responsible for each one is a driver.

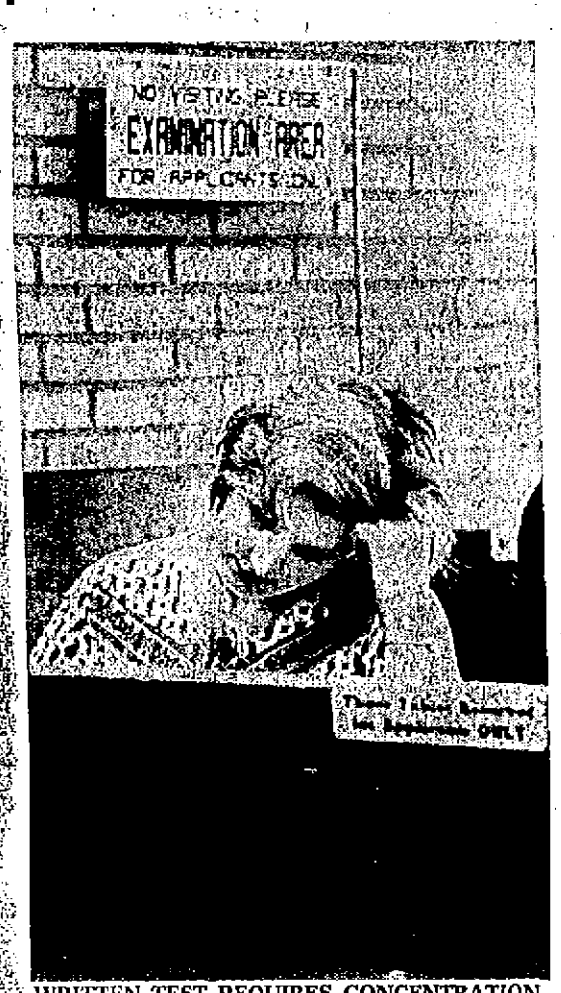
As of October there were 9,763,021 licensed drivers in the state—almost one per car registered.

We turned our attention to some of these self-same drivers who were queued up in front of us getting their licenses, new or renewals:

They were a real cross-section. Young, old, men, women, teenagers, homely, pretty—and four out of every five would walk out with permission to join the traffic stream.

YOU'RE WONDERING nervously about that fifth person who doesn't get his license? Mr. Link told us about him.

In October, out of 22% or 76,295 who failed, it breaks down this way: written test, 37,775; actual driving, 30,370; oral (some applicants who can't read may still demonstrate their ability to understand signs), 1,969; vision, 6,181.



Why did they fail?

If you haven't been tested lately, we'll refresh your mind. First you're given the written part—and if you haven't studied the vehicle code, you MAY be in trouble.

If you pass it and your vision test, you're turned over to a driving examiner with whom you'll go on a 20-minute spin.

You may as well confess that the prospect of said jaunt produces an immediate, strong and adverse reaction. Damp palms, maybe? Sudden recall of urgent business elsewhere, such as pasting in that backlog of blue chip stamps? Buck up and read on, please.

"ON THAT DRIVE practically everyone's nervous," said Frank Perry, the examiner we talked to. "It ranges from mild apprehension to outright panic. So the first thing we're trained to do is attempt to put the driver more at ease, so he'll be relaxed and give his best performance."

WRITTEN TEST REQUIRES CONCENTRATION ... Mrs. Rhea S. Wood

What causes applicants the most trouble? Perry said there are three main areas:

● First is the blind intersection with restricted visibility. The driver tends to approach it too fast (speed limit here is 15 mph); everything else is then out of sequence. The foot should be resting lightly on the brake, and the driver must look first right, then left.

● Second hazard, according to Perry, is unsafe lane changing. The driver must signal for 100 feet with hand or indicator, and should LOOK back, not just into rear view mirror.

● Third, offset backing—the public calls it parallel parking—is the most disturbing to the driver, being a skill maneuver, but not as dangerous done improperly as, say, failure to observe a signal, or speeding, and therefore doesn't take off as many points.

Other traps he mentioned: driving with one hand resting on window frame (if you don't have both hands on wheel when the unexpected happens you won't be as mobile), and not coming to a full stop at a signal (don't let your car inch forward).

YOU ARE REQUIRED to get 70 out of a 100 points to pass. And your highly experienced examiner IS watching like the trained hawk he is. He knows the far-reaching results of his job.

In his driver's manual it says, "Yours is a job of tremendous responsibility because the person you examine, in a sense, places his life in your hands: a responsibility because the lives of other highway users may be endangered by the action of the driver you examine.

"You are battling one of America's greatest social problems, that of traffic accidents. You are the one who can make sure that drivers who apply for a license possess the necessary knowledge, skill and physical ability to drive safely."

Resounding phrases, but they're deadly serious. Every applicant has the same driving test, and each of us should want a test that tells whether we're driving properly. You may take the results of your test to check through.

We know. You said it wasn't your idea to take a test in the first place. In fact, there was that urgent business of bringing your Christmas card list up-to-date, or whatever.

We've dwelt on some sobering facts, but they won't hurt—they're meant to help us not to be hurt.

Most of us drive constantly and will continue to do so.

Car manufacturers are aiding us with their increasing emphasis on safety features.

So, heads up! Go on in and take that test.

He insures success; try his lamb turnover

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
I, P-T Food Editor

Professionally he believes (and for good reason) that one should insure against the future. He's from the "show me" state, too, and an avid traveler . . . also for good reason. Today's Chef of the Week, James A. Worsham, is president of both Worsham & Associates, Insurance, and Worsham & Associates Travel Bureau.

Though he was born in Illinois, he spent most of his life in St. Louis, Mo. He graduated from Richmond Heights High School and attended Jefferson College and Washington University, where he majored in commerce and finance.

It was 26 years ago that he started an insurance business in St. Louis. In 1949 he came to California for vacation, liked what he saw—returned to Missouri—sold out—returned to Long Beach and Worsham was again in the insurance business.

HE AND HIS BRIDE of a year, the former Pauline Dilday, both expert students of history and geography, have just recently returned from a nine week tour in which they back-tracked to the Orient three times, Africa twice, and Australia once.

When the family gathers for special occasions, there are nine younguns ranging in ages from 24 to 11. They add up to seven boys and two girls. The girls, by the way, share the same birthdates in different years. They represent the University of California, Berkeley, California State College, Long Beach, Poly High and several grammar schools.

A MEMBER of the Armed Forces Committee of the Chamber of Commerce and the Boy Scouts Committee, Worsham is active in the Uptown Optimist Club, Scottish Rite and El Bekai Shrine. A founder member, he has ridden with Long Beach Mounted Police since 1950.

As a family the Worshams enjoy membership in the Long Beach Yacht Club and spend much time aboard their cabin cruiser, "The Foray."

His recipe today for Lamb Rice Turnovers is straight from Jordan.

LAMB-RICE TURNOVERS

½ cup salad oil
2 lbs. cubed lean lamb

JAMES A. WORSHAM

2 large onions, sliced
1 head cauliflower, sliced
1½ tblsp. salt
1½ tsp. allspice, ground
2 cups rice (uncooked)
1 green pepper, sliced (optional)

Pan-brown lamb in oil in large kettle. Saute onions and cauliflower in oil and add to lamb. Add 1 quart AND 1 cup BOILING water, salt, and allspice. Heat until water boils again. Add rice slowly so all of rice is covered by water. Boil 5 minutes. Cover, reduce heat and simmer about 20 minutes, or until rice is tender and all water absorbed. Turn over onto a large, hot platter, so that lamb is on top of mound of rice. Garnish with strips of green pepper or cooked frozen peas if desired. Serve as a main dish. Serves 4-6.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD

False front wearing thin

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

Our friends think I'm a "very lucky woman." My husband is charming and everyone (men and women) thinks he's a wonderful man. I'm horribly tired of keeping up this front. I am far from lucky; I'm perfectly miserable.

My husband of many years tells me that our children are not "his." He doesn't openly accuse me because he "won't have people feeling sorry for him," but he KNOWS (says he) our three children were not sired by him.

I've always been a good wife and mother. I never ran around and there is no possible reason for him to doubt my loyalty.

How does a wife handle a thing like this? Keep up the front? Leave him and have everyone think "she's too stupid to know when she has a good (?) thing?"—BEWILDERED.

DEAR BEWILDERED:

It depends on what is best for you and the children and how much you can take. There are many families that appear ideal from the outside but are rotten on the inside. However, when a wife leaves a husband, there is always some question in people's minds about the man — and, many times, more people know the truth than you think.

It's still true that "you can fool some of the people most of the time but not all the people all the time."

You do whatever you think best for you and your children.—M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I met and fell in love with a wonderful guy. My problem is that he is 40 and I'm just 24. Friends say I would be making a mistake to marry him but I love him so much I am just not alive when we're apart. Some think it is a "father image" but that isn't true. I really love the guy.

Is age that important? Will our love fade when we are older? Will I resent the fact that I am still young when he is no longer the "fun loving" person he is now?

I would appreciate some help in this because I am going to have to make the Big Decision soon. Your thoughts and those of your readers will be most welcome.—IN LOVE.

DEAR IN LOVE:

No one can accurately predict just how much an age difference will affect a marriage. It depends on the individuals involved. The only thing I can tell you is that you are taking a bigger chance than you would be if you were about the same age.

When the bloom has worn off (and it always does!) and you've been married 10 or 15 years, the age difference will show up much more. He will be ready for the fireside long before you are but, I repeat, it all depends on the people involved.

Maybe some of our readers can give you first hand experience and advice. — M.M.

Big Admiral Facility for Mexico City

CHICAGO — Construction has begun of a new manufacturing facility for Admiral de Mexico in Mexico City, the subsidiary's parent company, Admiral Corp. announced.

The new one story brick plant and 5½-acre plot of land will represent an investment of $800,000. Radios, stereo phonographs, television receivers and automatic record changers will be manufactured initially, as well as a variety of components for these products.

Admiral de Mexico produced its first television sets and radios in February 1955 and shortly afterward achieved first place in TV sales in the Mexican market, a position it has retained 11 years.

Must File Reports

Monday is the deadline for filing California Unemployment Insurance wage reports and contribution returns for the fourth quarter of 1965, warns W. P. Nebergall, auditor in charge of the department's Long Beach office, 1315 Pine Ave.

MRS. POND (L.), MRS. PORTER, MRS. KEENAN . . . Great Accomplishment

Three Career Women at Buffums' Retiring

If there's no place in the business world for career women, then three women at Buffums' Long Beach store have been out of place for a total of 95 years.

But, of course, there's only infrequent oppositon to women in the business circles in this era.

It was still a bit rigid, however, in 1932 when Mrs. Rena Keenan began at Buffums' as a sales clerk; in 1935 when Mrs. Mabel Porter began there as a seamstress, or in 1936 when Mrs. Jessie Pond went to Buffums' as a "temporary" fitter.

All three will retire this week.

Mrs. Keenan stayed to become buyer of main floor accessories, personally searching the world markets for new fashions.

* * * *

MRS. PORTER stayed to become supervisor of the all-important alteration room where the store's noted penchant for pleasing the customer gets the last of a succession of checks.

Mrs. Pond's 30-year "temporary" stay saw her rise to the store's exacting position of buyer of foundations.

Mrs. Keenan first worked as a clerk in a Boston store and when her husband, John, was transferred by the Navy to the West Coast, she followed him to Long Beach and on Oct. 8, 1932, made her first sale in the infants department and her Buffums' career was under way.

Later, Mrs. Keenan was named assistant to the buyer, then buyer of downstairs lingerie and made her first buying trip to New York.

Her last such trip was No. 62.

* * * *

MEANWHILE, in a department not far removed, Mrs. Pond began giving fittings in foundations and, after turning down buyership opportunities in two other departments, was asked by her own section buyer, Miss Katherine Hinton, to accompany her on a trip.

Mrs. Pond became Miss Hinton's assistant and, upon the latter's promotion to merchandise manager, became "the buyer."

Through the years, Buffums' executives estimate Mrs. Pond has purchased over $8 million worth of foundations, girdles and bras.

* * * *

MRS. PORTER was quietly shaping her career, too, and Buffums' estimates 7,000 garments are processed through her department annually.

Career highlights:

Mrs. Keenan — Three European and three trips to the Orient in her search for fashions of value.

Mrs. Pond — Callouses on the inside of her little fingers from years of lacing up dayslwhen (two-piece) corsets.

Mrs. Porter — Altering a wedding gown almost as the bride began her trek down the aisle because the date had been suddenly advanced.

Home-O-Rama Will Pick Queen Feb. 14

In keeping with Valentine's Day, the Long Beach Builders Exchange will select a Home-O-Rama Sweetheart at its general membership meeting Monday, Feb. 14, at 6 p.m. in the French Room of the Lafayette Hotel.

The winner will reign over the annual home show scheduled March 2-6 in the Long Beach Arena.

George Colouris, producer of the Home-O-Rama which is held under sponsorship of the Builders Exchange, said selection of the sweetheart and two princesses will be made by a builders' group committee.

Each will receive an array of prizes from exhibitors in the show, the Home-O-Rama management and the Builders Exchange.

"SHOWCASE for Modern Living" is the theme of the home show which will provide the public an opportunity to see the latest in furnishings, building materials, decorative items, appliances and other products of interest to home owners and prospective homeowners.

Don Anderson, general chairman, and Lou Anfinson, co-chairman, said this year's show will emphasize sections, allowing visitors to see furnishings and appliances in individual settings such as kitchens, bedrooms, bathrooms, family and living rooms.

Set Sales Course for Health Insurance

Formation of a local class in the Life Underwriter Training Council's course in health insurance sales has been announced by Harvey L. Harms of Provident Life & Accident.

He was recently appointed committee chairman by Donald M. Tippett, CLU, of Massachusetts Mutual, president of the Long Beach Association of Life Underwriters.

Enrollments for the 12-week course will be accepted to Feb. 1.

Japanese-inspired retirement home on St. Croix, U. S. Virgin Islands.

Virgin Islands of U.S. boom as tourist spot

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

Christopher Columbus, bearing a southwest course through the Caribbean on his second voyage to America in 1493, unexpectedly sighted a group of uncommonly beautiful islands. As soft trade winds caressed the lush, tropical growth that stretched inland from the glistening white beaches, he was struck by the primeval, untouched scene before him.

He named them the Virgin Islands.

Last year, the half million tourists who visited the U. S. Virgin Islands discovered that the explorer knew beauty when he saw it. A still larger number is expected this year, the most on a vacation, others to take up a prolonged residence, or retire.

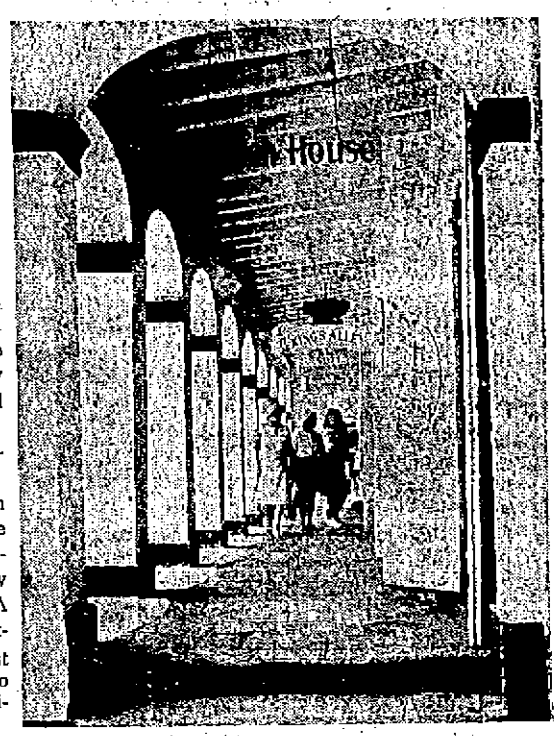
Many of the visitors come from California. To get there, they generally fly from New Orleans or Miami to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and hop an interisland plane for the last 50 miles due east to Charlotte Amalie (a-MAL-ya), the lovely capital tucked away behind a spectacular harbor on St. Thomas, one of about 30 islands, islets and cays in the U. S. Virgins (the British Virgin Islands lie directly east of the American group).

* * * *

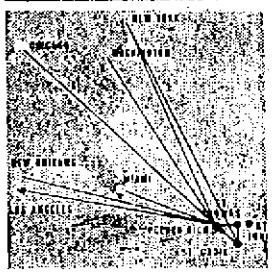
VACATIONISTS from the eastern states often arrive on cruise ships. Before the winter season is over, 182 tourist vessels will drop anchor at Charlotte Amalie, another 31 at the nearby island of St. Croix, thereby adding to the U. S. Virgin Islands' claim as the "cruise capital of the Caribbean."

Because the islands are a U. S. possession, there is no annoying red tape on arrivals and departures.

"Once here," Gov. Ralph M. Paiewonsky points out, "they discover a wealth of natural advantages to keep them happy and relaxed. Our guaranteed weather, sunny skies, balmy breezes, famous white sand beaches with clear blue water, free port shopping and old world charm are a dependable part of our tourist-endorsed reputation."



Temperatures range from 70 to 90 degrees the year around, softened by trade winds. Humidity is low. Hurricanes are a rarety. Such a climate is conducive to golf and other sports activities at their finest. The passages between the islands are famous for sports fishing.



* * * *

SHOPS on the three principal islands, St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John, are the only ones in the world outside of American Samoa and Guam where Americans may still buy up to $200 retail value in merchandise and a gallon of liquor—duty free. From other overseas ports U. S. residents are allowed but $100 in such purchases and a fifth of a gallon of liquor.

In growing up from its former "Danish storehouse of the Caribbean" days (the U. S. purchased the islands from Denmark in 1917), St. Thomas has turned old warehouses with three-foot-thick stone walls into a delightful maze of walkways lined with colorful shops containing the finest merchandise from all parts of the world.

Prices are low. For instance, an ounce bottle of Chanel No. 5 perfume is $12.55; a place setting of Royal Copenhagen china, $10; an Omega Seamaster watch, $61; a Nikon F. Photomic camera, $263. A fifth of Virgin Islands rum costs $1.25; Chevas Regal scotch, $4.75; Beefeater gin, $1.85; and so on. You must carry your liquor home; you cannot send it.

* * * *

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, with about 18,000 inhabitants, is the largest town. Christiansted and Frederiksted, Danish colonial in atmosphere, are on St. Croix. Two-thirds of the third main island, St. John, belongs to the Virgin Islands National Park. With camping facilities, it offers much for outdoor lovers.

About 85% of the U. S. Virgin Islands population is Negro.

* * * *

WHAT ABOUT retirement here?

Says Sally Cramer, deputy commissioner of the Virgin Islands Department of Commerce: "Our best advice to Californians is to take a preliminary exploratory trip before becoming uprooted. St. Croix, or any of the Virgin Islands, is not everyone's cup of tea and it can be an expensive mistake because of the distance involved."

In general, she points out, living costs run 15% higher than Washington. Food is higher because all food is imported. Depending upon location, monthly rentals run from $150 up on rooms or small apartments, $275 to $600 for homes. Land costs run from $2,000 an acre to $25,000, also depending on location. Several housing projects are being built.

Electricity and taxes are low. Water shortage is a threat; most islanders catch rainwater in cisterns which serves until spring. Then, if there are three months without rain, like last year, they buy local well water and watch their plants fade.

* * * *

HORSEBACK riding and roller skating are minor sports, but golf will become a major one after February with the opening of Rockefeller's 18-hole course being completed in Frederiksted. Four community concerts are given during the year in Frederiksted, and there is an active theater group. There are good schools. Movies change four times a week at the one theater. TV comes from St. Thomas and Puerto Rico.

But many do come to get away from rigorous winters or for health reasons. St. Croix is declared to be a great spot for people with arthritis and bursitis.

Others, says Miss Cramer, come to get away from hectic lives in the states. All get caught up in some way with the community life, either through local investments, civic groups, or social activities.

"And a few," she points out, "come to retire which, according to Webster, is 'to withdraw; retreat; recede from active life.' "

Bonefishing big sport in U.S. Virgins

ST. JOHN, U.S. Virgin Islands—Bonefishing, a word to make light-tackle fishermen salivate, is just now coming into its own here.

"The fightingest fish, pound-for-pound, on light tackle in the world" has been long known in the transparent waters of the shallow banks and flat surrounding St. John, St. Thomas, and St. Croix, as well as Virgin Gorda in the British Virgin Islands, but like the long neglected deep-sea fishing potential of these waters, inshore fishing here has not received the attention it merited due to the lack of expert guides and experience.

Now one of the best in the business, Capt. A. T. Horne, is not only exploring all of the potential areas and taking out parties himself but he is training natives of these islands to become qualified guides. This is developing new employment here and a new lure for vacationers to these islands in every month of the year. Horne was brought down here early last year.

* * * *

VIRTUALLY the same thing happened in tapping the great billfishing potential here. Capt. Johnny Harms was brought down from the Florida sportsfishing world in 1963 together with two sleek big game fishing cruisers by Caneel Bay Plantation through contributions of Laurence S. Rockefeller to give the Islands another resource. It wasn't long before a 814-pound blue marlin was hauled in by John Battles aboard Harms' boat establishing a new world's record and turning promise to fact for big game fishing in the Virgin Islands.

Bonefishing and tarpon fishing is good "365 days a year in the Virgin Islands," Capt. Horne says. However, he candidly notes that October, November and December are "slack months" because the water on the flats is deeper then. Low tide is ideal for bonefishing.

And Horne explains that any fisherman who has never seen one of these quietly-moving battlers stand on its tail has no idea of the excitement waiting him. A bonefish, minding his own business and not bothering anyone, is galvanized into pure fury when he discovers someone is trying to fool him at snack time.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Knife-&-fork city

Seven miles south of the Russian River, in western Sonoma County, sits the tiny hamlet of Occidental, farfamed as a center of Italian cooking on the grand scale.

Legal service

The first legal advice service for English-speaking tourists in a foreign country has been established in Mexico City, the Mexican National Tourist Council reports, to assist visitors who may have problems with local laws.

February is festival month in Southland

Tourists who spend a billion dollars a year in the Southland, and local gadders who like such things, will find February a month of unusual and colorful festivals, according to the calendar issued by the All-Year Club last week.

There will be an art colony festival, date festival, carrot carnival, and a gold rush celebration called Whiskey Flat Days. The All-Year Club, community tourist promotion organization, uses the colorful events to attract visitor revenues.

Laguna Beach holds its annual Winter Festival, Feb. 11-20, ten days of drama, sidewalk art shows, sand sculpturing, art carnival, arts and crafts auction, daily surf fishing derby, lawn bowling, cricket, an Indian parade and Indian arts and crafts exhibit, and a backstage tour of the famous Pageant of the Masters.

* * * *

DAILY camel and ostrich races are a hilarious feature of the National Date Festival to be held Feb. 18-27 at Indio, heart of the "Arabia of America" date-growing region.

Youngsters will fashion their own 4 by 6-foot Camellia decorated floats and propel them in a parade at 10 a.m. Feb. 26 during the 22nd annual Camellia Festival at Temple City, camellia nursery center. There will be a Camellia king, queen, two princesses and two princes—all of them first graders.

The annual Camellia Show will be held Feb. 26 and 27 at the world's biggest camellia planting—100,000 bushes and trees in peak bloom—at Descanso Gardens in La Canada, supplemented by thousands of choice cut flowers.

CARROTS will be tossed to spectators watching the parade during the Carrot Carnival at Holtville, the "World Carrot Capital," Feb. 16-20.

Also in Imperial Valley, Niland will hold its Tomato Festival Friday through next Sunday, and the California Mid-Winter Fair will be held at the county fairgrounds at the town of Imperial Feb. 25 to March 6.

Kernville, beside Lake Isabella, will hold Whiskey Flat Days, Feb. 17-20, to celebrate its gold rush period when a whiskey merchant set up a bar on a plank atop two barrels.

"Vacations in Britain"

Your guide to visiting 4 countries for the price of one

THIS new British Travel book has over 60 color photographs showing the pageantry and beauty of the British Isles. It even has a special section on how much your trip will cost. Here's a fact-filled guide to four excitingly different countries—England, Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. And you can visit them all for the price of one.

When you purchase a round trip ticket to London, you can fly to Glasgow and Edinburgh, Scotland and Belfast, Northern Ireland at no extra cost. Wales is easily reached, too. Cardiff is only 135 miles from London by rail or car.

So clip the coupon for your copy of this fine free book. Contents include:

What to see and do in London. Famous and lesser-known sights you shouldn't miss—plus a map.

Theatre and Music. Plays, concerts and festivals in Britain. London alone has 50 theatres—twice as many as New York.

Historic Towns. A guide to ancient towns, Norman cathedrals, and medieval castles.

Country Houses and Gardens. Lovely traditional gardens surrounding the stately homes of Britain.

Seeing Britain by Road. Modern motorways—and scenic byways that wander everywhere.

Plus special sections on vacations in Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland—and many other facts and hints on how to make your vacation in Britain a huge success.

Send the coupon now for this valuable free book and see your travel agent.

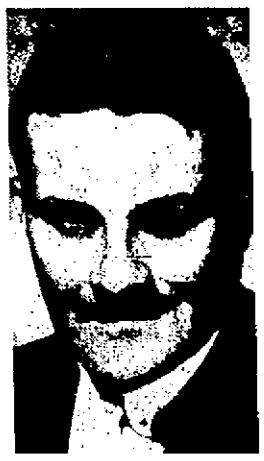
Bertea Products in Orange County Move

Marking the first step of moving Bertea Products of Pasadena to larger facilities near the Orange County Airport, the firm has established an advance engineering office at 4500 Campus Drive, Newport Beach, in the University Plaza Engineering Office Building.

Some of Bertea's key engineering personnel are staffing the office and other electronic and electro-mechanical engineers are being sought in the area.



The plant, which will employ over 1,000, is due for completion by August. It is being constructed in the Irvine Industrial Complex adjacent to the airport near the intersection of Von Karmen Boulevard and the San Diego Freeway.

All of Bertea's administrative, engineering and production departments will be combined into the new facility which will contain 160,000 square feet.

* * * *

BERTEA PRODUCTS was founded in 1939 by Alex Bertea. It has been producing highly sophisticated electro-hydraulic servomechanisms over 25 years. Sales now are at a $15 million annual rate.

Typical of the company's aircraft products are flap controls, nose wheel steering valves, stabilizer controls, main landing gear selector valves, aileron actuators, rudder controls and flight controls.

BUSY IN HIS SPARE TIME

Hughes-Fullerton Exec Aids Small Businesses

FULLERTON — More than a score of small businesses in Orange County, whose owners are faced with the unexpected and often vexing peripheral problems crucial to successful administration, are receiving skilled spare-time consultation from an interested official of Hughes Aircraft Co. here.

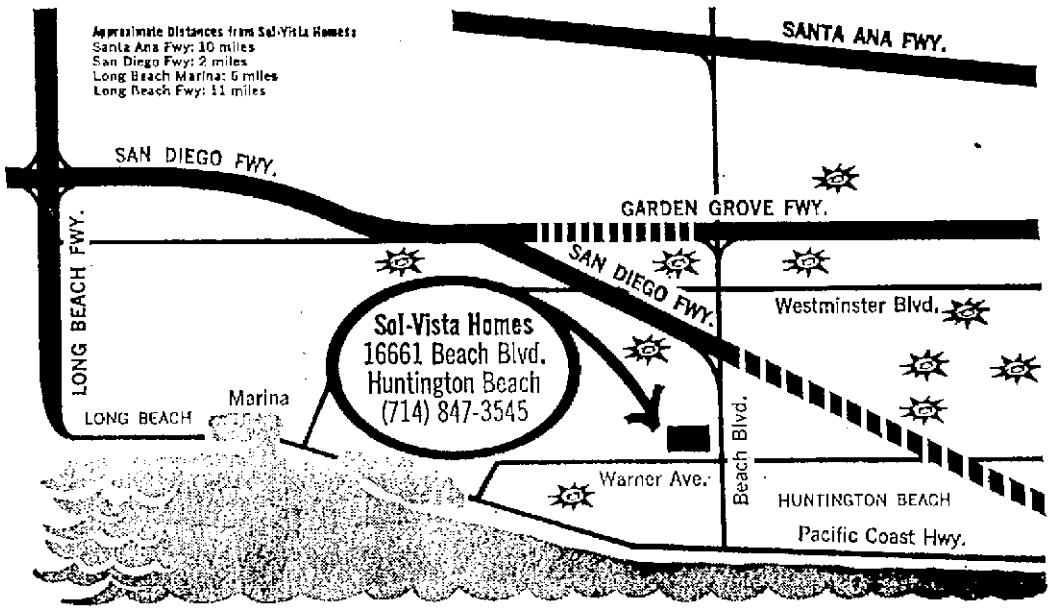
C. E. White, director of administration at Hughes-Fullerton, has devoted countless evenings and weekends during the past year to providing free consultation on business practices to enthsiastic, but often unexperienced, newcomers in the business field.

"BOTH LARGE and small businesses have common problems in production, promotion and administration," White said. "The big firms, however, are able to hire staffs of experts in each activity area. The small business owner must cope with these problems on his own." White said many small businesses fail each year not because they lack a better product or service but simply because their owners cannot succesfully solve the problems of marketing, financing or producing that product or service.

According to White, some businessmen use baseball or golf or a hobby as an outside interest. He said he finds the same challenge and escapism in tackling the problems of small businesses.

THE 14 FIRMS counseled locally by White include a broasted chicken shop, a precision machine shop, a door-to-door selling enterprise, a retail outlet, a contractor, a taco stand, and a small, automotive-repair firm.

In his spare-time effort, White is active in a new U.S. Small Business Administration program called SCORE, which stands for Service Corps of Retired Executives. While not waiting to retire, White has joined more than a hundred Southern California businessmen serving as SCORE volunteers, by lending their business know-how to struggling businessmen who are having management problems and want help.



He has found that more people "need management than money in operating a small business."

Lends $592,986 on L.B. Realty

The Prudential Insurance Co. invested $592,986 in Long Beach real estate loans in 1965, it was announced today by Edward J. Ahearn, Southern California regional investments manager for the company's mortgage loan department.

The loans for 1965 were $257,986 for residential purposes, and $335,000 for commercial and industrial loans.

London becomes Europe's biggest gambling center

A good many visitors land at London Airport these days resolved to carry home more money than they had when they arrived!

For London, in 1965, was the biggest gambling center in Europe.

In February, 1963, the British Parliament passed into law the Betting, Lotteries and Gaming Act. Its intention was to rationalize and regularize gambling in Britain and to modernize a multitude of old laws.

Its effect, however, was to spark off the biggest gambling boom seen by Europe in a centry. The new law laid down that gambling could take place where the odds favored all players equally.

Thus, at the host of gambling clubs which mushroomed, the cry was heard at the start of each game, "Messieurs, qui veut la banque?" In effect, who would like to take the bank? If a player can afford it, he is offered the chance of taking the bank in games where it has a better chance of winning than the players.

In such games where the house has no part in the proceedings and the guests play each other, the gambling clubs make a charge—and here again they score over their rivals on the Continent.

* * * *

IN LONDON it is the practice to make a charge on each player at the start of every game. On the Continent a percentage is taken of a player's winnings. London gambling clubs thereby encourage bigger betting to make better use of the player wins on the Continent the more he must pay the house as his fee.

The range of games offered for the visitor's delectation is immense. Chemin-de-fer, roulette, blackjack, craps, boule, poker, baccarat, bridge, backgammon—the lot, it seems. Experts estimate that with the exception of bridge and blackjack, the odds in favor of the unitiated winning money are about the same at pretty well every game.

A large number of clubs are hunting for the gambler's business in London today, and they dangle a sparkling variety of inducements in front of his eyes.

* * * *

DURING ONE cut-throat spell of competition, a top club was offering a Rolls Royce as a prize to the gambler with the biggest succession of winning coups. Another offered sumptious banquets, free.

The biggest gambling centers provide free drinks, and at remarkably low prices serve some of the choicest food to be found in London. Others give free parking, serve free snacks, have supper dancing or tempt the visitor by suggesting that theirs is the club used by the stars.

Most clubs offer special membership arrangements to overseas visitors who carry their passports as proof, according to British Overseas Airways Corporation travel advisors.

Monarch of the gambling scene is undoubtedly Crockford's, a world-renowned club situated in elegant

TRAVEL and RESORTS

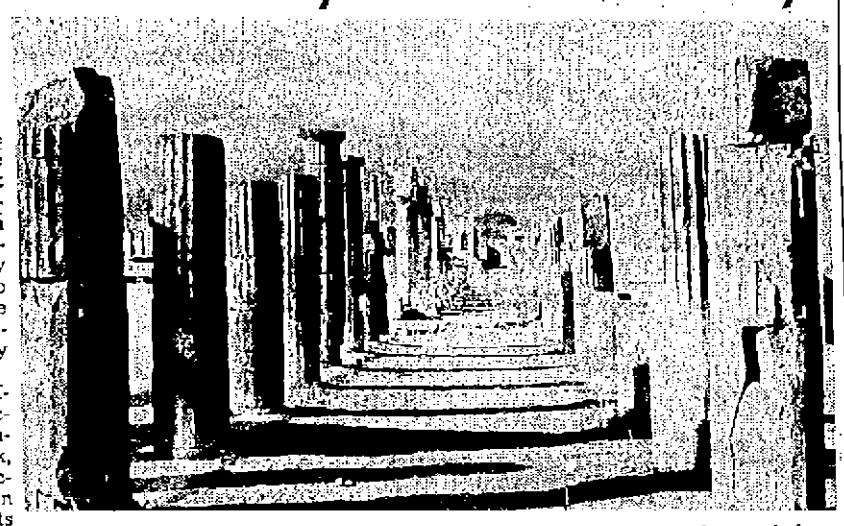
Carlton House Terrace and a near neighbor of the British Foreign Secretary's official residence. Gambling has been Crockford's forte for more than 100 years, but up until 1963 it was strictly between the wealthy members and was confined to permitted games such as bridge, or scatterbrained bets on anything from pugilists to pennyfarthing bicycles.

* * * *

FOR THE SLIGHTLY less earnest gambler, many of the night clubs offer a roulette wheel or two, with perhaps a $5.60 limit on bets, designed to amuse rather than abuse the wallet. Many of them offer a 25 cent minimum stake. Noteworthy among these are the Cromwellian Club, Cromwell Road, which has a complete gaming room, with limits on all its tables of about $5.60 or $8.40; and the Blue Angel, Berkeley Street, where a couple of roulette tables offer a rest from drinking, dancing and the first-rate cabaret.

Both these clubs have limits on the stakes, and each offers some of the most reasonably priced food to be found in any London night spot.

The same Gaming Act which made gambling also permits betting shops. These have sprouted in every main street and allow the horse fancier to put his money on a nag with efficiency and without looking over his shoulder for a blue-helmeted policeman.



ON THE EDGE OF SUCCESS? That little white ball has a will of its own as it skips around the whirring face of a London roulette wheel. (BOAC photo.)

BINGO is all the rage in Britain's provincial towns. Former cinema and dance halls now sport giant signs enticing players, and queues form outside early in the day. The stakes may be somewhat lower than a gambler is used to, but the enthusiasm of the players is a lot more evident.

Also, inevitably, one-armed bandits can be found in clubs throughout the country.

What about the sort of player who likes to gamble, but who hates to lose his money? There is an answer for him too. It's the British Government's unique contribution to the gambling rush, Premium Bonds. Regular players stand to win prizes up to $14,000; and any time they feel like it, they can just pick up their chips and walk away!

The many faces of Italy

POMPEII, the city where time came to a halt in 79 A. D. as Vesuvius exploded in a gigantic eruption. Today the tourist can wander through these ruins. (BOAC photo.)

Italy has probably more faces than any other country in Europe. They include those of the Roman Empire and the Renaissance . . . those of Grand Opera, industry and fashion . . . and those of sun, lakes and mountains.

The capital of these many Italies, Rome, is just two hours from London by British Overseas Airways Corp. jetliner. Bathed in its famous rosy golden light Rome is both stylish and rich . . . and THE Eternal City. Throw a coin into the famous Fountain of Trevi and, legend has it, you will certainly return one day.

The Vatican, the fount of Roman Catholicism, is a city within a city. The Pope appears on his balcony at St. Peter's Square every Sunday and Wednesday at noon (except at the height of summer when he resides at Castelgandolfo, south of Rome).

Italy's loveliest city is without a doubt Florence, a jewel of the Renaissance, set in the Tuscan hills. And the most romantic is certainly Venice, with streets of water spanned by delicate bridges.

TO THE SOUTH, sun-washed Naples is within easy reach of the volcano, Vesuvius, and the city of Pompeii which it ruined. To the north, Milan is worth visiting for its beautiful "wedding cake" cathedral as well as La Scala, its incomparable opera house.

The Italian economy is closely geared to the tourist industry and, as a result, English is widely spoken. The climate is clear and sunny, and Rome has an average temperature of 75 degrees.

The country's staple food is pasta with a basis of flour and water in various forms, such as spaghetti, ravioli, tagliatelli, lasagna, pasta-ciutta. There is plenty of fresh fruit. Italian ice cream is superb — probably the world's best.

ITALY has a tremendous variety of wines — among them the incomparable Frascati which is best drunk in Frascati, a small town about 12 miles from Rome, because it doesn't travel well.

Shopping is a pleasure all over Italy, and Rome is one of the world's foremost fashion centers. There are many expert tailors, dressmakers, shoemakers and knitters, who work quickly and at reasonable prices. Outstanding buys are couture clothes, silk shirts and ties, gloves and suits, and knit sweaters and suits.

Few countries are as attractive as Italy — and few hosts so gay, gallant and charming as the Italians.

Try your luck at gold panning

Some 100 years ago, Wickenburg, northwest of the all-year resort of Phoenix in the Valley of the Sun, was a thriving gold town. Today it's a thriving dude ranch locale that hasn't forgotten its colorful past.

That means the annual Gold Rush Days, slated Feb. 11-13 when the whole town and thousands of visitors get in the frontier spirit with a batch of exciting events. The opening shot comes with panning for gold in the Hassayampa River, and this activity keeps up for the duration of the festival. The Gold Shirt Gang hauls in gold-bearing ore beforehand, and visitors can keep — without charge—all the gold they can pan out of the rich gravel.

While the gold-panning attracts most tourists, there is plenty of other activities every day — from miner's jack-drilling contests to parades and old-time costume balls. Indeed, it's one of the choice family events during the current season in Arizona's Valley of the Sun.

Mardi Gras tour by rail

The 20th annual Mardi Gras "Fun-tour" to New Orleans, under direction of John Sousa, departs Los Angeles at 11:30 a.m. Feb. 16 aboard the Santa Fe Chief. Return arrival will be Feb. 26.

A feature of the train will be a special lounge fitted out as a "fun car." Programmed for the 10-day trip are games and events, reserved parade seats in New Orleans, dinner parties, sightseeing, a Mississippi Riverboat trip, and visit to New Orleans' French Quarter.

Airline offers Florida bonanza

Southern Californians may visit dozens of Florida resorts for the price of an airline ticket to Miami under a fare proposal filed by National Airlines with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Travelers from the Long Beach-Orange County area may make free stopovers at any or all points in Florida that are in line of travel to their destination.

The individual round-trip excursion fare between Los Angeles and Miami is $220. Cities to be visited must be designated prior to departure.

SWING WITH SPRING IN THE ISLANDS OF HAWAII

March through early June is the "in" time to visit our mid-Pacific paradise. The pace is easier, the enjoyment bigger. You have your widest choice of luxurious accommodations in all price ranges. It's a balmy, carefree time . . . Hawaii's ideal season!

IN MARCH, and continuing into April, Hawaii's outstanding Japanese celebration—the Cherry Blossom Festival—holds sway. Nine weeks of exciting pageants, sports, ceremonial events.

IN APRIL, highlight is the Merry Monarch Festival at Hilo on the Orchid Isle of Hawaii. A gala, five-day festival honoring King Kalakaua. There are Pa'u riders, a Coronation Pageant, arrival of the S.S. Lurline, a Royal Court, contests, paniolos, and a broadcast of "Hawaii Calls."

IN MAY, there's Lei Day, the only festival of its kind in the world. Everybody wears a flower lei and every island has a Lei Day queen and court. Then comes the Captian Cook Festival, a three-day celebration at Kailua-Kona on the Orchid Isle, honoring the English circumnavigator who discovered the Hawaiian Islands in 1778.

IN JUNE, Hawaii's most exciting celebration, Kamehameha Day, commemorates the "Napoleon of the Pacific," who united all of the islands of Hawaii into one kingdom. And Hawaii's proud Filipino community celebrates with their month-long Fiesta Filipina.

COME JOIN IN THE FUN!
YOU COULD BE HERE TOMORROW!
We're only 4½ hours away by air and 4½ days by sea from the Pacific Coast . . . and surprisingly inexpensive. Jet fares are as low as $200 roundtrip from the Pacific Coast, $360 from the Midwest, $490.20 from the East Coast; luxury ocean liner economy class from $280, first class from $414 roundtrip from the Pacific Coast. Modern hotel rooms start at just $5 a day per person double-occupancy. And most of Hawaii's best attractions are free! See your travel agent, airline or steamship representative and ask him to prepare an itinerary for you. Or mail the coupon below.

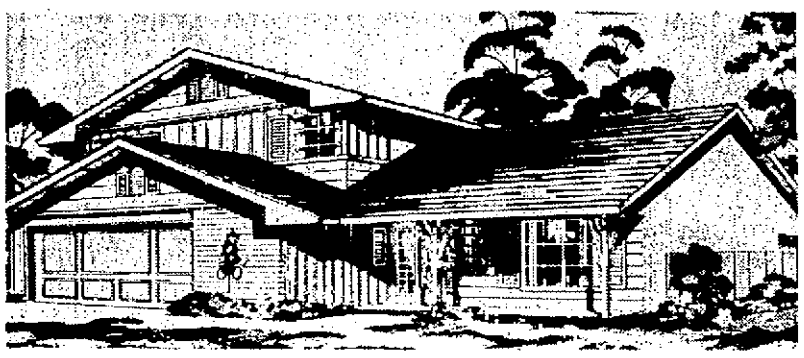
THE MEDITERRANIA . . . Luxury Home Overlooks Golf Course

Ultra-Modern Home Previewing

Outstanding in construction and location, a tri-level home, "The Mediterrania" will have a premier showing today at 3902 Country Club Drive, the corner of Hayter Avenue and Country Club Drive.

With 3,500 square feet of custom designed construction, the tri-level home overlooks the 14th green of the Lakewood Country Club and sets the tempo for an island of beautiful custom homes—an island in the middle of the country club golf course.



* * * *

THE HOME has a roomy, airy interpretation of modern living at its best. There are four above average size bedrooms with plenty of closet space. There are three baths. The large family room is unique with its intimate "conversation corner."

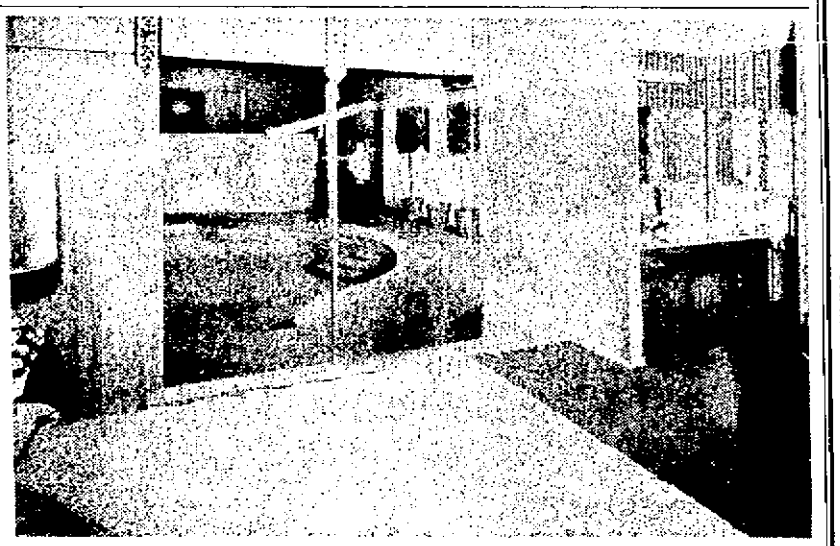
Refreshments will be served to viewers from noon until 4 p.m. today.

The Mediterrania was built by Brown and Brown Construction Co., to Gold Medallion specifications.

Clark Realty Co., is the exclusive sales agent for the home. The firm reported several other sites are available in the area priced from $26,500 to $36,000.

PRICED FROM $26,050

The new Fashion Valley homes in Fountain Valley, priced from $26,050, contain a host of features for a relatively lower-priced home. The one and two-story homes may be purchased on various financing terms, some with no down except closing costs and impounds.



Fashion Valley's Big Homes Offer Varied Finance Terms

Excellent lower priced homes are not found easily in the Los Angeles-Orange County Metropolitan area. However, the new Fashion Valley homes meet the criteria of quality construction and features with a lower full price, a spokesman stresses.

Fashion Valley's one and two-story homes, priced from $26,050, with three, four and five bedrooms; two and two-and-a-half bathrooms feature built-in ranges and ovens; carpeting in all bedrooms, living rooms, halls and stairways; fireplaces and family rooms; a "country-style" kitchen in one plan; and side and rear yard fencing.

Built by Mervin B. Johnson, Fashion Valley homes may be purchased with no down VA financing; low FHA terms, including a new plan whereby veterans may purchase homes regardless of length of service or in which war they fought; Cal-Vet financing; or any of several conventional plans.

Four furnished model homes are open. From the Long Beach area: Drive east on the San Diego Freeway to Beach Boulevard, then south to Edinger Avenue, turn left (east) to Harbor Boulevard, then south to Heil Avenue and right on Heil a short distance to the models in Fountain Valley.

ATTRACTIVE INTERIOR

Here is an interior view of one of the new Casa La Palma homes in the new community of La Palma. The big homes are priced from $24,950 and may be purchased on VA no-down or FHA terms. They are on La Palma Boulevard, which is an extension of Del Amo, between Carmenita Road and Walker Street.

Rossmoor Townhouse Final Unit of Homes Opens

Rossmoor Townhouses, the outstanding community of modern-day homes immediately adjacent to the Rossmoor Shopping and Business Center on Los Alamitos Boulevard, announced the grand opening of its final unit today.

Moderately priced at $22,950 and $23,950, these three and four-bedroom homes provide up-to-date conveniences found in residences costing much more, a spokesman points out. Features include wall-to-wall nylon carpeting; carports; private concrete patios; breakfast bar; built-in vanities; shake and cedar roofs; complete landscaping and sprinklers; all utilities underground; forced-air heating and ample guest parking. Wives are impressed with the efficient all-electric kitchens including built-in Americana oven and range, disposal, dishwasher and combination washer-dryer.

* * * *

LUXURY RECREATIONAL facilities provide Rossmoor residents hours of relaxation. There is swimming in one of four pools, (one of which is a special therapeutic pool), a children's wading pool; putting greens; shuffleboard courts; barbecue pits; and a special private club house.

Rossmoor Townhouse homeowners enjoy Southern California leisure living to the fullest. All necessary exterior maintenance, including pool servicing, yard work, mowing the lawn, etc., is taken care of by a professional maintenance staff.

* * * *

ACCORDING to Bill Ballon, president and Bernard Solomon, chairman of the board, Jaymarc Corp, developers of the $4 million project, there are homes available in a wide choice of floor plans and exterior elevations.

Rossmoor Townhouses may be reached via Seventh Street to the Los Alamitos-Bay Boulevard exit, then right two blocks on Los Alamitos to the Rossmoor Shopping and Business Center.

JUST TOUCH THE BUTTON

Pushing a button is all it takes to activate 21 miles of pipeline from Torrance refinery of Mobil Oil Company to Santa Fe yards at Redondo Junction. Diesel fuel is delivered to locomotives without interruption, replacing tank car delivery to yards. On hand to initiate system are W. H. Weymouth (from left), assistant general purchasing agent for Santa Fe; Harold Potts, commercial sales manager for Mobil, and D. R. Beal, Mobil's West Coast division general manager.

Long Beach Realtors To See Water Film

Members of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors attending the weekly breakfast meeting Tuesday at the Crown Cafeteria will see a film entitled, "Water South," the story of water in this area and the MWD.

Showing the film will be Raymond E. Hudson, of the MWD's Southern California District. He is a Long Beach resident.

Cameras Featured at Japanese Exhibition

A wide range of Japanese cameras will be featured at the "Products of Japan" exhibition at the Embassy Room of the Lafayette Hotel, Long Beach, next Saturday and Sunday.

The exhibition, open to the public, is presented by the Japan External Trade Organization.

Man with a 'gun' on the 'big daddy'

Hand me my "gun," man, and let's hit the "heavies" off Waikiki. The "soup" is fine for "hot doggin," but let's try for a "quasimoto" in one of the "big daddies" without a "wipe out."

That's surf talk, ma, and it's very much the "in" lingo among the beachniks in Hawaii. Here, in this surfer's valhalla, everyone who is really in the swim has a smattering of basic surfese. A "gun," for example, is a big wave surfboard which the pros prefer to the 20-pound fiberglass slabs used by beginners.

The "heavies" or "big daddies" are the giant breakers that have been known to tower up to 35 or 40 feet before crashing into the beach. The "soup" is the foam from broken waves, ideal for novices, and "hot doggin" is stunt riding, usually in the foam. The "hot doggers" who try a bold stance as the board takes the wave are doing a "quasimoto." If they don't make it, they do a "wipe out" or "take gas," or to put it bluntly, they get dunked.

* * * *

A "DING" IS a dent in the board, and a "tube" is the hollow section in the wave. There are all sorts of terms, too, to describe ways to maneuver the board — spinners, standing islands, cut backs and so on.

Surfing addicts not only talk their own language, but subscribe to surfing magazines, belong to surf clubs and sport surf togs. The surferettes in Hawaii wear bikinis, but neoprene "wet suits" with booties and mittens are the fashion in cold waters up north. What is more, they go in for music-to-surf-by, and flock to surfing films such as "Going My Wave."

There was a time when surfing had its share of bad publicity, thanks to a cult of oddballs who threw tin cans at old ladies and staged beer brawls on the beaches. Today, however, surfing is as respectable a sport as skiing, and nowhere is it more respectable music-to-surf-by, and flock to surfing beaches at every turn.

* * * *

SURFING, REPORTS Pan American Airways, was once the sport of the Hawaiian kings who rode the waves off Waikiki. No novices were they, since they used giant koa wood boards weighing up to 160 pounds, now on display at the Bishop Museum in Honolulu.

The sport was introduced abroad by Duke Kahanamoku, one of Hawaii's Olympic swimmers, who is now in his 70s but is still a surfing buff. One out of every five Hawaiians is reputed to have tried his skill in the surf, and it is no novelty to see a tot of four or five belly-flopping in the foam.

When the surf is really rolling, dedicated surfers in Honolulu leave schools and offices, grab their boards and dash to Makaha Beach, 45 minutes from Waikiki on the west side of the island. Here, the great show is the International Surfing Championships, staged between Dec. 18 and 26. The event draws surfers and spectators from Miami and Malibu, from Australia and New Zealand, from Europe and south Africa, from Central and South America, and from the Southern California coastal towns.

* * * *

CHAMPION SURFERS, male and female, test their ability on mountainous waves thundering more than 300 yards into the beach. Experts ride from the curl of the wave down the watery slope at some 30 miles an hour into the receding surge of the previous wave. The collision produces an upward thrust which sends all but the most skillful surfers hurtling from their boards. The sight is a brilliant demonstration of man's use of balance and movement to outwit nature's wind and waves.

The gentle surf at places like Waikiki is fine for beginners, and provides a long, easy trip to shore. There's surf to suit the most timid, but watch out for "hot doggers" and don't try a "quasimoto."

RIO DE JANEIRO Carnaval starts soon after the first of the year with weekend practice parades. The dancers get progressively keyed up to the Carnaval. Dance and parade for three days—they get a glassy-eyed, drugged look. It is the wildest, most colorful Mardi Gras you'll ever see.

Get there by Pan American or Varig—(Varig has a first-class dinner service that takes up four of the nine flying hours from New York to Rio). The best hotels are along the curve of Copacabana Beach. Restaurant Churrasceria Gaucho is good for the barbecue called churrasco.

Weather: Hot, humid and rainy.

". . . our first trip to Europe and wonder whether it is best to go with a tour or go it alone."

I'VE DONE IT both ways. The advantages of a tour are: Your hotels, meals, transportation, tips, sightseeing are all arranged for you. Not even a momentary language problem. Against it, I'd say, are: You must go when the group goes. And tours often try to pack in too much. Move too fast.

For going it alone: If you find a place you like you can stop awhile. You can change your routing if you like. Against it: You must get hotels (difficult in summer season). Buck the language, the tipping, the transportation.

* * * *

"If we go alone, we will rent a car. Must we return it to the city where we rented?"

USUALLY you do. Though occasionally there's no charge if you're going from one city to another popular place in the same country. Paris to Deauville, for example. Otherwise you pay the cost of returning the car to the original city. Hertz seems to have most flexibility. And get one of their mileage-between-European-cities charts here before you go. Helps plan the days — 150 miles a day is enough on European roads.

* * * *

"For driving in Mexico, how are the roads? How many miles a day can we average?"

TRAVEL and RESORTS

MAIN HIGHWAYS are usually good. But can suddenly develop chuckholes. So I think 50 miles an hour is top speed. You can be into bad road before you can slow down over 50. And Mexican roads aren't fenced much. Always a burro drifting across. (If a burro's head is pointed toward you or in the direction of the road, he's almost certain to cross at the last minute — slowly. If his head is pointed away, he probably won't.)

I average about 300 miles a day in Mexico. Start about 6 a.m. and take a jug of coffee and one of purified water. Stop about 4 in the afternoon. Don't drive after dark. Road work is rarely marked with anything. A tree branch across the highway means something is ahead. Anything from a pile of gravel to a bridge out.

* * * *

"At one point, our ship will be in Naples for the day and we wonder if there's time to go to Pompeii."

TAKES ABOUT an hour as I remember. There's an Italian tourist office at the docks. They get you a car—$10 (without tip as the driver will remind you). About halfway, he'll stop at a coral factory (when he gets 25% on whatever you buy). So tell him to get going.

He waits for you while you go through Pompeii — two or three hours is enough. There's guide service. The price is fixed. I think $2. There's a restaurant in the ruins and one outside where your driver is waiting. On the way back, he'll make one more try at the coral place. Prices are probably better in Naples. But I haven't actually compared them. I just know ALL drivers and ALL sightseeing buses try to make that one factory. But go to Pompeii. It's really worth the trip.

Japanese art, culture await Hawaii visitors

By Dorothy Gale Vigil

Diamond Head is a long leap from Fujiyama, but Hawaii visitors can find plenty of Japan in Honolulu this spring.

To the usual Honolulu teahouse parties, samurai movies and exhibits of Oriental art will be added elaborate cultural displays of Old Japan.

High point of Hawaii's tropical springtime will be the annual Cherry Blossom Festival Feb. 19-April 23, staged by Japanese-Americans of the community.

Ancient Nipponese ceremonies, antique art objects, classic sports and historic costumes draw islanders of all races to Waikiki Beach and the exhibit halls of Honolulu.

* * * *

CARP KITES fly against the tropic sky and artificial cherry blossoms deck stages and store windows, as well as Oriental bazaars and restaurants.

Graceful children dance to koto and samisen and brightly costumed folk dancers perform to the beat of drums.

This year's celebration should bring out the biggest parade of kimonos and obis Honolulu has ever seen, according to the Hawaii Visitors Bureau. Plus fashion shows galore, all stressing the exotic Polynesian and Oriental note for which the city is famous!

* * * *

ALONG WITH Hawaiians, Siamese, Filipinos, Koreans, Puerto Ricans, Tahitians, Chinese and Caucasians from around the world spring visitors will see sumo, judo, kendo and the arts of Japanese paper-cutting and flower-arranging.

A show of contemporary art runs in mid-town Honolulu March 16-April 16.

Honolulu's girls of Japanese ancestry are among the city's loveliest, and one of the prettiest of all is to be chosen Cherry Blossom Queen March 19 at the civic auditorium.

After mornings of Polynesian sightseeing or surfing, vacationing housewives will be able to attend lessons in Japanese cooking April 13 at the Honolulu International Center. Everything from how to turn out lacy shrimp tempura to fancy vegetable carvings is taught.

* * * *

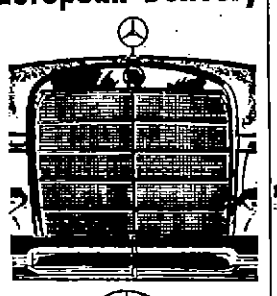
IF THEY skip Waikiki's nightly hula entertainment for Cherry Blossom fun, visitors catch the pageantry of a young Japanese-American ruling at a gala coronation ball at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel March 26.

Not to be missed is the Cherry Blossom Concert April 9 at the Honolulu International Center.

Elaborate cultural shows are scheduled at the Hilton Hawaiian Village Dome April 5-9.

A top draw, particularly among islanders themselves, will be the dazzling show of dances imported from Japan. It runs April 14-23 at the concert theater of Honolulu International Center. Costumes are lavish and the girls perform both classic Japanese numbers and jazzy contemporary routines.

Helicopter fare savings offered



Southern California travelers wanting to use local helicopter service, and destined for cities more than 500 miles from Los Angeles International Airport, now may save money through an airline-helicopter joint fare arrangement, announced by Western Air Lines.

WAL and Los Angeles Airways have made it possible for travelers to save up to half the regular helicopter fare.

LAA helicopter service flies between Los Angeles and heliports in Anaheim/Disneyland, Burbank, Glendale, Newport Beach, Ontario, Pomona, Riverside, San Bernardino, Van Nuys and Whittier.

New cycle course

The world's finest motorcycle course will be opened in May when the remodeled Hockenheim Ring is inaugurated with the Grand Prix of Germany. Improvements costing $5 million have transformed the track, which is seven miles long and has facilities for 400,000 spectators.

Big Homes Near Corona Have Attractive Price

REFRIGERATED AIR CONDITIONING . . . In Corona Homes

Home and Country residences, near Corona, are attracting many buyers because of the low-prices offered on the large homes, announced F. K. Shepard of the developing firm.

Models feature a variety of floor plans and 16 exterior styles. One and two-story homes are offered with three, four and five bedrooms, formal dining room, family room, two and three baths and in the two-story model, a big bonus family recreation room.

Prices range from $19,950 to $25,450 with down payments from $495, and 30-year conventional financing.

Included are central refrigerated air - conditioning systems, nylon wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, and block wall fencing on three sides.

* * * *

HOME & COUNTRY residences have rock wool insulation, massive block or brick fireplaces, mirrored sliding wardrobe doors in the master suite and many features found in homes costing thousands more.

Latest color-coordinated kitchens feature built-in appliances with double ovens, ceramic tile countertops, luminous ceilings and hardwood cabinets. Some models boast a walk-in kitchen pantry and serving counter.

Located in a tree-covered setting. Home and Country is within reach of schools and shopping and available in nearby Riverside, Corona and Arlington.

The residences may be reached via the Riverside Freeway through Corona to McKinley off-ramp, south to Magnolia Avenue then left to model homes and sales office.

Real Estate Club

Larry Moshier, city editor of the Herald American, will speak to members of the North Long Beach Real Estate Club at their weekly breakfast meeting Thursday at the Park Pantry, 17511 S. Susana Road.

Moshier will explain the background for many street, city and mountain names in this area.

College Park Home Has 3-Car Garage

One of the plans in the new College Park community of Seal Beach offers a three-car garage, which should be of special appeal to boat enthusiasts, according to Mark Bader, project sales manager for S & S Construction Co., builders-developers.

"Our architectural department designed this specifically for the hobbyist or boat enthusiast," Bader said, "and we expect it to be popular especially among the men. The extra-large garage is actually a bonus area, convertible to many uses—from work shop to card room."

Proximity of the site to the marinas induced architects to give special study to the idea of a three-car garage, Bader added.

* * * *

COLLEGE PARK a $51 million residential development, is bounded by Los Alamitos Blvd. on the west, Garden Park in Garden Grove on the east, and the Garden Grove Freeway on the south. It is adjacent to a private country club and 18-hole golf course now under construction.

Model homes will be constructed and opened formally as soon as possible, according to Bader. Meanwhile, sales are already being made from blueprints, plat plans and renderings.

The homes, priced from $26,250, will be of three, four and five bedrooms, with two and three baths, in one-story, two-story and tri-level floor plans.

Purchase can be made on VA terms with no down payment to qualified veterans, with FHA and conventional financing also available.

To visit the sales office, take San Diego Freeway to Valley View turnoff. Go north on Valley View toward Lampson. Watch for entrance signs 1 block before Lampson and turn west.

Up to 6 Bedrooms in Valbrook Homes

Southern California families like big homes to take advantage of the expansive life enjoyed here, and Aaron Lipton is building homes to fit the desires in Fullerton and Placentia, he points out.

His Valbrook homes have up to 2,840 square feet of living space and a variety of floorplans and exterior stylings to make an attractive community. Valbrook homes have four, five or six bedrooms and from two to four bathrooms.

A preview showing is now being held at Valbrook in Fullerton to exhibit the wide choice of homes and the wide, sweeping views of the beautiful hills.

The homes sell for $28,950 to $37,950. There are convenient financing plans, including a trade program which allows an existing home to be traded in to make the down payment on a new Valbrook home.

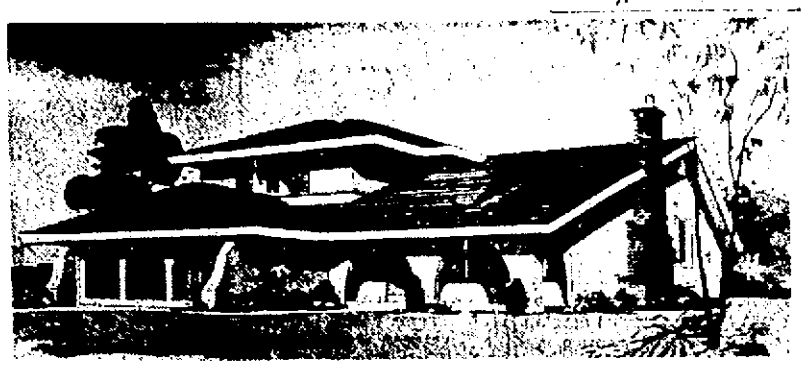
* * * *

A NUMBER of features have been included, such as nylon carpeting, forced air heat, extra-large wardrobe closets, family rooms, all-electric kitchens, travertine entries, formal dining rooms, extra large wardrobes and upstairs studies. Some homes have two fireplaces.

Visitors are invited to the preview showing at 2241 Loma Alta Drive at Gilbert in Fullerton. Drive north from the Santa Ana Freeway on Brookhurst to Commonwealth and left to Gilbert and then right to Loma Alta.

Gibralter Leases Site in Fullerton

Gibraltar Savings has announced signing of a 40-year lease on a site for a new regional branch office in Fullerton.



President Herbert J. Young said more than an acre at 255 W. Orangethorpe Ave., just west of Harbor Boulevard, will be used for a two-story office and adjacent parking. Work will start on the building in early February.

Business Espionage Is Seminar Topic

A series of three day-long seminars on "Business and Corporate Espionage," will be presented this week, each at a different Southern California location.

Tuesday's seminar will be at the Disneyland Hotel, Wednesday's at the Orange Show grounds in San Bernardino and Thursday's at the Sportsmen's Lodge in North Hollywood.

Sponsored by the Industrial Market Research Associates of Los Angeles, the seminars —a registration fee is charged —are a repetition of a program held in December in Los Angeles.

EXCLUSIVE DESIGN . . . Tri-Level Orangewood Home

Orangewood Grand Opening to Feature Tri-Level Homes

Praise is being given the tri-level homes at the grand opening of his Orangewood development, according to Don Wilson, president of Don Wilson Builders. An exclusive feature for the Cypress area, this designing allows maximum use of living areas, with spacious efficiency.

On the upper level of this plan is a master bedroom, two other large bedrooms and a custom bath. The middle level has a separate living room, a roomy kitchen, and a nice-sized dining area.

* * * *

STEPPING DOWN to the lower level there is a family-size rumpus room, with sliding glass doors providing access to outside patio areas, plus two more bedrooms and full-size bathroom.

All models have quality wall-to-wall carpeting and built-in kitchen appliances.

* * * *

TOTAL COMMUNITY planning has gone into this development. Utilities are underground. Another community addition is Orangewood's own park, dedicated by Wilson. It includes a playground for children, paved courts, and braziers, benches and tables for family barbecues.

Front landscaping is another quality plus at Orangewood, with lawns and shrubbery giving an established air to the new development. Furnished models are open, with a wide range of styles and designs. These one and two-story homes are priced from $24,950 with $995 down. They may be reached by driving on the Garden Grove Freeway to Knott Avenue, then north to Orangewood.

Occidental Lends to Watson Center

Occidental Life Insurance Company of California has made a 20-year, $800,000 loan to Watson Land Company for a portion of the construction at the Watson Industrial Center, Dominguez area.

The money will be used to finance the building of 62,000 feet of display rooms and sales-service facilities for Cormier Chevrolet Company which has leased 10 acres at the center along the south side of the San Diego Freeway.

Lakewood rite joins Millers

More than 250 guests witnessed the Saturday afternoon rite in Lakewood Community Methodist Church uniting in marriage Carrie Lynn Giessler and John Frederick Miller.

Parents of the bridal pair are Mr. and Mrs. John J. Giessler, 4134 Knoxville Ave., Lakewood, and the F. J. Millers, 3833 Marber Ave.

As she recited nuptial promises, the bride wore a formal length creation of Italian silk and Chantilly lace fashioned with a watteau train which fell from the shoulders of the fitted bodice. A peacock front accented the voluminous hoop skirt.

PRECEDING the bride to the altar were Alicia B. Ooten, maid of honor; Judith C. Kline, Libby A. Johnson and Mrs. James E. Crayton. Gerald McGinnis was best man. Ushers were Noel Wymasler, James E. Crayton and William Matzke.

After a church reception, the newlyweds departed on a wedding trip to Northern California.

The bride is an alumna of Lakewood High School. Her husband was graduated from Milliken High. Both attended Long Beach City College.

Data is too much, wrong

South won the first trick with dummy's ace of spades and took stock of the hand. He had one spade loser, one trump loser, no diamond losers and one or two club losers depending how the suit developed.

He decided to postpone the club play as long as he possibly could and to attempt to gather information along the way.

Therefore he led a diamond to his ace, returned to dummy's king and ruffed a diamond in his own hand.

Then he led a low spade toward dummy. Lew Mathe who sat East overtook his partner's eight with the nine in order to lead a trump. Bob Hamman sitting West rose with his ace and led another trump back.

* * * *

SOUTH won in dummy, ruffed dummy's last diamond in his hand and then ruffed his last spade in dummy.

Now South was down to the all-important club play. He led a club from dummy and Lew Mathe played low. This didn't help South a bit. Lew was sure to play a low club if he had one and irrespective of what higher ones he might hold.

However, South had acquired a lot of information from the play. Bob Hamman, West, had already shown up with the queen of spades, ace of hearts and queen of diamonds. That gave him a total of eight high card points outside the club suit. If Bob also held the club ace he would have 12 points.

Bob is known as a man who likes to open the bidding and Bob had dealt and passed. It looked almost certain that Bob would not have that ace of clubs. South played the king and down he went.

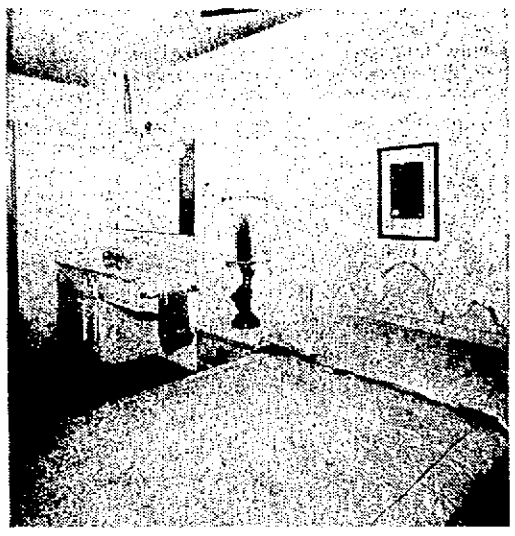
Few Lark Village Homes Remaining

Only a few popular Lark Village Homes in Fountain Valley remain to be sold on new terms and excellent financing of repossessed dwellings at the spacious development, a spokesman announced.



Representing one of Orange County's fine home investments in an area rapidly developing to its potential as a valued Southland location, Lark Village Homes offer a number of money-saving features for the new homeowner.

These include carpeting, fencing and fully equipped kitchens with built-in range, oven, dishwasher and disposal. There are spacious dining areas, extra-large cabinet space, wood paneling and the homes are built on pool-size lots.

LARK VILLAGE Homes are surrounded by freeways, most of which will be ready in the near future. Among the abundance of recreational facilities nearby are beaches, amusement and resort centers, golf courses, and desert and mountain areas within easy driving distances.

Close to both new and established schools and shopping centers, the homes are just minutes from the industrial areas of both Orange and Los Angeles Counties.

Located on Edinger Street east of Brookhurst, Lark Village can be reached from Long Beach by going east on Seventh Street to Brookhurst, then right to Edinger, then left to the homes.

IN PREMIER HOME
Premier Homes in Huntington Beach feature separate dressing-vanity area in master suite, as shown in this model home interior.

Buyer May Occupy New Home at Once

Basic value combined with a large influx of new residents to booming Huntington Beach are mainly responsible for the success of Premier Homes North and South, according to sales agent Frank McFarland.

The realtor said that large-scale transfers of professional people, mainly engineers and scientists, to the Orange Coast area had created a steady demand for new homes with immediate occupancy. Premier offers immediate move-in on its four-bedroom, two-bath plans, which also have a formal dining area, family room and a 17x22 playroom. The playroom is fully finished, with a tile floor and plumbing roughed in for either a wet bar or a third bath.

• • • •

PRICE of the "Premier Special" is $26,500, with 25 and 30-year loans at 5¾% and 6%. The homes feature a "Total Convenience" kitchen.

All Premier homes are sold with a fenced rear yard, with a gate, and with front landscaping included in the purchase price.

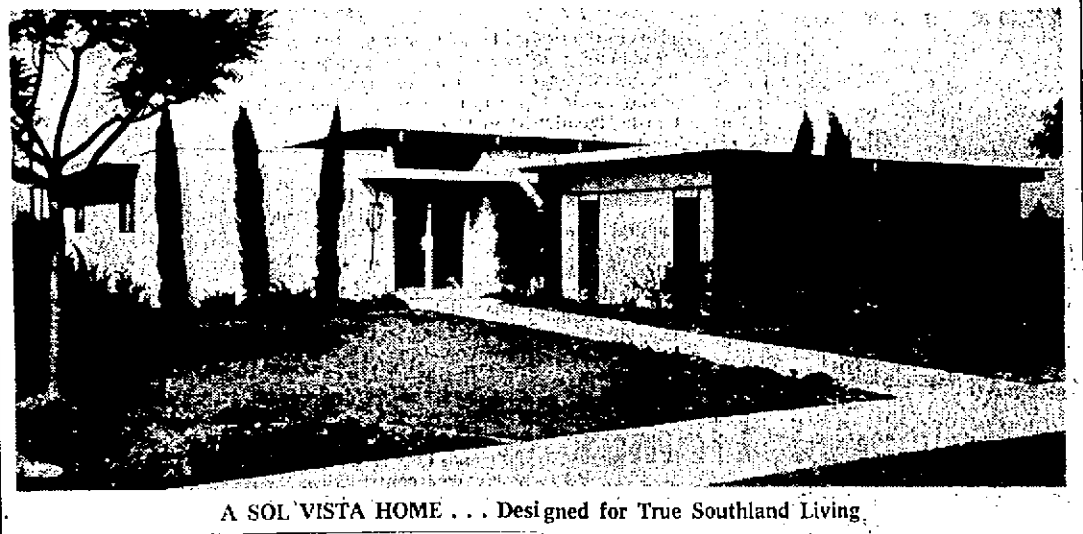
WSA Elects 2 Wilmington Men to Posts

Heads of two Wilmington shipyards have been elected area vice presidents of the Western Shipbuilding Association. They are Louis Fellows, president of Fellows and Stewart Inc., and Carl M. Lippincott, general manager of Todd Shipyards.

The association, meeting last week in San Francisco, took steps to promote the building of a larger, stronger and more effective American Merchant Marine, U.S. Navy and American shipyard complex.

• • • •

"NO WORLD power can remain such without a stronger navy and merchant marine," stressed Robert E. Mayer, San Francisco, president of the association of more than 150 Pacific Coast business firms.



"We mean to use all our energies in this crucial year doing our part in the national program to bring this message to the American people and our Congress," he added.

S. C. Gould Ends Career With Sears

After serving 29 years with Sears, Roebuck and Co., much of the time as store manager, S. C. Gould retired Thursday.

He had managed the Sears-Long Beach from 1952 until in 1959 when he was transferred to manage the Soto Street-Olympic Boulevard store in Los Angeles.

For Indoor or Outdoor Living

A SOL VISTA HOME . . . Designed for True Southland Living

Announces Promotions

Promotions for five employes of Autonetics Division of North American Aviation Inc., Anaheim, were announced by officials last week.

J. A. Brinkman, Woodland Hills, associate director of the aviation science center, was named director of physical sciences.

R. J. Sonners, of Fullerton, was named director of the advanced electronics technology laboratory.

Dr. Arnold Miller, of Fullerton, was appointed assistant to Vice President Cedric O'Donnell.

Leo W. Killen, of Fullerton, was named vice president to direct Autonetics planning and development of new military avionic systems.

Peter A. Kreider, of Brea, was named executive director of Stike Avionic Systems.

Outdoor living as well as indoor living is the preference of buyers of many Sol-Vista homes, says Baxter Caterson, sales manager.

"In Southern California we enjoy the comfortable climate to the fullest, and in Huntington Beach, location of Sol-Vista homes, there are dozens of incentives for outdoor living," he said.

Caterson said outdoor living, as demonstrated by residents of Sol-Vista homes at 16661 Beach Blvd., concerns everything from color to the barbecue pit.

• • • •

"IT IS OBVIOUS," he said, "that design plays a major role in creating homes for outdoor enthusiasts. The latest in design concepts and ideas have to be given to Sol-Vista homes."

Sol - Vista homes are reached from the Santa Ana Freeway, Garden Grove Freeway or San Diego Freeway via Beach Boulevard to Huntington Beach.

Priced from $29,550, the homes have three, four and five bedrooms.

West'ghouse Buys KFWB

NEW YORK—Crowell-Collier Broadcasting Corporation has sold KFWB, Los Angeles radio station, to Westinghouse Broadcasting Company for $10,750,000 after adjustments for cash and accounts receivable, which are not being transferred.

Announcement of the transaction was made jointly by Raymond C. Hagel, chairman of Crowell-Collier and MacMillan, Inc., Joseph C. Drilling, president of Crowell-Collier Broadcasting, and Donald H. McGannon, president and chairman of the board of Westinghouse Broadcasting Company.

McGannon said an application for the assignment of a license will be filed with the FCC in the near future. The sale is subject to approval of the FCC.

THE HALF DECADE AHEAD

"One trouble with most of us," says architect Ed Killingsworth, "is that we're always talking about the next five years when we should be thinking about 50 years from now."

He's right, of course.

Sooner than most of us would like to think, computers will be available to command the wife's vacuum cleaner—do all the housework, in fact. You may be able to edit your newspaper to your own tastes by feeding a personality profile punch card into your television set. Also, less pleasant prospects are just around the corner. Legislatures one day may be forced into seriously considering strict legal control of population growth.

"Predicting how much change people will accept and how much novelty they will demand is the hard part," says one automation expert.

Most businessmen try to adapt to this rampaging technology by adapting advanced products to old buying habits.

Likewise, this newspaper's reporters have had to begin with present reality in predicting where we'll be in five years from now. At the same time, they've tried to keep in mind what the world should be like in fifty years.

We know by 1970 Long Beach's population will have jumped to 410,000 from 370,000 and the population of the five Southern California counties climbed to 10.7 million from 9.3 million. We know this will bring opportunities for affluence yet unrealized and problems of mobility yet unaccepted. We also know it will bring an even more vigorously youthful society, for that population is going to be lopsided with people 15 to 30 years old.

What we don't know, of course, is how Long Beach and the world will respond to the challenge. In trying to anticipate, we've undoubtedly been too conservative.

Mayor Wade Looks At Long Beach's Future

By MAYOR EDWIN W. WADE

The prospects for Long Beach's next five years are exciting. To be sure, some of our longstanding problems will remain with us. But on balance we can look forward to progress on an almost spectacular scale, culminating many years of planning.

Development of the East Wilmington offshore oil field, already in progress, will make it possible to implement the master plan for Long Beach's shoreline, a unique resource which we are about to utilize fully for the first time.

In other areas as well Long Beach already is beginning to translate paper plans into actual projects.

A program to expand and improve park and recreation facilities, originally scheduled for eight years, seems certain of completion by 1971 because our own special tax funds are being augmented by federal and state grants.

We can look forward to the development of a great regional park, El Dorado East, at a cost of $3.5 million. Perhaps even more important, many small neighborhood recreation centers and playgrounds will be developed in the same period and on a comparable financial scale.

* * * *

FREEWAY DEVELOPMENT will be more controversial and difficult, but I see it as a necessity in our growing area.

This city has every reason to believe that the Naval Shipyard will continue to operate at a high level — a peacetime level, we hope. It has already been declared one of the five "hard core" yards in the country, virtually indispensable.

Douglas Aircraft Co. has chosen Long Beach as its permanent center for commercial plane production. Activity and employment are high. The success of new models indicates continued growth.

Our airport is expanding its business at a rate higher than any other facility. Our commercial harbor is handling record tonnage. In both cases the outlook for the five years is most promising.

On the less tangible side, progress is being made in the promotion of friendship among all people through the Human Relations Committee's concentration on rehabilitating and aiding such sections as the central residential area and through local agencies giving full attention to the advantages of the Economic Opportunity Act.

To reach its full potential, this city must work with other communities. For this reason, I am heartily supporting the Southern California Association of Governments, without which the whole region will be unable to qualify for many grants and will be powerless to integrate its planning.

* * * *

POSSIBLY THE MOST difficult of all our problems is rapid transit—here again a regional challenge. There is no blinking at the failures in this field. I hope the city government and the people will exert maximum pressure for solutions. Without a transit system, Long Beach will remain relatively isolated. And isolation is something even the most fortunate city cannot afford in a region where population growth is dimming municipal limits.

My hope is that the history of rapid transit in the next five years will parallel that of the Metropolitan Water District, scorned by many in its beginning but eventually a vital factor to the development of the region.

One other point in regional planning: It is time to amend our obsolete annexation laws. Long Beach should be permitted to cross county boundaries to encompass areas which prefer this city and are functionally a part of it.

Finally, it is urgent that we complete our Civic Center. The city must have a new City Hall and a new Main Library. State and federal buildings should become a part of the complex of government activity. While we can hardly expect to reach this goal entirely within five years, we can work toward it and expect a real beginning by 1971.

A Message from the Governor

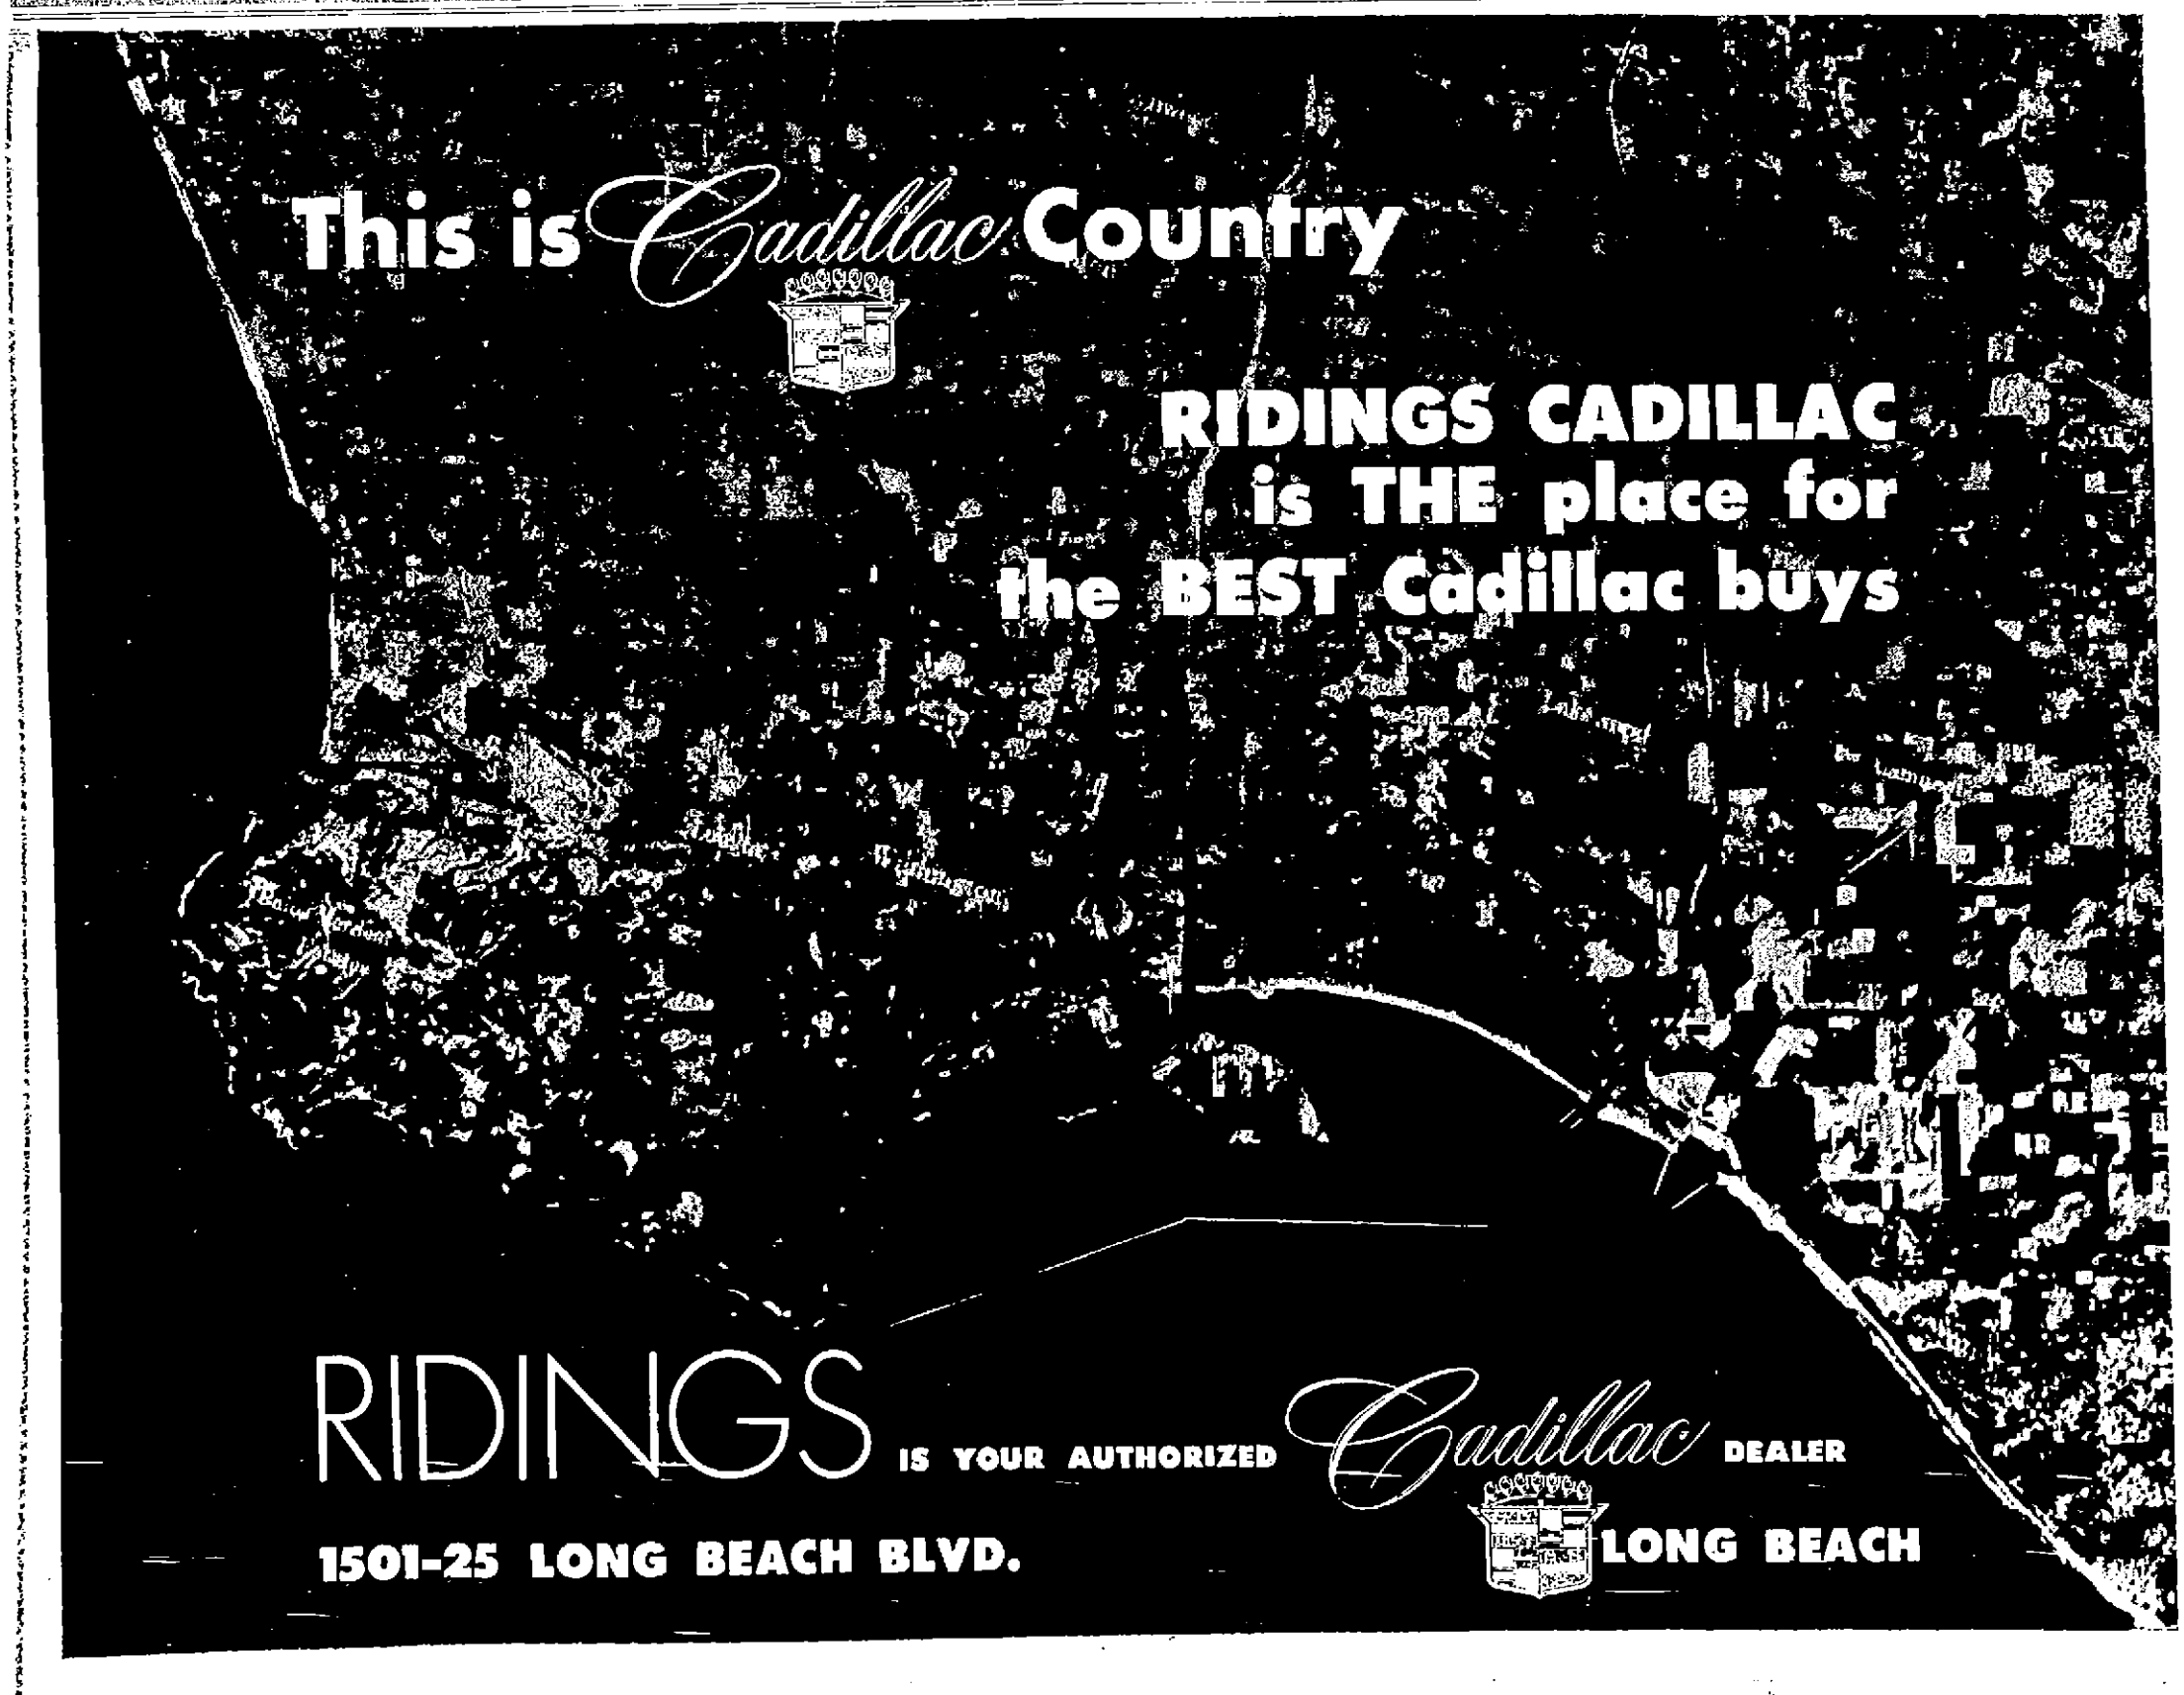
A tremendous and continuing surge in population--at the rate of 600,000 a year--will characterize California's growth in the coming years.

Ten years ago our population was only 13.5 million. Today it stands at 18.8 million persons. Ten years from now it will be 25 million.

The impact of that growth will primarily hit our cities as the rural population declines and our economy continues to change from agriculture-based to industry, manufacturing and trade. More schools, colleges, freeways, water and public facilities of all kinds--those are the imperatives of growth.

We must meet that growth by planning, by the bold use of new space age techniques and technology and by enlightened and aggressive state and local governments moving swiftly to build our society and economy on solid ground.

Last year the State of California completed four systems analysis and systems engineering studies in the fields of transportation, waste disposal, crime and delinquency and data and information gathering. These studies, by four of the largest aerospace companies in the United States, utilized advanced computer and engineering techniques--the same methods that will put a man on the moon in the next decade--to study the problems facing local and state governments. The results of those studies are being analyzed by experts in government now and will be applied to solving our problems. I cite these studies as an example of how we must meet the challenges of the sixties and seventies.



Fundamental to the changes ahead is the overriding challenge of preserving our social and physical environment.

We must preserve our beaches, mountains, forests and streams. We must create a social order based on equality of opportunity. We must provide education, jobs and the chance to enjoy the good life which has characterized our state for all of our people.

This is the task for all of us in the years ahead. In the spirit of our forefathers--the men and women who came to California in wagon trains and on foot--we will meet the challenges of the space age to keep California first in every way.

He's right, of course.

Sooner than most of us would like to think, computers will be available to command the wife's vacuum cleaner—do all the housework, in fact. You may be able to edit your newspaper to your own tastes by feeding a personality profile punch card into your television set. Also, less pleasant prospects are just around the corner. Legislatures one day may be forced into seriously considering strict legal control of population growth.

"Predicting how much change people will accept and how much novelty they will demand is the hard part," says one automation expert.

Most businessmen try to adapt to this rampaging technology by adapting advanced products to old buying habits.

Likewise, this newspaper's reporters have had to begin with present reality in predicting where we'll be in five years from now. At the same time, they've tried to keep in mind what the world should be like in fifty years.

We know by 1970 Long Beach's population will have jumped to 410,000 from 370,000 and the population of the five Southern California counties climbed to 10.7 million from 9.3 million. We know this will bring opportunities for affluence yet unrealized and problems of mobility yet unaccepted. We also know it will bring an even more vigorously youthful society, for that population is going to be lopsided with people 15 to 30 years old.

What we don't know, of course, is how Long Beach and the world will respond to the challenge. In trying to anticipate, we've undoubtedly been too conservative.

A Message from the Governor

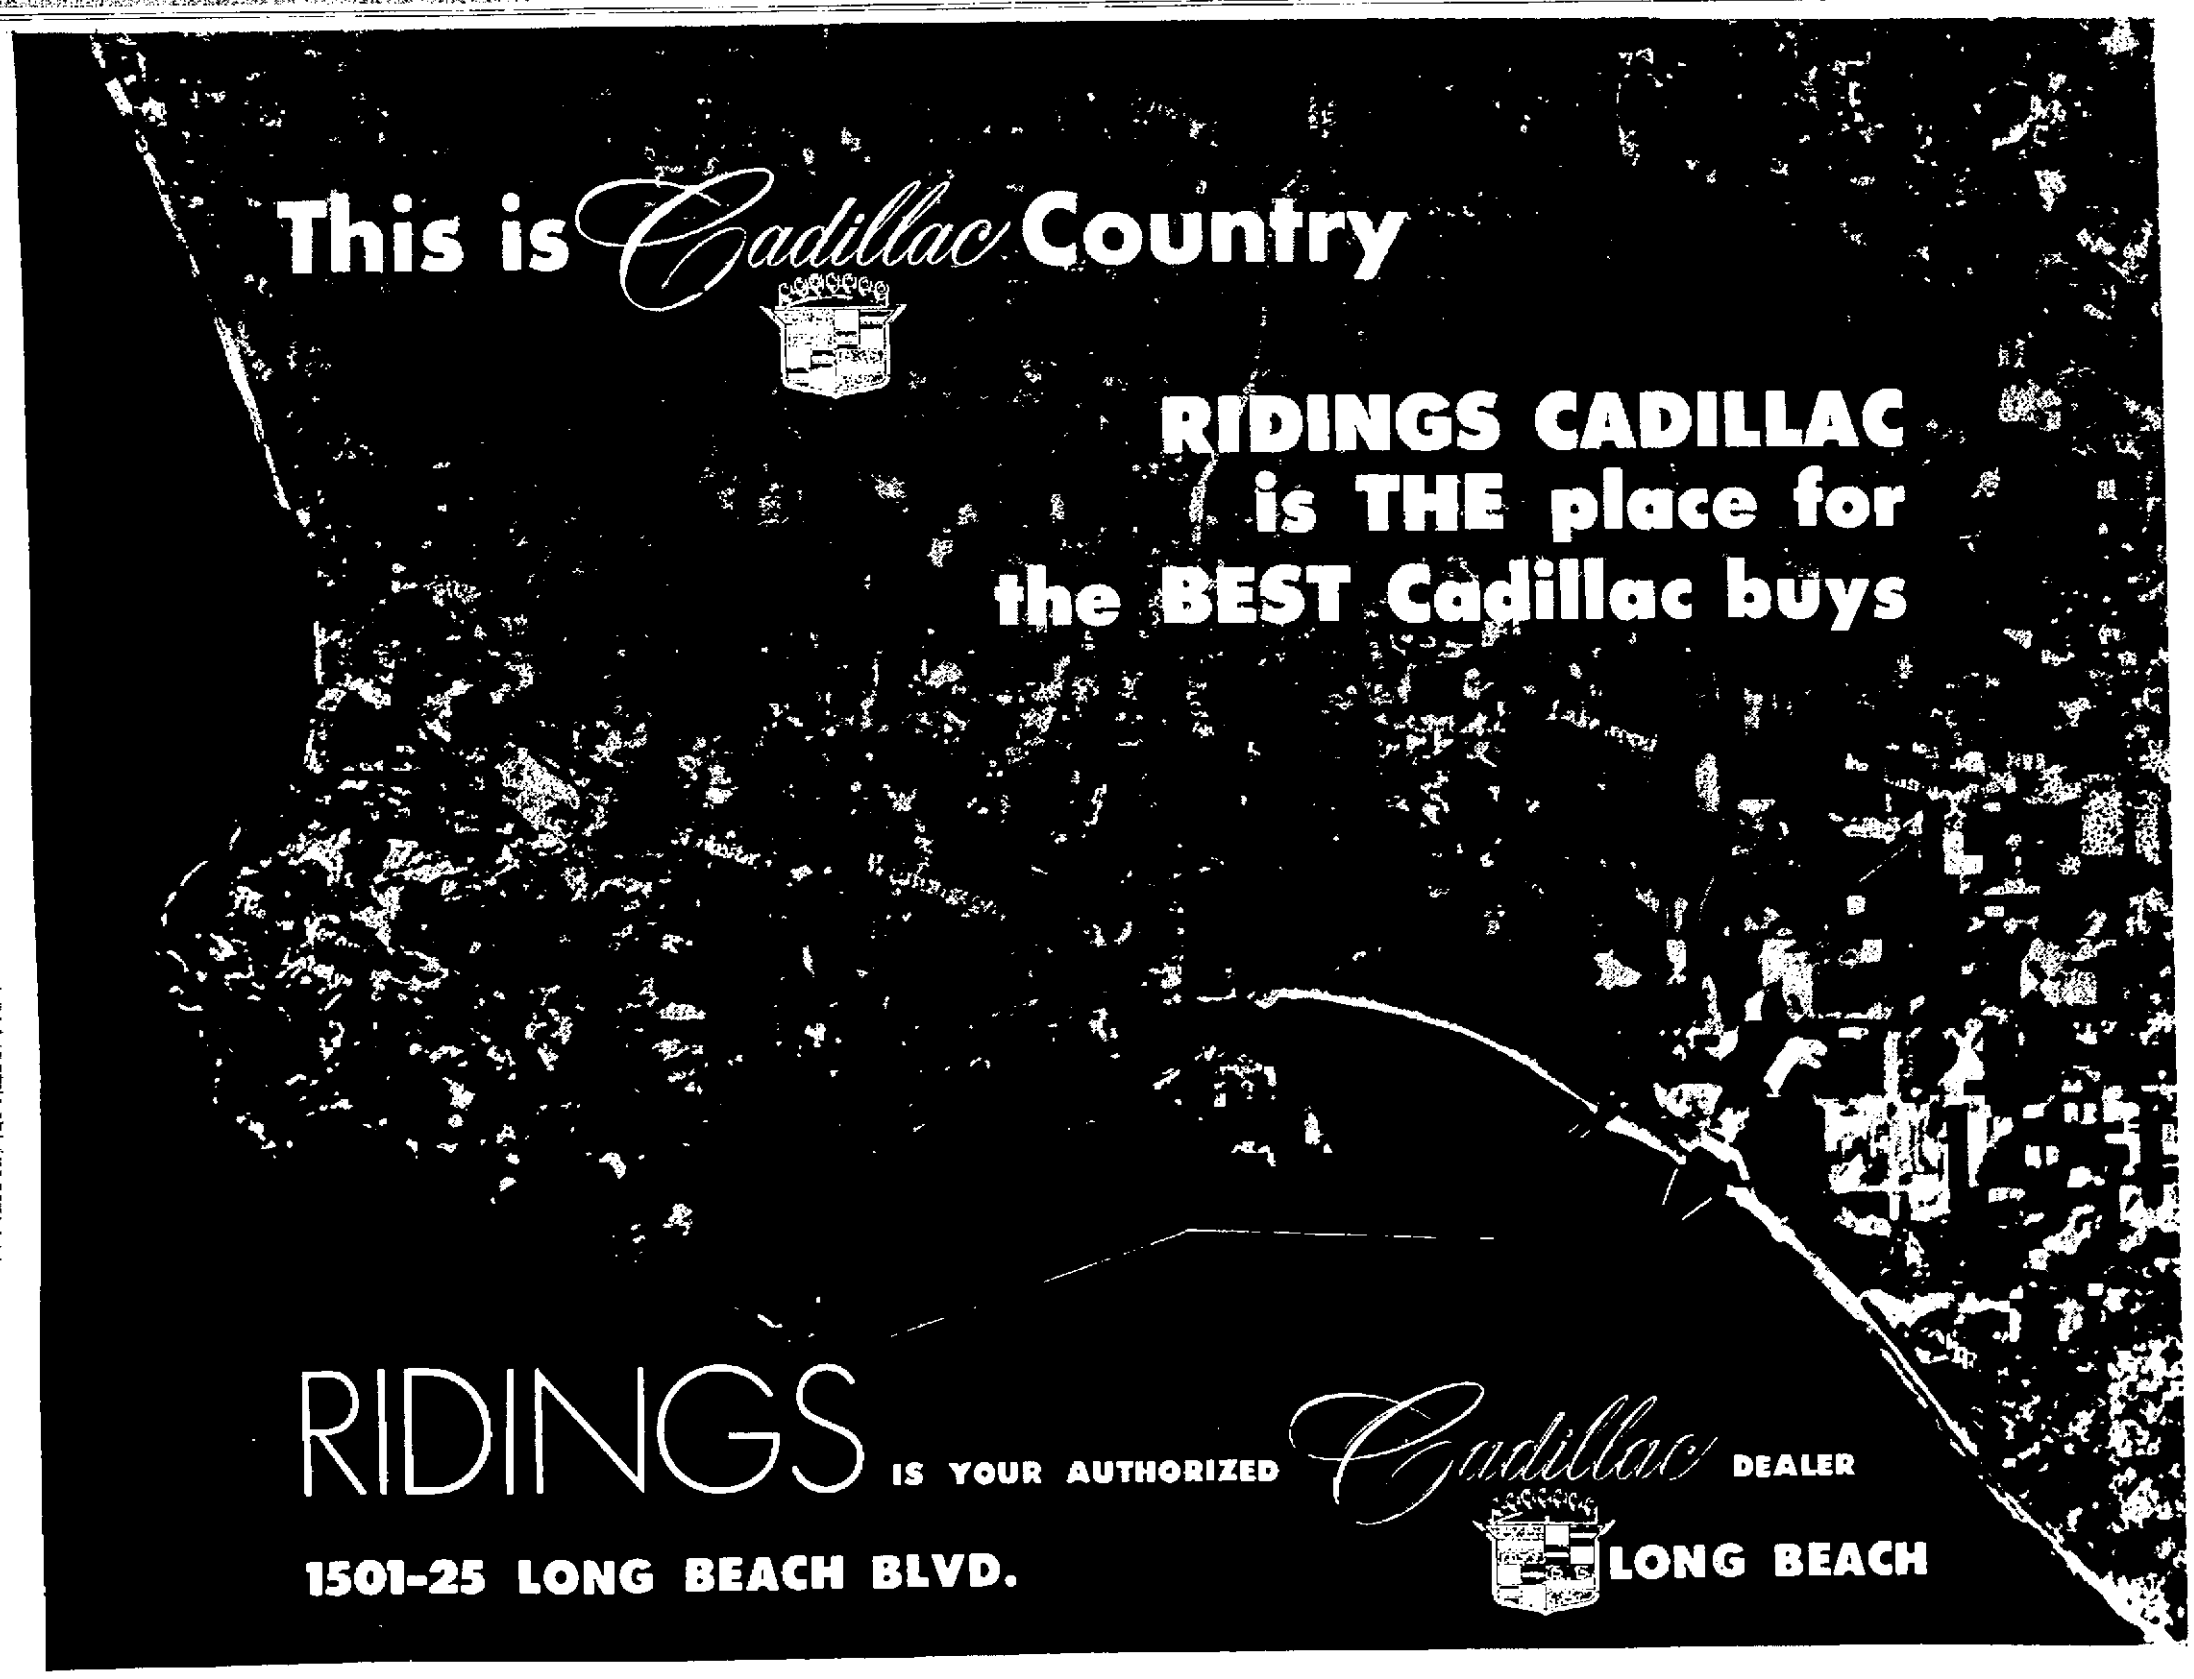
A tremendous and continuing surge in population--at the rate of 600,000 a year--will characterize California's growth in the coming years.

Ten years ago our population was only 13.5 million. Today it stands at 18.8 million persons. Ten years from now it will be 25 million.

The impact of that growth will primarily hit our cities as the rural population declines and our economy continues to change from agriculture-based to industry, manufacturing and trade. More schools, colleges, freeways, water and public facilities of all kinds--those are the imperatives of growth.

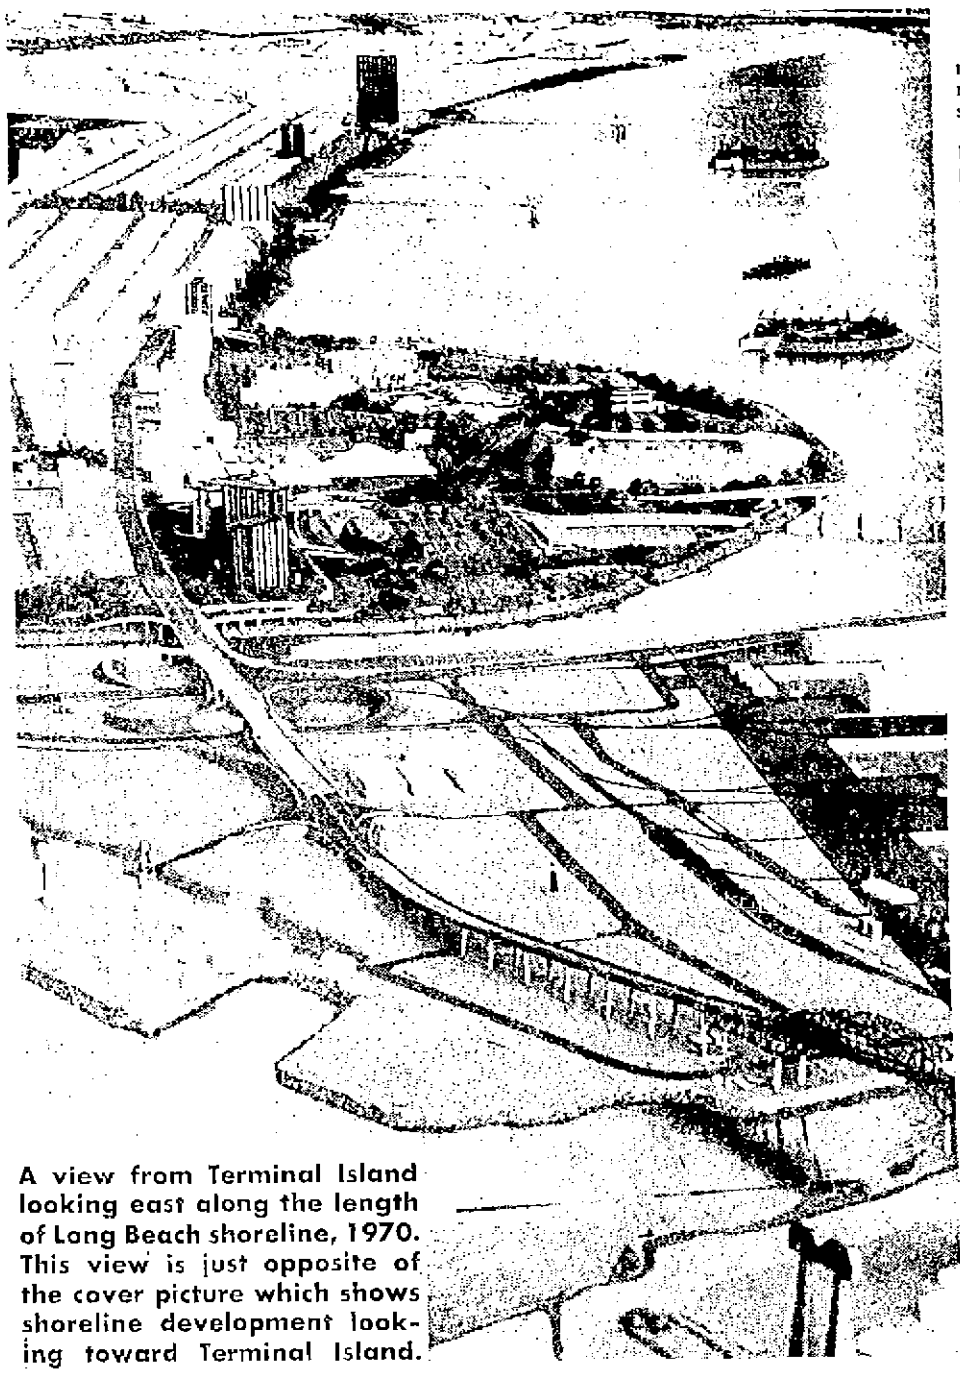
We must meet that growth by planning, by the bold use of new space age techniques and technology and by enlightened and aggressive state and local governments moving swiftly to build our society and economy on solid ground.

Last year the State of California completed four systems analysis and systems engineering studies in the fields of transportation, waste disposal, crime and delinquency and data and information gathering. These studies, by four of the largest aerospace companies in the United States, utilized advanced computer and engineering techniques--the same methods that will put a man on the moon in the next decade--to study the problems facing local and state governments. The results of those studies are being analyzed by experts in government now and will be applied to solving our problems. I cite these studies as an example of how we must meet the challenges of the sixties and seventies.



Fundamental to the changes ahead is the overriding challenge of preserving our social and physical environment.

We must preserve our beaches, mountains, forests and streams. We must create a social order based on equality of opportunity. We must provide education, jobs and the chance to enjoy the good life which has characterized our state for all of our people.



This is the task for all of us in the years ahead. In the spirit of our forefathers--the men and women who came to California in wagon trains and on foot--we will meet the challenges of the space age to keep California first in every way.

Shoreline Taking New Shape

A view from Terminal Island looking east along the length of Long Beach shoreline, 1970. This view is just opposite of the cover picture which shows shoreline development looking toward Terminal Island.

By GEORGE WEEKS

After years of planning, Long Beach's most dramatic period of physical development is moving rapidly forward at the start of 1966.

Its key is the seven-mile reach of shoreline, from the east face of Pier J in the harbor district to the tip of Alamitos Bay Peninsula in the marina area.

Within five years this "elongated regional park"—as city planners and engineers conceive it—will actually fit that description.

Coupled with the addition of new land, new buildings (privately-initiated as well as city owned), new small-craft harbors, and public facilities will be economic development unequalled since the Signal Hill oil discoveries of the 1920's.

As city officials and private builders see the prospects, it is likely some $500 million in private and public money will have been expended or committed within five years for a great complex of improvements, exclusive of oil installations and the commercial harbors. Some are breath-taking, others merely useful. All are for the enjoyment of residents, the attraction of visitors and the enhancement of community life.

THE PLANNING STAGE has not been easy. The city has had long experience on legislative and judicial fronts in the pitfalls of administering a state-granted trust.

But City Manager John R. Mansell, who has assembled a timetable of public works to be paid for out of tideland oil trust funds, believes the optimistic forecast is "reasonable and within the bounds of realism."

It makes one assumption which depends on the continuation of favorable economic trends: that the outlays of public money will generate some four dollars in private investment related to the shoreline for every one dollar spent by the city

At this stage, say city officials, the announced plans and the expressions of interest by prospective investors justify a strong hope that such will be the case.

THE CITY'S SHARE in the program is clearly defined. More than $100 million of the tideland trust funds will be available and will be expended or obligated within the five years for shoreline capital improvements, east of the harbor district and on Pier J. The east face of the pier is regarded as an inseparable part of the shoreline planning.

The new municipal timetable shows no less than 40 projects within this period.

One of the biggest—an element that leads naturally to most of the others—was given final approval at the end of 1965 by the City Council. It is the $11.3-million, 113-acre addition of new land in front of the downtown district.

The schedule shows a starting date in March, 1966, for the dredging of 8.7 million cubic yards of sand (most of it later to be topped by soil) extending the shore as much as a quarter of a mile seaward between the Navy Landing and Alamitos Avenue.

All the elements in this $42-million segment of the total shoreline plan are scheduled for construction before 1971, although exact timing depends on the waiting period necessary for the fill to dry and settle.

RAINBOW PIER will vanish, but replacing it will be created 30 acres of water area—two lagoons and a harbor for the proposed Maritime Museum.

The $4.8-million museum building is not included in the current land-fill project. Its construction is due to start in mid-1968, with completion in late 1970. Like many of the other improvements, the museum is intended to establish Long Beach firmly as the foremost center of both commercial and recreational maritime activities in Southern California.

First development of the 95-acre east face of Pier J, which adds more than a mile to Long Beach's earlier shoreline, is within the compass of the five-year plan, although specific schedules have not been developed.

City estimates are that Pier J alone will ultimately produce a combination of public and private investment—mostly private—near $250 million.

The outlines of its development will begin to emerge in the first quarter of this year with the filing of a economic feasibility report by the Real Estate Research Corp., city consultants.

Current inclination of city officials is toward a great variety of improvements and uses, most of them to be developed by private capital under one master lease or a series of closely-coordinated leases.

One major element gaining favor at City Hall is a great new small-craft harbor toward the downtown side of the pier. If developed to the ultimate, it could provide thousands of berths at a cost of $50 million or more. The division of city and private funds for this project remains for the future.

Officials also foresee along the east face of the pier such improvements as a large hotel, other high-rise residential buildings, shops, an oceanography research and production center, and recreational development.

"WHATEVER USES are approved," Mansell noted, "will have two main objectives—to further the tideland trust and to help revitalize the community."

West of the downtown district, between Magnolia Avenue and the Los Angeles River, planning for the West Beach urban renewal area is already well advanced.

This $50-million renewal of a 21-acre substandard area could reach the stage of construction of the first of three or four high-rise residential and transient housing buildings by 1968, Long Beach Redevelopment Agency officials say.

Planning calls for some buildings as high as 30 stories. The agency is investing most of the proceeds of a $9,485,000 bond issue in the purchase of the land, the removal of the old buildings and—still for the future—the preparation of the site and improvement of streets, small parks and roadways.

But redevelopment officials expect to sell the land to one of several private developers who have expressed interest in taking over the whole project.

Just east of the urban renewal site the Long Beach Amusement Co. has plans for a years-long construction program on the order of $60 million.

DR. FRANK STANTON JR., president of the company, says the first construction is set for this year. It is the projected 18-story, 234-unit Elysian Apartments estimated to cost $5.5 million. The site is the southeast corner of Magnolia Avenue and Ocean Boulevard.

Also definitely in the works for early construction is a 19-story, 180,000-square-foot office building on the south side of Ocean Boulevard in the vicinity of Chestnut Ave. It will cost $5 million.

Other buildings on a comparable scale, utilizing a portion of the present amusement area, also are within the company's master plan. Their scheduling is more distant.

The company intends to remain in the amusement business—in a more attractive and modern setting, Stanton says. Its ultimate planning encompasses the development of a six-acre relax-and-have-fun center something on the order of the famous Tivoli Garden in Copenhagen.

Coincident with these downtown and West Beach developments will be the construction of a $12-million bridge extending Magnolia Avenue to the heart of the harbor district's waterfront. The projected starting date is mid-1967, with completion in early summer of 1969.

Also complementing the other downtown improvements will be the $1-million shoreline drive from the Long Beach Freeway terminus to Alamitos Avenue, sched-,

WASHINGTON—As always in an even-numbered year, a good deal of Washington's attention in 1966 will be on the elections in the fall. The Presidency is not at stake, but in this politically-conscious community the various races for the Senate, the House of Representatives and for the various governorships will be watched with acute interest.

There will, to be sure, be other matters which will engage the attention of this capital of our nation and of the free world. First and foremost there will be Viet Nam. Almost no one expects that to come to any conclusion in the coming year. The expectation rather is for an intensification of the struggle, the commitment of more and more American troops into the fight, a concomitant rise in the casualty lists and increasing military pressure upon North Viet Nam. The effort to bomb the North Vietnamese to a conference table — any conference table—will be continued. Whether or not that effort will produce any tangible results in the coming year is a matter locked tight in the breasts of those who run North Viet Nam and of their Red Chinese advisers.

Another knotty foreign policy problem will be that of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The NATO agreement expires late in 1966 and some Europeans, notably President Charles DeGaulle of France, want to revise it substantially. DeGaulle wants far less of what he calls "Anglo-Saxon domination" of the defense organization and is apparently willing to pull out completely unless the treaty is revised to his satisfaction. What DeGaulle wants is a NATO essentially run by Europeans with France having a strong, if not, decisive, voice in its decision-making.

Included in the NATO tangle is the problem of nuclear weapons for the West Germans. At the moment, the Germans are not allowed to possess nuclear power or weapons. The Germans are chafing over these restrictions and the general feeling is that someday, somehow, they will get the weapons. The problem is when and how and under what conditions and it is a question that will plague American foreign policy expert in the months ahead.

Nor can attention wander from whatever is going on in Russia. It would surprise no one here in Washington if there were changes made in the leadership of the Kremlin. The exact strength of Breshnev and Kosygin in the inner councils of the Supreme Soviet is not known to the outside world, but the general feeling is that their positions are by no means solid. Reports keep seeping out of Russia that certain very high elements in the Soviet hierarchy are very dissatisfied with the economic conditions in Russia, that they believe the current Russian attitude toward Red China to be a mistake and want more forceful Russian participation in the Vietnamese war. Just how strong that element is, no one here really knows, but Washington is alert for any changes in the top Soviet leadership.

Latin America will continue to be vexing; Africa will no doubt brew its normal number of headaches; the issue of Red Chinese admission to the United Nations will be renewed; and, the American Secretary of State will on more than one occasion wonder why he ever took the job in the first place.

But Washington's basic interest in 1966 will be in the primary and final elections. They are the meat and marrow of political Washington's bones and with one of the most politically - oriented Presidents in history sitting in the White House, interest in those contests will be accentuated.

Of most interest nationally will be the election in California. Politicians just naturally gravitate to bigness and with California now the most populous state in the nation, whatever happens there will have national repercussions. At the moment of writing, California will have in prospect at least one and possibly two hot primary contests. National attention will be focussed on the gubernatorial bid of Ronald Reagan. Should it be successful, Reagan will have projected himself forcibly onto the 1968 presidential stage.

Other contests with national implications will be fought in New York where Gov. Nelson A. Rockfeller will seek re-election, in Massachusetts where a John F. Kennedy assistant, Kenneth P. O'Donnell will seek to unseat Gov. John Volpe, in Illinois where incumbent Senator, Paul Douglas, may be challenged by the young, liberal Republican, Charles Percy, and in Texas where both the incumbent conservative Republican senator, John G. Tower, and Lyndon B. Johnson's protege, conservative Democratic governor, John B. Connally, will face determined opposition.

The fates of conservatives and liberals, of Republicans and Democrats, of personalities such as Reagan and Rockefeller and Percy will have much to do with the final strategy adopted by the political parties in their next great struggle for the White House, and it is for that reason that Washington at least will busy itself throughout 1966 with the domestic political scene.

THE DOWNTOWN PORTION of the shoreline plan became all but certain on June 7, 1960. At that election the voters approved by almost a 2-1 majority—60,784 to 31,177— the $42 million outlay from tideland funds.

Subsequent disputes with the state frustrated immediate action.

Now that these have apparently been settled and the huge East Wilmington Oil field contract is yielding rich returns, the way is open for construction.

The other improvements east of the downtown district follow as a natural consequence. With but few deviations, they conform with the master plan adopted by the City Council earlier in 1960. Further action by the voters is not required under the amended charter.

The more easterly development is divided by planners into two segments—the Bluff Section extending from Alamitos Avenue to Belmont Pier and the Belmont-Shore-Peninsula section reaching to the east city boundary. Scheduling of improvements, however, does not follow a uniform west-to-east timetable.

Golfing Is Big in Leisure Boom

By JOHN CASH

What sport has increased in participation more than twice in the past decade . . . bowling . . . sky-diving . . . drag racing?

According to the latest figures compiled in Long Beach, L.A. County and nationwide, it's golf.

According to a survey

taken in June by the office of Joe Dey, president of the United States Golf Association, play has increased 250% to 500% nationally since 1950.

* * * *

AND THE DELUGE to local, county and Southern California courses doesn't seem to be on the wane. Migration brings more golfers.

Plans for the next five years in Los Angeles and Orange counties reveal at least 10 courses opening in the next year and another 15 proposed and in the drawing board stages.

Even the military services are jumping into the game, which seems to have become the nation's favorite weekend participant pastime.

"We ran a survey and found that over 6,000 active duty servicemen expressed a desire to play at least once a month," said Frank Kirkland, director of special services at the Naval Base on Terminal Island.

Kirkland, coordinator for the U.S. Naval Base Golf Course at Los Alamitos Naval Air Station in Rossmoor, opening by the end of summer, added, "For five years we've tried to push this course through. We really need one. It's the only military course in the area. El Toro is the nearest one at present."

City golf superintendent B. K. Jones, who says the number of golfers locally is about three times what it was 10 years ago, believes "many more county and city courses could be utilized, especially on weekends."

* * * *

JONES HAS GIVEN considerable thought to the problem. "On the weekends we could fill the course every day with tournaments from manufacturers and business concern personnel alone.

"I've even discussed going to night maintenance because the play is so heavy in the daytime. Just look at the turnouts for our junior program. We're full at Recreation Park, Skylinks and El Dorado during the summer classes."

Since 1950, the number of courses from the northern part of Los Angeles County to San Diego County has doubled. The present listing is 500. And there doesn't seem to be a lag.

"Right now, we are at the saturation point. We can't handle any more play," says John Moeller, golf director for the Department of Parks and Recreation for the County of Los Angeles.

"At Western Avenue in Gardena, we average about 135,000 rounds a year.

"It's no wonder we've had to begin work on Victoria Golf Club, Rancho Los Amigos and Marshall Canyon Golf Club. These three county courses will be completed no later than January 1967."

The next five years will be a period of extensive growth and development for the Dominguez area.

Planned industrial expansion on the part of the Carson Estate Company, Dominguez Estate Company property within the area by 1970. At the end of this period approximately 400 acres of this development and the Watson Land Company will add at least 850 acres of developed industrial will be filled by new industrial establishments.

This industrial development will represent an investment in excess of $75 million during this period and will generate over $1.5 million in property taxes. It is estimated that this expansion will provide an additional 15,000 job opportunities in the area.

Population projections for the Dominguez area indicate the residential community will number about 90,000 by 1970. This reflects an anticipated increase of 12,000 new residents for the next five years.

The establishment of the California State College at the Dominguez Hills site in the near future is looked forward to with anticipation by all elements of the community.

Shoreline Develops

uled for 1967-68; the ultimate addition of as many as 3,500 parking spaces in various lots over and above the existing 1,000 spaces downtown, with the first $630,000 parking unit set for not later than 1968; and the installation of pubic utility facilities in 1967-68 at a cost of $1.4 million.

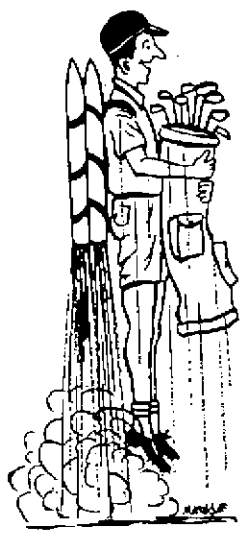
THE DOWNTOWN PORTION of the shoreline plan became all but certain on June 7, 1960. At that election the voters approved by almost a 2-1 majority—60,784 to 31,177— the $42 million outlay from tideland funds.

Subsequent disputes with the state frustrated immediate action.

Now that these have apparently been settled and the huge East Wilmington Oil field contract is yielding rich returns, the way is open for construction.

The other improvements east of the downtown district follow as a natural consequence. With but few deviations, they conform with the master plan adopted by the City Council earlier in 1960. Further action by the voters is not required under the amended charter.

The more easterly development is divided by planners into two segments—the Bluff Section extending from Alamitos Avenue to Belmont Pier and the Belmont-Shore-Peninsula section reaching to the east city boundary. Scheduling of improvements, however, does not follow a uniform west-to-east timetable.



Golfing Is Big in Leisure Boom

By JOHN CASH

What sport has increased in participation more than twice in the past decade . . . bowling . . . sky-diving . . . drag racing?

According to the latest figures compiled in Long Beach, L.A. County and nationwide, it's golf.

According to a survey

taken in June by the office of Joe Dey, president of the United States Golf Association, play has increased 250% to 500% nationally since 1950.

* * * *

AND THE DELUGE to local, county and Southern California courses doesn't seem to be on the wane. Migration brings more golfers.

Plans for the next five years in Los Angeles and Orange counties reveal at least 10 courses opening in the next year and another 15 proposed and in the drawing board stages.

Even the military services are jumping into the game, which seems to have become the nation's favorite weekend participant pastime.

"We ran a survey and found that over 6,000 active duty servicemen expressed a desire to play at least once a month," said Frank Kirkland, director of special services at the Naval Base on Terminal Island.

Kirkland, coordinator for the U.S. Naval Base Golf Course at Los Alamitos Naval Air Station in Rossmoor, opening by the end of summer, added, "For five years we've tried to push this course through. We really need one. It's the only military course in the area. El Toro is the nearest one at present."

City golf superintendent B. K. Jones, who says the number of golfers locally is about three times what it was 10 years ago, believes "many more county and city courses could be utilized, especially on weekends."

* * * *

JONES HAS GIVEN considerable thought to the problem. "On the weekends we could fill the course every day with tournaments from manufacturers and business concern personnel alone.

"I've even discussed going to night maintenance because the play is so heavy in the daytime. Just look at the turnouts for our junior program. We're full at Recreation Park, Skylinks and El Dorado during the summer classes."

Since 1950, the number of courses from the northern part of Los Angeles County to San Diego County has doubled. The present listing is 500. And there doesn't seem to be a lag.

"Right now, we are at the saturation point. We can't handle any more play," says John Moeller, golf director for the Department of Parks and Recreation for the County of Los Angeles.

"At Western Avenue in Gardena, we average about 135,000 rounds a year.

"It's no wonder we've had to begin work on Victoria Golf Club, Rancho Los Amigos and Marshall Canyon Golf Club. These three county courses will be completed no later than January 1967."

Dominguez

By E. H. REYNOLDS
President, Dominguez Industrial Council

The next five years will be a period of extensive growth and development for the Dominguez area.

Planned industrial expansion on the part of the Carson Estate Company, Dominguez Estate Company property within the area by 1970. At the end of this period approximately 400 acres of this development and the Watson Land Company will add at least 850 acres of developed industrial will be filled by new industrial establishments.

This industrial development will represent an investment in excess of $75 million during this period and will generate over $1.5 million in property taxes. It is estimated that this expansion will provide an additional 15,000 job opportunities in the area.

Population projections for the Dominguez area indicate the residential community will number about 90,000 by 1970. This reflects an anticipated increase of 12,000 new residents for the next five years.

The establishment of the California State College at the Dominguez Hills site in the near future is looked forward to with anticipation by all elements of the community.

WATERFRONT TULSA

By LOU JOBST

Long a major petroleum center and now scene of the largest and most ambitious tideland oil venture in western U.S. history, Long Beach may one day be a waterfront Tulsa.

Development of the fabulous 1.2 billion barrel East Wilmington oil field, begun last summer and about to hit full stride, already has made the city a focal point for an industry without which the modern world would grind to a halt.

Still, Long Beach's role and importance in the oil world is certain to grow by leaps and bounds. Only how big is open to conjecture.

The city, many experts argue, is the logical center for development of the vast, untapped petroleum riches known to lie beneath the sea in the Southern California tidelands.

ESTIMATES are that the oil reserves lying offshore between Point Conception and the Mexican border are greater than all the petroleum resources of the derrick-studded Gulf Coast.

Tapping of this tremendous mineral reservoir is certain to come on a massive scale during the final decades of the 20th Century.

There is the view, with considerable justification, this great enterprise has already begun in the waters of the city's inimitable shoreline.

For sheer magnitude and technical virtuosity, creation and development of the 1,100-well East Wilmington field has no peers.

IT AND TIE directly related shoreline redevelopment program are, without challenge, the most significant and profound undertaking in the history of a city, born in the 19th century as an agrarian colony and barely reaching maturity as a metropolis after a brief, sometimes turbulent adolescence as a decorous seashore resort, booming fleet town and old folks' haven about to sink back into the sea.

While the full impact of the "field," which will take five years to create and $1 billion to build and operate, cannot be accurately determined, it will bring continuing change, some for the worse, but most for the better.

Some change is already visible and much more is just over the horizon.

At year end 30 wells were finished in the field and daily production had reached 13,000 barrels, a program somewhat behind schedule, but a yield somewhat beyond expectation.

"ASIDE FROM THE delay," reported city petroleum boss Leonard Brock, "the results have all been favorable, especially the production per well."

Limited at present to operations on 311-acre manmade Pier J, the tempo of field work will step up markedly with the emergence this year and next of four 10-acre rock-and-fill drilling islands in the waters just offshore.

Three of the islands, each costing about $1.5 million, are to be completed by the end of 1966.

These artificial atolls, requiring 325,000 tons of rock and 1.8 million cubic yards of fill later to be beautified and landscaped, will contain between 150 and 300 wells each.

Drilling is scheduled to move offshore in March or April with the completion then of Island A, about 600 feet seaward of famed Rainbow Pier and the Long Beach Arena.

THUMS LONG BEACH Co., operator of the field and a combine formed by Texaco, Humble, Union, Mobil and Shell oil companies, will spend $48.8 million on field work this year.

This will finance the drilling of 119 wells, 30 which will be used for water flood, a subsidence safety feature that increases recovery of petroleum.

Field production is expected to reach 57,400-barrels-a-day by the end of 1966.

Ultimate daily production, when all the drilling work is completed in 1970 or '71, is expected to be between 150,000 and 200,000 barrels-a-day.

At the height of drilling, when upwards of 1,000 men will be at work in the field, one well is to be completed on each island every 3½ days.

Another 500 men will be at work in service operations including the massive offshore supply. Estimates are that each of the islands will require 88 truckloads of 77,000 pounds of equipment and gear every 14 days.

THE MARINE LOGISTICS to meet this demand, largest such operation in the history of the industry on the Pacific Coast, will involve a fleet of 11 seagoing vessels.

This fleet will be provided by Tidewater Marine Pacific of Santa Barbara at a cost of $1½ to $2 million.

The first vessels, including high speed 40-passenger crew boats, 46-foot seagoing tugs, massive 150-foot steel cargo barges and a 47-foot emergency boat are to be delivered in April. The remainder will arrive on the scene in July and December.

During 1967 the oil armada, manned and maintained by a crew of 50 workers, will operate around-the-clock, carrying up to 1,000 tons and 500 workers a day to the drilling islands.

Currently, design work is going ahead on a huge terminal facility Thums plans to build at the end of Pier G in the port district.

THIS TERMINAL, which will cover 236,000 square feet of the south pier end, will contain field offices, warehouse area, barge landing, small boat piers, a heliport and parking for more than 250 cars.

Meanwhile work also has proceeded on laying of a huge pipeline to carry the crude oil from Pier J to a transmission center on Mitchell Avenue in the central port district.

From the transmission centers the crude will be routed to the various refineries.

Nearly $10 million—almost $30 for every man, woman and child living in Long Beach—will be spent this year alone on these operating facilities.

At the same time Thums is busy buying steel on the open world market.

The State Lands Commission has approved purchase, by open bidding, of pipe and steel casing for the first 40 wells.

It is estimated that development of the total field will require 100,000 tons of steel.

The steel purchase is one indication of the dovetailing effect on the Long Beach economy of the field development. For every ton of steel that moves across the docks of the harbor, the port will get 80 cents in revenue.

HOW ABOUT THE other economic affects?

The city, under its agreement with the state, is to get $250,000,000 from the oil production during a 35-year contract.

A 50-50 division of funds with the state will remain in effect until Dec. 31, 1968. Thereafter, the city cut will decrease by 5% each year until an 85-15 state-city cut is reached.

This means Long Beach will get the bulk of its money during the early years—those immediately ahead.

The city should get about $100 million—not to mention royalties from city owned lands—during the first five years. This is to be pumped into the shoreline public works projects, an undertaking which is expected to produce jobs for 2,500 persons and increase the earnings of another 25,000. During the full 3½-decade history of the field these projects should create at least 25,000 jobs and affect the income of 250,000.

The state will take about $1 billion from the field; its affect on the California economy is almost immeasurable.

Still another economic factor will be the royalties paid the owners of 10,000 lots in the field.

YOU CAN PLAY almost any tune with the super statistics.

Take the total value of the field production of 1.2 billion barrels of oil and 234 billion cubic feet of gas. On the market this is worth $3 billion. Such a bo-

LONG BEACH'S ROLE AS WATERFRONT TULSA

By LOU JOBST

Long a major petroleum center and now scene of the largest and most ambitious tideland oil venture in western U.S. history, Long Beach may one day be a waterfront Tulsa.

Development of the fabulous 1.2 billion barrel East Wilmington oil field, begun last summer and about to hit full stride, already has made the city a focal point for an industry without which the modern world would grind to a halt.

Still, Long Beach's role and importance in the oil world is certain to grow by leaps and bounds. Only how big is open to conjecture.

The city, many experts argue, is the logical center for development of the vast, untapped petroleum riches known to lie beneath the sea in the Southern California tidelands.

ESTIMATES are that the oil reserves lying offshore between Point Conception and the Mexican border are greater than all the petroleum resources of the derrick-studded Gulf Coast.

Tapping of this tremendous mineral reservoir is certain to come on a massive scale during the final decades of the 20th Century.

There is the view, with considerable justification, this great enterprise has already begun in the waters of the city's inimitable shoreline.

For sheer magnitude and technical virtuosity, creation and development of the 1,100-well East Wilmington field has no peers.

IT AND THE directly related shoreline redevelopment program are, without challenge, the most significant and profound undertaking in the history of a city, born in the 19th century as an agrarian colony and barely reaching maturity as a metropolis after a brief, sometimes turbulent adolescence as a decorous seashore resort, booming fleet town and old folks' haven about to sink back into the sea.

While the full impact of the "field," which will take five years to create and $1 billion to build and operate, cannot be accurately determined, it will bring continuing change, some for the worse, but most for the better.

Some change is already visible and much more is just over the horizon.

At year end 30 wells were finished in the field and daily production had reached 13,000 barrels, a program somewhat behind schedule, but a yield somewhat beyond expectation.

"ASIDE FROM THE delay," reported city petroleum boss Leonard Brock, "the results have all been favorable, especially the production per well."

Limited at present to operations on 311-acre manmade Pier J, the tempo of field work will step up markedly with the emergence this year and next of four 10-acre rock-and-fill drilling islands in the waters just offshore.

Three of the islands, each costing about $1.5 million, are to be completed by the end of 1966.

These artificial atolls, requiring 325,000 tons of rock and 1.8 million cubic yards of fill later to be beautified and landscaped, will contain between 150 and 300 wells each.

Drilling is scheduled to move offshore in March or April with the completion then of Island A, about 600 feet seaward of famed Rainbow Pier and the Long Beach Arena.

THUMS LONG BEACH Co., operator of the field and a combine formed by Texaco, Humble, Union, Mobil and Shell oil companies, will spend $48.8 million on field work this year.

This will finance the drilling of 119 wells, 30 which will be used for water flood, a subsidence safety feature that increases recovery of petroleum.

Field production is expected to reach 57,400-barrels-a-day by the end of 1966.

Ultimate daily production, when all the drilling work is completed in 1970 or '71, is expected to be between 150,000 and 200,000 barrels-a-day.

At the height of drilling, when upwards of 1,000 men will be at work in the field, one well is to be completed on each island every 3½ days.

Another 500 men will be at work in service operations including the massive offshore supply. Estimates are that each of the islands will require 88 truckloads of 77,000 pounds of equipment and gear every 14 days.

THE MARINE LOGISTICS to meet this demand, largest such operation in the history of the industry on the Pacific Coast, will involve a fleet of 11 seagoing vessels.

This fleet will be provided by Tidewater Marine Pacific of Santa Barbara at a cost of $1½ to $2 million.

The first vessels, including high speed 40-passenger crew boats, 46-foot seagoing tugs, massive 150-foot steel cargo barges and a 47-foot emergency boat are to be delivered in April. The remainder will arrive on the scene in July and December.

During 1967 the oil armada, manned and maintained by a crew of 50 workers, will operate around-the-clock, carrying up to 1,000 tons and 500 workers a day to the drilling islands.

Currently, design work is going ahead on a huge terminal facility Thums plans to build at the end of Pier G in the port district.

THIS TERMINAL, which will cover 236,000 square feet of the south pier end, will contain field offices, warehouse area, barge landing, small boat piers, a heliport and parking for more than 250 cars.

Meanwhile work also has proceeded on laying of a huge pipeline to carry the crude oil from Pier J to a transmission center on Mitchell Avenue in the central port district.

From the transmission centers the crude will be routed to the various refineries.

Nearly $10 million—almost $30 for every man, woman and child living in Long Beach—will be spent this year alone on these operating facilities.

At the same time Thums is busy buying steel on the open world market.

The State Lands Commission has approved purchase, by open bidding, of pipe and steel casing for the first 40 wells.

It is estimated that development of the total field will require 100,000 tons of steel.

The steel purchase is one indication of the dovetailing effect on the Long Beach economy of the field development. For every ton of steel that moves across the docks of the harbor, the port will get 80 cents in revenue.

HOW ABOUT THE other economic affects?

The city, under its agreement with the state, is to get $250,000,000 from the oil production during a 35-year contract.

A 50-50 division of funds with the state will remain in effect until Dec. 31, 1968. Thereafter, the city cut will decrease by 5% each year until an 85-15 state-city cut is reached.

This means Long Beach will get the bulk of its money during the early years—those immediately ahead.

The city should get about $100 million—not to mention royalties from city owned lands—during the first five years. This is to be pumped into the shoreline public works projects, an undertaking which is expected to produce jobs for 2,500 persons and increase the earnings of another 25,000. During the full 3½-decade history of the field these projects should create at least 25,000 jobs and affect the income of 250,000.

The state will take about $1 billion from the field; its affect on the California economy is almost immeasurable.

Still another economic factor will be the royalties paid the owners of 10,000 lots in the field.

YOU CAN PLAY almost any tune with the super statistics.

Take the total value of the field production of 1.2 billion barrels of oil and 234 billion cubic feet of gas. On the market this is worth $3 billion. Such a bo-

This year's elections could cast the die for the mold of California politics for the rest of the decade. Then again—whichever way they go—the results might only goad losers to overturn logical frm sheets.

The next five years could be those of the young comers. Or—with recent example at hand—they could be years of reward for vintage heroes of the silver screen.

It gets down to this. California politics is a lampshade hat at a party, an ape throwing dice, a thousand-stringed lute, impossible. Writing yesterday's politics is uncertain; tomorrow's is banked by many hedges.

Before we anticipate some of the political headlines of the five years ahead, we should be tempered by this lesson of substance; don't count any politician out prematurely.

GEORGE MURPHY taught us that. Murphy came from the right wing of the Republican Party—a party outnumbered 3 to 2; he was 62 years old and without experience in seeking political office; he was from the South when the U.S. Senate seat was due to go to a northerner; he ran against an incumbent who was a devoted ally of the martyred John F. Kennedy; he didn't get ankle deep in any issues other than braceros and desalinization. And he won.

Despite that episode, there are strong indicators of youthful government for this state in the next five years.

One of the most dramatic examples is the case of C. George Deukmejian, 37, elected to the State Assembly in 1962 in the East Long Beach-Signal Hill 39th District. Within his two terms he has zoomed past the seniority barrier to become Republican Whip in the Assembly and has made numerous appearances on statewide radio and TV, generally making a pitch for harder-line law enforcement and punishment.

Now, after two years he is expected to run this year for the State Senate in the newly-apportioned 37th District, which includes his Assembly district. He frankly preferred having an odd-numbered district with its two-year Senate term. This gives him a reelection race in 1968, but also means a four-year term won in that year would give him free-ride security in 1970 when he could run for a state constitutional office—probably attorney general.

ALTHOUGH OLDER, Democratic Assemblyman Joseph M. Kennick of the West Long Beach-Lakewood-Dominguez 44th District, also moved high and fast after his 1958 election. Kennick, now 69, is chairman of the important Public Utilities and Corporations Committee and an insider of esteem. His sights also are on the State Senate this year, and also in an odd-numbered (33rd) district.

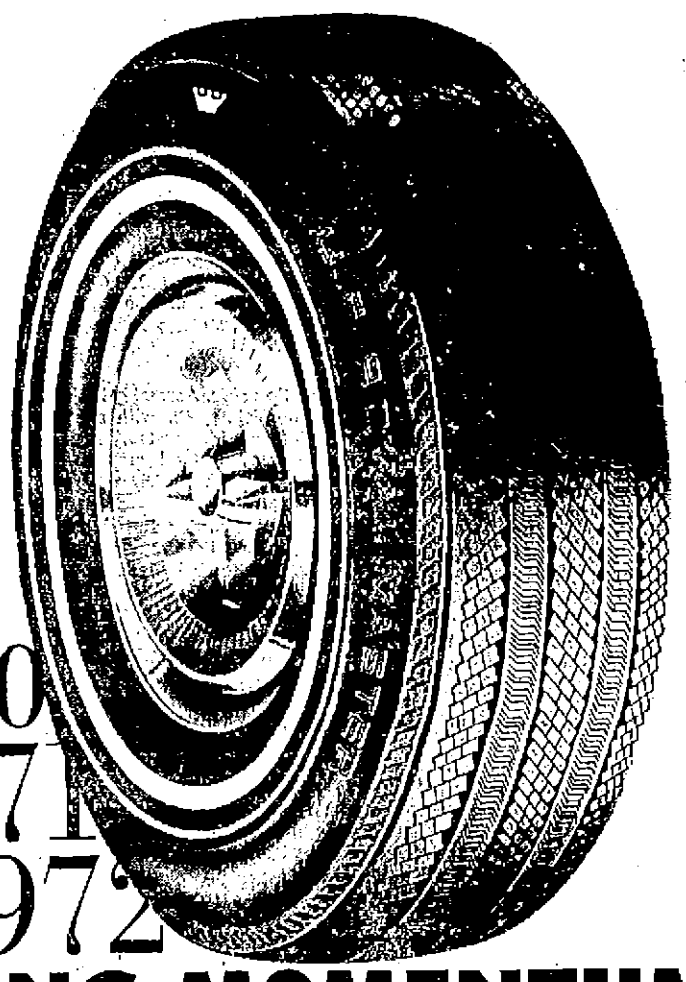
Attorney Michael Cullen, Democrat, at 38 has a congressional campaign behind him—a race against incumbent Republican Craig Hosmer—and has announced for the 44th Assembly contest this year. He is a commander in the Naval Reserve and commanding officer of the USS Halsey Powell Reserve crew out of Long Beach. He won party friends in his aggressive but moderate 1964 campaign, hit hard at differences with Hosmer but, after the election, commended Hosmer for high-level campaigning and ridiculed an eastern publisher's request for possible conflict-of-interest information about his opponent.

JOHN TUNNEY

GEORGE CHRISTOPHER

Vice Mayor James A. Hayes is another among the ambitious legal fraternity and at 44 qualifies for the younger candidate category. He tried for the 39th Assembly District in 1962, extended his councilmanic duties to the state stage in several instances with wide news media recognition and has now declared again for the district's Assembly seat.

There are several state legislators as young or younger than these but they have not moved. Thus, despite impressive biographical statistics in education and law, they give no current indication that they can move upward.



GOP Assembly leader Robert T. Monagan, of Tracy, is 45 and has been mentioned for governor but the prospect seems to have faded for this election, with Ronald Reagan and George Christopher getting all the attention.

OTHER REPUBLICANS at state level with the tenure and talent for career escalation include Assemblymen Hugh Flournoy, 36; William Bagley, 37, and Robert S. Stevens, 49, the latter mentioned among prospective attorney general potentials.

Political Issues Anticipated

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

In addition to the rise of youthful candidates, best bets on the next half-decade's political scene should include:

Seeing the full impact of reapportionment's shift of political power to the populous South.

Tax reform to relieve property owner's burden.

Annual general sessions of the Legislature combined with salary increases commensurate with full-time status.

Application of space-age techniques to combat crime and other major problems, whether Democrats or Republicans are in power.

A steady closure of the gap in party representation in the Legislature as Republicans go all out to get majority status in time to capture the state redistricting chore after the 1970 census.

Possible lengthening of State Assembly terms from the present two years to four years.

Reform to take some of the fat out of inheritance tax appraiser appointments.

Possible arrangement for more free TV time for candidates to take the accent off big spending for political success.

Youthful Candidates Expected

Robert Lagomarsino, state senator from Ventura, is only 40 and has an impressive background.

Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh has to be considered one of the biggest names among the kinetic young legislators. At 43 he has become almost a national figure—a by-product of his close Kennedy ties and his guest political lectures at eastern universities, as well as his political knowledgeability, conceded by both parties. He may go for state senate—an odd-numbered, two-year-term district—or even lieutenant governor this year but is not likely to seek reelection to the Assembly.

Some whose talents may have been muted by their northern colleagues may loom larger with the power shift to Southern California.

Long Beach Congressman Craig Hosmer, 50, is the object of a persistent rumble among state GOP leaders about higher office due to his pace-setting election victories. And Glen Lipscomb, also 50, is a Republican model candidate as well. Comers on the Democratic side at the congressional level would have to include freshman John Tunney of Riverside, only 31; and a national magazine has marked James Corman of Van Nuys as one with a potential for significant stature. He's 45.

Probably the most underrated or unrecognized political talent at the moment in state Republicanism is Robert H. Finch, 41, now a candidate for lieutenant governor. Handicapped by the obscurity of being the man behind the candidate for so many years, (Nixon and Murphy), Finch's task is to become widely known. His list of sponsors embrace a wider spectrum of GOP consensus than that enjoyed by any other statewide candidate. His plain and sane language to his party loses its basic brilliance in his low-key delivery. But if the party should decide one day to dust off his pronouncements it may well find the gem of the decade in terms of party fortune.

DEMOCRATS AT the state's helm have the strength of incumbency going for them. No judyment should be rendered here on their stewardship because that's what this year's debate is all about. But it will have to be a mainly defensive battle, as it always is with incumbents. Their abiding concern is staying at their present stations.

But success for Republicans is a different game. It means that each man vying, except for Secretary of State Frank Jordan, must take a step upward.

Best guess this early is that the GOP Reagan and Christopher. State Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty, 48, would be formidable if the state sets a conservative trend but, despite the ambition exposed in his speeches and writings, he is unlikely to jump for a higher perch until he reads that conservatism as a surety.

Youth may be a factor in the attorney general race. Incumbent Thomas Lynch, appointed by Gov. Brown, is 62. He is challenged, mainly on grounds of age and fresh approach, by fellow Democrat William M. Bennett, 47, a state Public Utilities commissioner. First Republican in the contest was Santa Clara County Counsel Spencer Williams, 43. Another possible GOP entry is Los Angeles County GOP Chairman Julius A. (Jud) Leetham, who would be playing a major advantage in his area's population edge.

IGNORING that edfe, Assembly Majority Leader Jerome Waldie, 40, with a northern base in Antioch, is reportedly fired up about the attorney general seat on the rumored prospect that Lynch may bow out due to ill health.

Secretary of State Jordan and his father before him have occupied the office for 50 years. But Democratic challenge may hang on a fateful hinge—the confrontation of the 43-year-old California Real Estate Commissioner Milton G. Gordon and an expected Negro entry, probably Los Angeles Councilman Thomas Bradley.

Ivy Baker Priest Stevens, Eisenhower's U.S. Treasurer, is challenging incumbent Democrat Bert A. Betts for state treasurer. Controller Alan Cranston is alone in the field at this writing.

In summary, the name of the next chief executive is in doubt right to the wire because of the vagaries of California voters. But there's an inexorable continuing story in the GOP's bid to recapture state power.

In 1952, right after Republicans had carved district lines from the 1950 census, the GOP had a 112 to 50 margin in State Senate, Assembly, congressional and state constitutional offices. In the next 10 years, by 1962, Democrats had reversed the score, 113 to 57 (the state picked up eight new congressional seats after 1960). But in 1964, Republicans, despite Goldwater's loss, cut the margin to 107 to 63. If the GOP cuts deeper this year and in the legislative elections of 1968 and 1970, when the new census comes, they could control the Legislature and literally reapportion the state's way back to a strong two-party situation.

Norwalk

By ARTHUR F. GERDES
Mayor of Norwalk

Where is Norwalk headed?

The beginning of the Southeast Superior Court within the year ahead will be a major factor in the upgrading of the image of the city. With the construction of this seven-story, $5 million facility, will come a renewed awareness of Norwalk from the 22 surrounding Southland cities which it will serve, as will the County Regional Library located within the Civic Center complex.

Elsewhere, Norwalk's own Cerritos College will, in the years ahead, expand to meet the ever growing needs of a rapidly growing education-minded populous. As a practical step in this direction, the college will soon acquire an additional 40 acres for sorely needed college expansion.

Creating an impact on merchant and motorist alike will be the widening of San Antonio Drive which, hopefully, will be completed by this time next year. This major project will literally revitalize the old downtown section of Norwalk. Also, hopefully by next year, construction will have started on Alondra Boulevard as well as other city streets, thus better accommodating the motorists of Norwalk.

In effect, I see the future of Norwalk as being unlimited and call on the 94,000 residents of the city to look forward with vision in its future development.

THE LESSONS learned in developing the field, the techniques created and perfected are certain to have lasting affects in the increasingly important area of offshore mineral extraction.

The Long Beach project comes, too, at a time that offshore technology, due to massive scientific and technical breakthroughs, is about to push exploration and recovery techniques farther and farther out onto the continental shelves, taking man to deeper and deeper ocean depths.

Already a concentration point for this undersea technology—at least in the field of marine oil recovery—Long Beach can only accrue more impressive credentials in this sphere.

Efforts to seek oceanological developments and enterprises will bear their initial important harvest next month when the first Offshore Exploration Conference in Pacific Coast history is staged Feb. 22-23-and-24 in Long Beach.

Political Issues Anticipated

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

In addition to the rise of youthful candidates, best bets on the next half-decade's political scene should include:

Seeing the full impact of reapportionment's shift of political power to the populous South.

Tax reform to relieve property owner's burden.

Annual general sessions of the Legislature combined with salary increases commensurate with full-time status.

Application of space-age techniques to combat crime and other major problems, whether Democrats or Republicans are in power.

A steady closure of the gap in party representation in the Legislature as Republicans go all out to get majority status in time to capture the state redistricting chore after the 1970 census.

Possible lengthening of State Assembly terms from the present two years to four years.

Reform to take some of the fat out of inheritance tax appraiser appointments.

Possible arrangement for more free TV time for candidates to take the accent off big spending for political success.

Robert Lagomarsino, state senator from Ventura, is only 40 and has an impressive background.

Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh has to be considered one of the biggest names among the kinetic young legislators. At 43 he has become almost a national figure—a by-product of his close Kennedy ties and his guest political lectures at eastern universities, as well as his political knowledgeability, conceded by both parties. He may go for state senate—an odd-numbered, two-year-term district—or even lieutenant governor this year but is not likely to seek reelection to the Assembly.

Some whose talents may have been muted by their northern colleagues may loom larger with the power shift to Southern California.

Long Beach Congressman Craig Hosmer, 50, is the object of a persistent rumble among state GOP leaders about higher office due to his pace-setting election victories. And Glen Lipscomb, also 50, is a Republican model candidate as well. Comers on the Democratic side at the congressional level would have to include freshman John Tunney of Riverside, only 31, and a national magazine has marked James Corman of Van Nuys as one with a potential for significant stature. He's 45.

Probably the most underrated or unrecognized political talent at the moment in state Republicanism is Robert H. Finch, 41, now a candidate for lieutenant governor. 1975 CALIFORNIA POPULATION — 14 MILLION PEOPLE

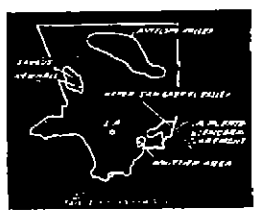
L. A. County: A Challenge

By LINDON S. HOLLINGER
Chief Administrative Officer
Los Angeles County



I wish I had a crystal ball from which I could get some clear indication of the problems which will emerge to face County Government in the near future, particularly the next five years, and the steps which will be required to meet the challenges presented. That the challenges will occur is inevitable, if this County continues to be dynamic and progressive and continues to grow. Population explosions alone, which will take the County close to the 8,000,000 mark before many years have elapsed, will tax our capabilities.

Probably the most readily foreseeable problem — in fact, one that is already upon us—is the necessity to find some solution to the ever increasing burdens of the real property taxpayer. This is not a problem for County Government alone, but for all local jurisdictions which must depend on the property tax as its primary source of revenue. It simply is not in the cards that governmental expenditures at local levels could do otherwise than continue to increase.

By and large, local governmental operations are efficient and are geared to the service demands of the electorate. The costs of providing services for a substantial increase in population before an offsetting tax base has been created, the continuation of the present trend toward shifting more of the basic responsibilities for health and welfare to government, and the slow but inevitable inflationary trend, all contribute to a growth in governmental spending requirements at a rate faster than the increase in the tax base.

OUR MAJOR PROBLEM then is to find some way of continuing to provide a level of service consistent with the demands and the progress of the community, to do so first by the infusion into the government process of every possible management technique to hold costs down, and then to provide alternate sources of financing so that the already overburdened property taxpayer may not have his problems further magnified.

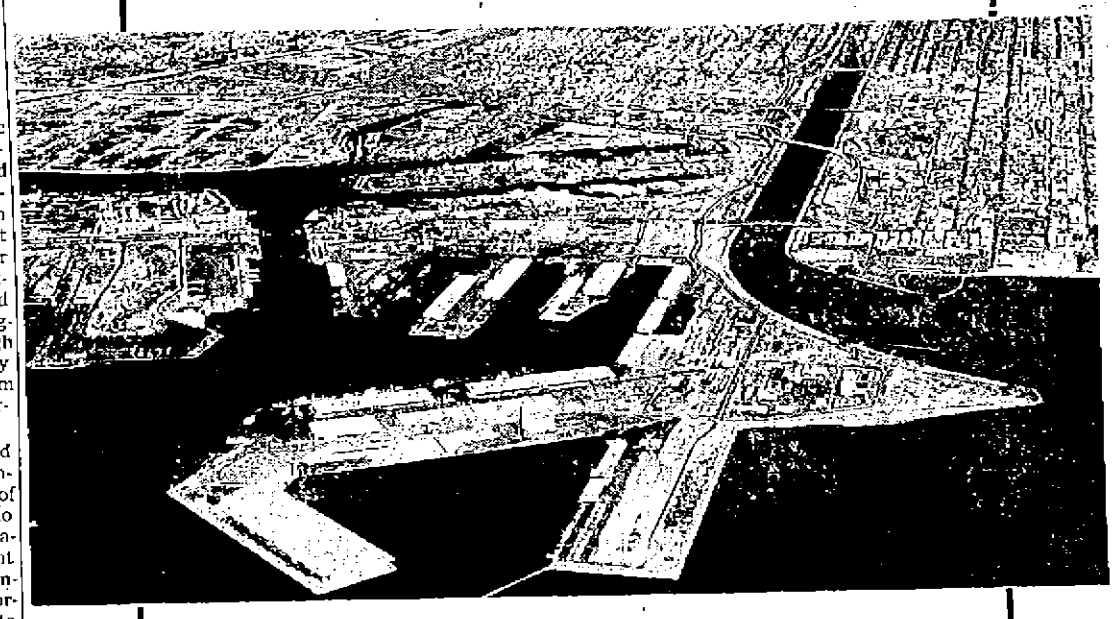
At the last legislative session, this County presented a comprehensive revenue program to the State Legislature, which would have gone far toward achieving this objective. It was unsuccessful last year but it is again being presented this year, and we believe the prospects for at least some amount of tax reform are favorable.

It is certain that County Government will be faced with a great many challenges during the coming years as an aftermath of the explosive incidents in the Watts area. Nothing could have more clearly demonstrated the need for a better understanding between the people of our community and the far-sighted approach which must be taken of the various facets of this problem. We cannot, at this time, begin to forecast how far reaching the corrective measures must be, but we certainly can recognize that the problems must be met and conquered, with full recognition of the impact on personnel and financial resources at all levels of government.

THE CONTROL OF AIR pollution must certainly remain as one of the major problems to be conquered in this community is to continue to develop. The present elimination of 5,000 tons of pollutants from the atmosphere daily is a substantial accomplishment, but past performances are of little value when the overall jeopardy from air pollution stays at its present high level. The basic responsibility for the major remaining source of irritants, automobile exhaust pollution, is at the State level, but this does not, in any way, lessen the County's responsibility for vigorous and forthright action.



Los Angeles County suffers, as do all metropolitan areas, from the ever present problem of increasing crime rates. Chief among the causes is the use of narcotics, dangerous drugs and alcohol. The State has recently enacted legislation in both these areas to combat these problems, and our community has been fortunate in having concerned citizens who provided vigorous leadership through their service on the County Commission on Alcoholism and Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs Commission.

The County has instituted a program for the involuntary civil commitment of narcotics users, designed to commit these users for rehabilitation in State treatment centers. There is substantial hope that a large portion of narcotics addicts will be successfully rehabilitated through this program.

The Board of Supervisors has recently approved and submitted to the State Department of Public Health an application covering a comprehensive County-wide program for the treatment and prevention of alcoholism. This program will go beyond the treatment of the individual by development of information, education and coordination of services throughout the community.

The next five years in Los Angeles County may prove to be the most significant in our history. Progress and solutions will not come suddenly or dramatically, but the cooperation and continued efforts of all the citizens and all levels of government will make Los Angeles an even better place.

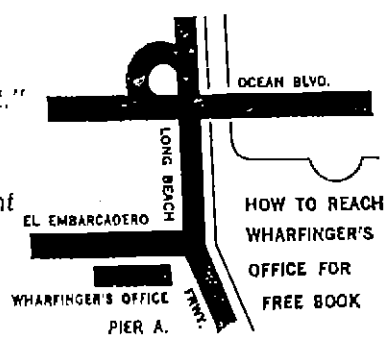
Treat the family to a SEE-LANE tour of the Port of Long Beach. Educational and interesting, the SEE-LANE tour is designed as a do-it-yourself tour through many of the Port's most interesting installations.

To begin with, drive to the Wharfinger's office. There you will receive a free, colorful SEE-LANE guidebook which illustrates the route to drive and gives descriptions of the facilities you will see.

As you continue your tour you will see huge Navy ships, freighters from dozens of foreign ports, cargoes from all over the world . . . a total picture of America's most modern port at work.

Remember—there is no charge for the booklet or for the tour. You are invited to be the guests of the Long Beach Harbor Department on your SEE-LANE tour.



FACTS ABOUT THE PORT OF LONG BEACH

The Port of Long Beach is "America's Most Modern Port."

The Port is municipally owned and is debt-free.

The Port of Long Beach handled an all-time high amount of cargo in its 1964-65 fiscal year — more than 13 million tons.

Shipping and commercial companies in the Port are a major source of payrolls in the greater Long Beach area.

THE HALF DECADE AHEAD

Sun, Sand, and Sea Spell Sports on the South Coast

By PAUL WALLACE

We live by a warm and sun-washed sea in a summertime land where the living, indeed, is easy. At our backs, the mountains shoulder into the sky and, beyond them, the tawny wastes of desert stretch eastward toward another sort of country, greener and more compact.

Ours is a land of broad horizons — a young land, growing spectacularly, full of the excesses of youth but brimming, too, with youth's easy optimism and its vitality.

Ours is a prosperous land and we, with our leisure ever increasing, are a pleasure-seeking people. We are youthful in outlook and recreation is a dominant interest, an interest drawn outdoors by the gentle climate, scattered into infinitely diverse channels by the variety of this land's terrain, the richnesss of its natural resources.

SPORT IS THE THING. We are watchers. All kinds of spectator events draw throngs. But, above all, we are doers. And where else on earth is the choice of things to do wider?

Surf at the Huntington bluffs or ski Mt. Baldy; sky dive at Elsinore or take a jeep out exploring across the open desert; play tennis or golf (any day of the year) or ride a horse over the steep trails of the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Hike up Old Saddleback. Go shooting, fishing, bird watching, rattlesnake hunting. Race your sports car at Santa Barbara or Riverside or Palm Springs. Play volleyball on the beach.

Mayhe you'd like the group in Orange County who train arctic sled dogs or those kite buffs who get together to fly (or try to fly) their imaginative creations.

There is something for everybody.

TAKE SAILING. With our proximity to the sea, proliberating marinas and prevailing fresh breezes, small boat sailing is one of the fastest-growing of all our fast-growing sports.

One recent Sunday afternoon, more than a hundred boats of a dozen classes sailed out of Long Beach's Alamitos Bay Yacht Club for an afternoon of racing.

Called by some man's most graceful creations, sailboats seem to glide over the water as effortlessly as a soaring gull. This impression, however, exists only for shoresiders who never have been in the cockpit of a sailing craft under way.

The crew of a small centerboard boat, racing in a piping breeze, can make the heralded efforts of a one-armed paper hanger seem like a coffee break.

This Sunday, though, the wind was light and the boats moved slowly. The race was almost a drifter. There was little apparent activity in the cockpits.

But it takes as much skill to sail faster than competitors in light air as in heavy and the relaxed attitudes of the racing crews were largely illusory.

Tense skippers fussed constantly with the trim of their sails, fretted about anticipated maneuvers, worried over competitors' strategy.

THEIR EYES FLICKED from the sea ahead to their sails, from their sails to an approaching buoy where a change of course was necesssary, from the buoy to other boats converging on it, then back to their sails.

So it went through the sunny, winter afternoon, the sea air bracing in the sailors' faces, the water chuckling under the hulls.

Then they were over the finish line. Concentration dissolved. Shoulders drooped. Beer cans popped open. Shouting across the water, crews needled each other good naturedly.

Now suddenly, euphorically tired, savoring the feeling of an afternoon spent at something thoroughly worth doing, an afternoon absorbed in their sport, the sailors headed for shore, pointing their white-winged craft back toward the land — this summertime land where the living is easy.

Experts Say: Long Beach Cultural Horizons

EXPANDING

Six experts seated around a table, pouring into a recording machine their hopes and fears for Long Beach as a major cultural center five years hence.

That was the setting for the series of projections, of "educated guesses," into the artistic world of 1970.

Five topics were given the panel:

What does Long Beach need to develop as a culture center? How would they assess local talent, audience sophistication, relationships between existing cultural groups, and the recent International Sculpture Symposium at Long Beach State College?

Participating in this extended "think" session were LBSC faculty members Drs. Robert E. Tyndall of the music department, John H. Green, drama, James S. Crafts, art; Sue MacDonald, former Long Beach Symphony Orchestra manager and a member of the California Arts Commission; Jason Wong, director of the Long Beach Museum of Art; and Elise Emery, for five years editor of these newspapers' arts page.

Moderating and producing this written synopsis from recordings made that afternoon was Ralph Hinman Jr. of The I, P-T staff.

The Problem

"Art," the Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy once remarked, "is a human activity having for its purpose the transmission to others of the highest and best feelings to which men have risen."

How to accomplish this lofty goal, this "transmission to others," today more than ever before poses major questions for Long Beach's many devoted friends of the arts.

"Art for art's sake" as a working premise is obsolete, the panelists agreed. Art no longer is the exclusive domain of an elite in this era, marked as it is with a growing awareness of the arts by an ever-larger segment of the community.

Therefore, they say, transmitting, or making available, the arts to Long Beach's increasingly sophisticated art-music-theater-oriented community is the prime cultural problem facing the city today—and in the next five years.

"Long Beach, right now, is at the crossroads," they warn. "What we do—or don't do—in the immediate future will create the pattern for 1970."

It was different a century ago when Tolstoy was writing his monumental "War and Peace." Then artists, musicians and theatrical people were largely involved with art for its intrinsic values.

"Transmission to others" was the concern of government, of rich patrons emulating the earlier art fanciers of Renaissance Italy. The Western world's great cultural palaces—London's Covent Gardens theater, the Theatre Francaise in Paris, the St. Petersburg opera house, among others—were the financial creations of the state. Their productions were for the few, the aristocracy and a rising but small middle class.

Over the past two decades that pattern has been irrevocably changed through the democratization of the arts.

Thousands in this area, millions across the nation, know their Schonberg, Alban Berg, Picasso. They will pay to hear the composer's music, watch the playwright's drama, view the artist's abstractions.

Excellent turnouts this weekend and last—and undoubtedly next weekend—greeted Long Beach productions on a scale considered impossible before the last war.

(A recurring problem the panelists noted: conflicts in scheduling often cut audience sizes here. One proposed solution: a central booking agency operated by local group which would maintain long-range schedules.)

Those ever-larger Long Beach audiences, though are forced to hear their excellent symphony orchestra play in a too-small Concert Hall . . . view paintings in an equally-cramped Art Museum . . . watch plays under less than perfect technical conditions . . . or attend events at academic facilities never designed for larger crowds.

That high artistic standards generally prevail here was the group consensus even though, in the words of one, "Our facilities are shockingly inadequate."

Included among the "inadequacies" was the main public library. "Ours, built two generations ago, already was obsolete one generation ago . . ."

Municipal Auditorium and its Concert Hall was erected in the mid-1920s, is considered too small and with less than perfect acoustics. The new Arena must be bypassed as a home for most cultural events, again because of sound problems echoing across its main floor.

At least three privately-owned auditoriums serve the city's semi-professional Little Theater movement, but except for Community Theater's own recently built playhouse, all suffer from various technical defects, says the group.

Which leaves public school and Long Beach State College auditoriums to be part-time "homes" for the independent performing art groups.

Needed, then, the group insists, is a "civic cultural complex" comparable in its "civic cultural complex" comparable in its in downtown Los Angeles.

It's not just a question of duplicating facilities because of misplaced local pride, either. "We have in the long Beach area the people to produce fine work . . . for our own discriminating audience."

Parenthetically it should be noted that none of the six felt it was possible, or even desirable to attempt a "divorce" between artistic efforts here and in Los Angeles.

Local patriots should feel no twinges from their expressed belief that it is unrealistic to attempt to compartmentalize "Long Beach culture" as opposed to "Los Angeles culture."

"Setting our sights for something better" than either now has is, they say, today's goal.

There was remarkable unanimity about Long Beach's need for a cultural center. There was even less conflict over which group should receive priority in any future building program.

Conceding that such a large and expensive project would, of necessity, be done in stages, the six seemed to agree that it is immaterial whether a concert hall, playhouse or art gallery comes first.

Location wasn't a stumbling block in anyone's thinking either—so long as the center could be located centrally enough to serve all the citizens of Long Beach.

Financing always will be a problem in a day when taxpayers resent, with justice, the imposition of additional loads on already weary backs. The consensus again was that, as at Los Angeles' Music Center, the leadership—and the impetus—to create for the future will develop locally, privately.

September 15, 1960 was a big day in the life of the Hust family — Hubert, his wife Joan, and sons Rick, David and Ron. On that day, the cafeteria at 318 East Fourth Street, in Downtown Long Beach, became known as HUBERT'S CAFETERIA. September 7, 1965 was another milestone for the Husts. The deal was closed which changed Andy's Hotcake House at 643½ Pine Ave., also in Downtown Long Beach, into another HUBERT'S CAFETERIA.

the present . . .

Both establishments are doing nicely, thank you. Six days a week, the beautiful buttermilk hotcakes appear and disappear like magic; luscious roasts of choicest beef dwindle as patrons order the specialty of both houses — the famous Roast Beef Dinners, complete for only $1.25. These are but two of the many delicious dishes featured always at HUBERT'S.

Sundays, we close, so we and our employees may rest and attend the church of our choice.

Unless some genius comes along and shows us how to improve them, the quality of HUBERT'S food and service will remain at the same high level.

Plans are being considered with construction in the next half decade for the newest Hubert's Cafeteria. Also to be located in Downtown Long Beach in a new multi-storied building. This cafeteria will feature the latest innovations in cafeteria dining but with the famous quality and home style preparation that you, our customers and friends, have found to your liking and to which we owe our success.

We hope you can come often, but if you can make it only once, make it on the day when we give our entire day's receipts to the United Way.

MOVIEMAKING--

No Longer a Mogul's World

By LES RODNEY

Moviegoers can look forward to improved fare in the next five years and beyond if Stanley Kramer is right.

While the "sausage factories" grind out their endless chain of situation comedies and soap operas for television, film makers will produce fewer, but truer and more exciting movies. And an underrated generation of Americans will appreciate the compliment and be drawn to the cinema houses in large numbers.

Anyhow, that's the way the industry's trailblazing producer - director hopefully sees the years ahead for Hollywood.

Certainly it's the way he intends to go. Kramer, a young-looking 51 wearing a windbreaker in his office at Columbia Studios, took pains to disclaim any role as an authoritative spokesman, or any kind of spokesman. He's right enough. There can be no single spokesman for all Hollywood. On the other hand he himself must certainly be one of the more important catalysts in the movement away from the old mogul system toward freeing creative people to come together and turn out the best that's in their pooled talents.

This, after all, is the man responsible for such frontal assaults on business-as-usual as "The Defiant One," "On the Beach" and "Judgment at Nuremberg," pictures like "Home of the Brave," "Not as a Stranger," "Caine Mutiny," "Champion," "High Noon," "Inherit the Wind," and, most recently, that oddly contrasting pair—"Ship of Fools" and "Mad, Mad World."

RIGHT NOW KRAMER is hard at work on McKinlay Kantor's epic of Civil War prison-camp life, "Andersonville." You know he's doing something. Though genial and gracious as could be, he gives off the intent directness of one whose creative faculties are aglow.

"Before we start to talk about Hollywood, let's remember that Hollywood is part of the rest of the world. "If there's a world at peace, it affects us one way. If there's going to be a world of chaos, I'm not sure it matters so much what any of us do."

For better or worse, Kramer believes our films have a lot to do with how we look to the rest of the world. The responsibility this places on Hollywood in projecting the American image in these fateful times is clearly of importance to him.

But scarcely in the same way as to those who say that films critical of aspects of American life are not good for us to show abroad!

"That idea," he said with emphasis, "is old fashioned, ridiculous and downright un-American." Kramer speaks rapidly, often leaning toward the one he is addressing. He may be a casual person in other contexts, but not when he's on the subject central to his work and purpose.

"Are we so weak that we can't face our own shortcomings and let others see them? Of course not. People are aware we have deficiencies, and in some countries, they realize, they couldn't do what we are trying to do about them.

"We need more and more comment about our own fabric, socially, politically, in every way. We've got to reflect ourselves honestly."

There's been an unfortunate watering down of the American image, he believes, and film makers, among others, must examine themselves to see where they have fallen short. "How," he asked, "do we recapture the idealistic appeal we had, the moral, free image that was always our country's strong point?

STANLEY KRAMER . . . on movie making

"WE MUST SHOW the world what we are and what we are doing to be even more what we are. That's the American dream . . ."

Are these feelings shared by others in the industry?

He nodded. "I'd say by most of the creative people. That's why I'm optimistic. Creative people are now pretty much in control of what they are doing."

What accounted for this change from the old, often artistically frustrating days?

The answer was crisp. "The complete failure of vested interests and the moguls to be aware, up-to-date, to meet the needs of a totally new audience."

The change, he added, can be seen in the disintegration of the major studios. "There's no RKO any more, for instance. A big studio like 20th Century Fox used to have 20 staff producers. Now they deal with the producer-director they want for a given picture."

The potential audience not only is underestimated, but always has been, Kramer believes. He recalled the great glee with which some movie makers spoke of the need to turn out films for an audience on the mental level of a 12-year-old.

"In times of no challenge, with no competition from TV and other things, all pictures made money. Then things changed. Most did not make money. That's in the breadbasket. They had to think maybe creative people had answers."

Looking ahead, are there enough creative people in Hollywood?

"Sure," he replied with a smile of satisfaction. "Plenty. We're getting most of them from TV, that's where they found their opportunity to get started." He rattled off a string of names. "It's a big pool of young and exciting people who want to express themselves more daringly."

The very way this new breed looks at movie making is part of his hope for the years ahead. "Movies are limitless, seen as an art form. Seen as an industry, they are limited."

Which doesn't mean that Stanley Kramer is some kind of impractical dreamer oblivious to the dollar and cents factor in movie making. He's betting on a quality product proving to be the best business over the long pull.

One reason he thinks he's right is the strong evidence that the young generation in a changing world doesn't take kindly to being regarded as idiotic, and is restless about standards imposed upon them by their elders which they see as artificial.

"EVERYWHERE IN the world—everywhere—the young people feel and even act the same way. You see it when you travel. How do you reach out to them successfully? Not by lightweight material."

Kramer sees a continuation of the building of handsome new movie theaters in the years ahead. "So many theaters are antiquated and broken down, this was almost inevitable. Any industry where that happens needs to refurbish, or it becomes a drag."

What if television programs dramatically improve, will that cut into the comeback success of the movies?

Kramer shook his head negatively. "I see the whole thing as one now. Say TV on a Tuesday night has something great. People will gravitate to it. But a good film stands on its own. It'll be showing in the neighborhood theater for more than that one night. If it has a like excitement and electricity about it, people are going to want to see it."

Outside of this occasional moment of greatness, TV, circa 1966, does not seem to rank high with Stanley Kramer. "They're back in technique 30 years, when a studio would be making 40 A pictures and 40 Bs." He smiled. "Take some of that hashish and stack it up against 'My Fair Lady.' Remember, too, pictures have a far greater potential audience than even the best thing on TV."

Asked which of his own pictures he considered his best, he begged off.

"I suppose it may sound falsely self-effacing and modest," he said, "but I'm never fully satisfied with any picture I do. I can't name one, and say this is it, this is the one I want my children to remember me by, this is my best, the one where I did all I wanted to do."

He shrugged. "That's what saves us all."

On a different level then, could he say which picture or pictures gave him the most satisfaction in the doing?

"That's different," he said. "There was one that doesn't get mentioned much—'The Men'—about paraplegic vets of Korea, it was Marlon Brando's first starring role. I come back to that one with satisfaction.

"Then there are pictures where there's the romance about doing them and the actors in them—like 'The Defiant Ones' and the emergence of Sidney Poitier . . . getting together with Spencer Tracy late in his career in 'Judgment at Nuremberg' . . . Oskar Werner being introduced in 'Ship of Food'." He reflected, and added "Doing 'On the Beach' at a time before there was general awareness of what nuclear war meant . . ."

How about the success of 'Mad, Mad World'? Did it show there's always a place for good comedy on the screen?

KRAMER SNORTED. "I don't think 'Mad, Mad World' shows anything. Oh, it does have an approach to basic human greed, but it's mainly a physical comedy, and we' haven't had too many of them. People tell other people 'It's wild.'"

On another competitive front for Hollywood, is an impression that foreign films have passed their early peak an accurate one?

"I don't think so," was the reply. "They may have reached their saturation point in technique, however, and will have to find their way back to simplicity. Simplicity is a hard thing to achieve. You know how women with money and good taste look for expensive simplicity. It's not easy.

"But there are some great movie makers in other countries, and certainly they've had their impact on American pictures. They've put a mirror to their own life to a far greater extent than we have to our life and times. They've commented on the state of their youth, changes in their countries, everything, and as such they took some of our audience."

But that is changing, he said confidently, and will change some more. Hollywood, and American creative talent working without fetters, should need no apology anywhere in the world.

"Our contribution must be better than it's been. And I think it will be." He leaned forward. "In the next decade, the film will come into its own as the most mature, penetrating and exciting medium in the world."

El Dorado to be Man-Made Wildwood

Long Beach, limited mainly to flatland by land-hungry subdivisions on its borders, is making its own wildwood park.

This, of course, is El Dorado Park, now undergoing transformation south of Spring Street between the San Gabriel River and the city's tree farm.

"It will take five years or more to dress up nature the way we have in mind," says Don Obert, city park director.

But the public will probably be admitted to parts of El Dorado Park East by late summer, Obert says.

Over the next five years, approximately $2.8 million is earmarked from a 1964-bond issue to make the park into a nature center. Also, last December the city received $213,033 from the state to help the development along. Another $300,000 in state aid is anticipated. Because of the grants, the whole park project is being accelerated, although it will continue to evolve beyond 1971.

Already the park site is taking on wild-looking contours through the Park Department's efforts to create a pleasantly rolling terrain of hills and valleys, streams, meadows, lakes, islands and even a natural - looking swamp area.

Plans call for bridges spanning the larger of two lakes to an island and, on the island, a nature headquarters with a small museum, exhibits and working room for a trained naturalist and assistants.

"Many birds and animals will adopt the area as a home without an invitation," Obert says. "Some will possibly be brought in. Of course the lakes, streams and swamp will have such natural life as fish and frogs."

MOVIEMAKING--

No Longer a Mogul's World

By LES RODNEY

Moviegoers can look forward to improved fare in the next five years and beyond if Stanley Kramer is right.

While the "sausage factories" grind out their endless chain of situation comedies and soap operas for television, film makers will produce fewer, but truer and more exciting movies. And an underrated generation of Americans will appreciate the compliment and be drawn to the cinema houses in large numbers.

Anyhow, that's the way the industry's trailblazing producer - director hopefully sees the years ahead for Hollywood.

Certainly it's the way he intends to go. Kramer, a young-looking 51 wearing a windbreaker in his office at Columbia Studios, took pains to disclaim any role as an authoritative spokesman, or any kind of spokesman. He's right enough. There can be no single spokesman for all Hollywood. On the other hand he himself must certainly be one of the more important catalysts in the movement away from the old mogul system toward freeing creative people to come together and turn out the best that's in their pooled talents.

This, after all, is the man responsible for such frontal assaults on business-as-usual as "The Defiant One," "On the Beach" and "Judgment at Nuremberg," pictures like "Home of the Brave," "Not as a Stranger," "Caine Mutiny," "Champion," "High Noon," "Inherit the Wind," and, most recently, that oddly contrasting pair—"Ship of Fools" and "Mad, Mad World."

RIGHT NOW KRAMER is hard at work on McKinlay Kantor's epic of Civil War prison-camp life, "Andersonville." You know he's doing something. Though genial and gracious as could be, he gives off the intent directness of one whose creative faculties are aglow.

"Before we start to talk about Hollywood, let's remember that Hollywood is part of the rest of the world. "If there's a world at peace, it affects us one way. If there's going to be a world of chaos, I'm not sure it matters so much what any of us do."

For better or worse, Kramer believes our films have a lot to do with how we look to the rest of the world. The responsibility this places on Hollywood in projecting the American image in these fateful times is clearly of importance to him.

But scarcely in the same way as to those who say that films critical of aspects of American life are not good for us to show abroad!

"That idea," he said with emphasis, "is old fashioned, ridiculous and downright un-American." Kramer speaks rapidly, often leaning toward the one he is addressing. He may be a casual person in other contexts, but not when he's on the subject central to his work and purpose.

"Are we so weak that we can't face our own shortcomings and let others see them? Of course not. People are aware we have deficiencies, and in some countries, they realize, they couldn't do what we are trying to do about them.

"We need more and more comment about our own fabric, socially, politically, in every way. We've got to reflect ourselves honestly."

There's been an unfortunate watering down of the American image, he believes, and film makers, among others, must examine themselves to see where they have fallen short. "How," he asked, "do we recapture the idealistic appeal we had, the moral, free image that was always our country's strong point?

STANLEY KRAMER . . . on movie making

"WE MUST SHOW the world what we are and what we are doing to be even more what we are. That's the American dream . . ."

Are these feelings shared by others in the industry?

He nodded. "I'd say by most of the creative people. That's why I'm optimistic. Creative people are now pretty much in control of what they are doing."

What accounted for this change from the old, often artistically frustrating days?

The answer was crisp. "The complete failure of vested interests and the moguls to be aware, up-to-date, to meet the needs of a totally new audience."

The change, he added, can be seen in the disintegration of the major studios. "There's no RKO any more, for instance. A big studio like 20th Century Fox used to have 20 staff producers. Now they deal with the producer-director they want for a given picture."

The potential audience not only is underestimated, but always has been, Kramer believes. He recalled the great glee with which some movie makers spoke of the need to turn out films for an audience on the mental level of a 12-year-old.

County Plans New Parks But Hurt by Funds Shortage

"If the public has no concern, no interest . . . the problems we pass on to our children will be insurmountable."

Norman S. Johnson

MAJOR DEVELOPMENT IS THE PROPOSED 219-ACRE VICTORIA PARK

By DON BRACKENBURY

Park and recreation facilities proposed for southern Los Angeles County in the next five years can be compared to a department store window just before Christmas.

Behind the glass are items wondrous to behold, and every one is available to the public—if the customers want to pay the price!

The "master plan" for recreation in the county, updated and approved by county supervisors last March, proposes a variety of major projects in the southern part of the county.

MAJOR DEVELOPMENTS projected by the county's Department of Parks and Recreation include:

—The 219-acre Victoria Park, already under way northeast of San Diego Freeway and Main Street in the Carson area, which eventually will include an 18-hole golf course, an Olympic-class swimming pool, picnic and play areas.

—Two marine parks on the bluffs of Palos Verdes peninsula, each about 40 acres, and providing surf fishing, tidal pool exploration, skin and scuba diving and beach combing.

—Major parks, including 18-hole golf courses and facilities for all types of participation sports, in West Long Beach, Downey and Dairy Valley.

Unfortunately, according to Norman S. Johnson, county director of parks and recreation, the only proposed development which appears to have any chance of being carried out is Victoria Park.

Because the state is making $1 million available from its bond issue, Victoria Park is expected to be completely developed by 1967, Johnson said. The county hopes to advertise for bids on the project this June.

Highlight of the Victoria Park development, he said, will be the Olympic-class swimming pool. However, the improvements also will include landscaping, picnic areas and installation of play equipment. Two baseball diamonds and a playground area already are in use.

Under separate contracts, financed by the Los Angeles County Employes Retirement Fund, the county is building a $1 million, 18-hole golf course and a $166,000 clubhouse.

The 1965 amendments to the master plan for recreation added about 100 regional park areas, Johnson said, but pointed out that "a plan is no better than the ability to implement it."

"Today, we have no pretense of a program of implementation," Johnson declared.

* * * *

THE PROBLEM, he explained, is simply a matter of money. The master plan envisions a development program carrying forward to 1985, and would cost an estimated $206 million.

"That's a monumental figure that would scare anyone," Johnson admitted. "It's a lot of money."

"But if the public would just give us $10 million a year, we could start the program—and we could reach our goal," he said.

Another major concern of the department is the county's rapidly growing population. Not only does the continuing swarm of new residents cause a steady increase in demands for park and recreation services, it also is eliminating the space needed for such facilities, Johnson pointed out.

Supervisor Burton W. Chace of Long Beach, chairman of the county board, heartily agreed with Johnson and said the rapid increase in population, and its resulting rise in home development, "creates a strong need for the preservation of park areas."

"Land values continue to soar, and it becomes daily more important to earmark 'green areas' for today's and tomorrow's recreation needs," Chace said.

Milton B. Arthur, former president of the Long Beach Recreation Commission and now chairman of the County Parks and Recreation Commission, emphasized that Southland residents should not get the idea that no park and recreation facilities exist.

Parks, golf courses, beaches and other recreational areas occupy about 12,500 acres of Los Angeles County, Arthur pointed out, and all are well operated and staffed.

The problem, the recreation officials agreed, is keeping the program moving to meet the growing need.

In 1957, Johnson said, the Department of Parks and Recreation was allocated $17 million in the county general fund budget for acquisition and development of facilities. During the current fiscal year, it has only $700,000 for such purpose.

* * * *

THE BUDGET SHOWS a figure of $10 million this year, Johnson said, but this really is "fictitious" because it is based on the county obtaining $6 million from the federal government and $3 million from the state—"none of which has materialized yet."

The county basically is responsible for parks which are of a regional nature—that is, that draw residents from a wide area of the county. However, it also must provide local parks for residents of unincorporated county territory.

When such unincorporated areas incorporate or annex to a city, the county turns the park over to the city to own and operate—subject only to a restriction that it be forever kept as a park.

Typical of such facilities is Lakewood's Pan-American Park.

In the southern portion of the county, the department now operates five regional parks. These are the 77-acre Alondra Park in Lawndale; the basically undeveloped, 128-acre Friendship Park atop Palos Verdes hills on the San Pedro border; the 97-acre La Mirada Park; 53-acre Palos Verdes Shoreline Park, also with limited development; and 31-acre Victoria Park, currently being developed.

Shining jewels of the county recreation program are its golf courses. Because the Employes Retirement Fund has been willing to loan money for purchase and development of golf courses, the county now has 13—Whittier Narrows has two; one an 18-hole and one a nine-hole.

In the southern area, the county has three courses in use and two more expected to be added this fall. The courses now nearing completion are Victoria in the Carson area and Los Amigos Golf Course adjacent to Rancho Los Amigos, Downey.

In operation are Lakewood Golf Course, La Mirada and Los Verdes. The county has leased Lakewood course for the past 14 years, but supervisors voted last year to acquire the property by condemnation so they can continue to use it for golf.

* * * *

LOS VERDES GOLF Course is the pride of the department. It sits at the southwesterly corner of Palos Verdes peninsula and, county officials contend, rivals Pebble Beach on Monterey Peninsula for scenic beauty. There has been speculation that the annual Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament eventually will be moved to Los Verdes.

But, in spite of the facilities that exist, the county is far below standard in the amount of space available for recreation, according to both Arthur and Johnson.

The National Recreation Association standard is that there should be 25 acres of parks for every 1,000 residents—15 acres for regional parks and 10 acres for local parks.

The standard used by Los Angeles County is a considerably more modest 10 acres per 1,000 population—six acres for regional and four acres for local parks, Johnson said.

Even by the Los Angeles County standard, park and recreation space now owned by the department totals only 12,500 acres when it should be about 66,500 acres, he said.

Supervisor Chace said the county board recognizes the need and, working with "our very able county Park and Recreation Commission," is attempting to anticipate future park requirements "through a well-balanced program of land acquisition before it is too late."

"Such an awareness will pay long-range dividends benefitting all citizens throughout Los Angeles County now and in the years ahead," Chace asserted.

Supervisors, however, face the problem of mounting county expenses in the face of growing taxpayer opposition.

When tax revenues are limited, supervisors find themselves turning to park and recreation budgets when they have to slash expenses. Projects such as new jails or juvenile facilities seem more critical.

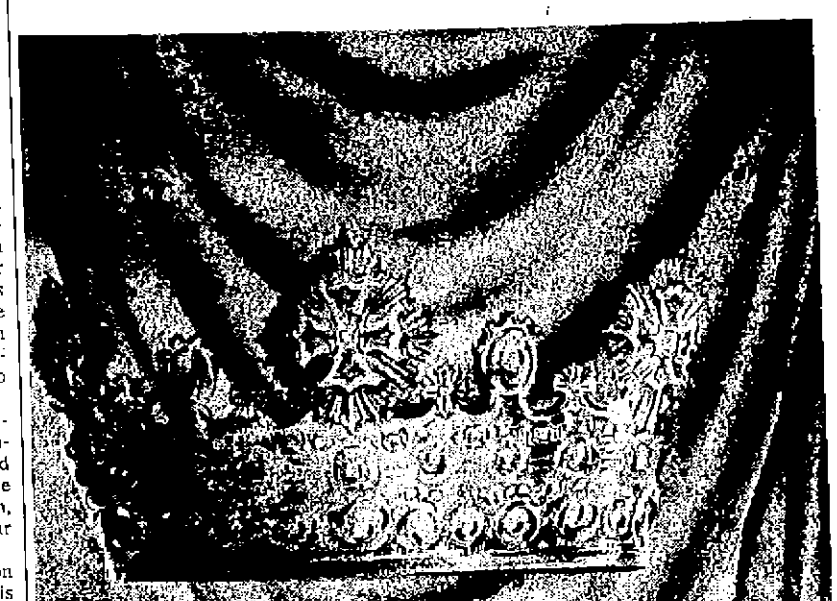
Recreation officials, however, argue that if a little more money were allocated to parks and recreation, it might not be necessary to spend so much in combating juvenile delinquency.

At county budget hearings last year, Arthur said the department "does not say that all our problems—delinquency, probation, courts, crime, etc.—are going away because of adequate recreation facilities."

But he said the county commission "strongly believes" that lack of adequate recreation facilities provides "the opportunity for idle hands and idle minds to find a wayward pattern of life."

Johnson said there must be "public awareness of what the consequences are going to be" if steps are not taken now. He pointed to the City of Philadelphia, which recently had to vote a $120 million bond issue to buy a tenement area, then tear down the structures to provide land for parks.

If the people wait too long, Johnson warned, "the land is gone—or the price is prohibitive."



Not only must land be obtained, but it must be developed, he emphasized.

"Otherwise, bit by bit, it is dissipated by this encroachment and that encroachment," Johnson said.

Unfortunately, according to Norman S. Johnson, county director of parks and recreation, the only proposed development which appears to have any chance of being carried out is Victoria Park.

Because the state is making $1 million available from its bond issue, Victoria Park is expected to be completely developed by 1967, Johnson said. The county hopes to advertise for bids on the project this June.

Highlight of the Victoria Park development, he said, will be the Olympic-class swimming pool. However, the improvements also will include landscaping, picnic areas and installation of play equipment. Two baseball diamonds and a playground area already are in use.

Under separate contracts, financed by the Los Angeles County Employes Retirement Fund, the county is building a $1 million, 18-hole golf course and a $166,000 clubhouse.

The 1965 amendments to the master plan for recreation added about 100 regional park areas, Johnson said, but pointed out that "a plan is no better than the ability to implement it."

"Today, we have no pretense of a program of implementation," Johnson declared.

* * * *

THE PROBLEM, he explained, is simply a matter of money. The master plan envisions a development program carrying forward to 1985, and would cost an estimated $206 million.

"That's a monumental figure that would scare anyone," Johnson admitted. "It's a lot of money."

"But if the public would just give us $10 million a year, we could start the program—and we could reach our goal," he said.

Another major concern of the department is the county's rapidly growing population. Not only does the continuing swarm of new residents cause a steady increase in demands for park and recreation services, it also is eliminating the space needed for such facilities, Johnson pointed out.

Supervisor Burton W. Chace of Long Beach, chairman of the county board, heartily agreed with Johnson and said the rapid increase in population, and its resulting rise in home development, "creates a strong need for the preservation of park areas."

"Land values continue to soar, and it becomes daily more important to earmark 'green areas' for today's and tomorrow's recreation needs," Chace said.

Milton B. Arthur, former president of the Long Beach Recreation Commission and now chairman of the County Parks and Recreation Commission, emphasized that Southland residents should not get the idea that no park and recreation facilities exist.

Parks, golf courses, beaches and other recreational areas occupy about 12,500 acres of Los Angeles County, Arthur pointed out, and all are well operated and staffed.

The problem, the recreation officials agreed, is keeping the program moving to meet the growing need.

In 1957, Johnson said, the Department of Parks and Recreation was allocated $17 million in the county general fund budget for acquisition and development of facilities. During the current fiscal year, it has only $700,000 for such purpose.

* * * *

THE BUDGET SHOWS a figure of $10 million this year, Johnson said, but this really is "fictitious" because it is based on the county obtaining $6 million from the federal government and $3 million from the state—"none of which has materialized yet."

The county basically is responsible for parks which are of a regional nature—that is, that draw residents from a wide area of the county. However, it also must provide local parks for residents of unincorporated county territory.

When such unincorporated areas incorporate or annex to a city, the county turns the park over to the city to own and operate—subject only to a restriction that it be forever kept as a park.

Typical of such facilities is Lakewood's Pan-American Park.

In the southern portion of the county, the department now operates five regional parks. These are the 77-acre Alondra Park in Lawndale; the basically undeveloped, 128-acre Friendship Park atop Palos Verdes hills on the San Pedro border; the 97-acre La Mirada Park; 53-acre Palos Verdes Shoreline Park, also with limited development; and 31-acre Victoria Park, currently being developed.

Shining jewels of the county recreation program are its golf courses. Because the Employes Retirement Fund has been willing to loan money for purchase and development of golf courses, the county now has 13—Whittier Narrows has two; one an 18-hole and one a nine-hole.

In the southern area, the county has three courses in use and two more expected to be added this fall. The courses now nearing completion are Victoria in the Carson area and Los Amigos Golf Course adjacent to Rancho Los Amigos, Downey.

In operation are Lakewood Golf Course, La Mirada and Los Verdes. The county has leased Lakewood course for the past 14 years, but supervisors voted last year to acquire the property by condemnation so they can continue to use it for golf.

* * * *

LOS VERDES GOLF Course is the pride of the department. It sits at the southwesterly corner of Palos Verdes peninsula and, county officials contend, rivals Pebble Beach on Monterey Peninsula for scenic beauty. There has been speculation that the annual Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament eventually will be moved to Los Verdes.

But, in spite of the facilities that exist, the county is far below standard in the amount of space available for recreation, according to both Arthur and Johnson.

The National Recreation Association standard is that there should be 25 acres of parks for every 1,000 residents—15 acres for regional parks and 10 acres for local parks.

The standard used by Los Angeles County is a considerably more modest 10 acres per 1,000 population — six acres for regional and four acres for local parks, Johnson said.

Even by the Los Angeles County standard, park and recreation space now owned by the department totals only 12,500 acres when it should be about 66,500 acres, he said.

Supervisor Chace said the county board recognizes the need and, working with "our very able county Park and Recreation Commission," is attempting to anticipate future park requirements "through a well-balanced program of land acquisition before it is too late."

"Such an awareness will pay long-range dividends benefitting all citizens throughout Los Angeles County now and in the years ahead," Chace asserted.

Supervisors, however, face the problem of mounting county expenses in the face of growing taxpayer opposition.

When tax revenues are limited, supervisors find themselves turning to park and recreation budgets when they have to slash expenses. Projects such as new jails or juvenile facilities seem more critical.

Recreation officials, however, argue that if a little more money were allocated to parks and recreation, it might not be necessary to spend so much in combating juvenile delinquency.

At county budget hearings last year, Arthur said the department "does not say that all our problems —delinquency, probation, courts, crime, etc. — are going away because of adequate recreation facilities."

But he said the county commission "strongly believes" that lack of adequate recreation facilities provides "the opportunity for idle hands and idle minds to find a wayward pattern of life."

Johnson said there must be "public awareness of what the consequences are going to be" if steps are not taken now. He pointed to the City of Philadelphia, which recently had to vote a $120 million bond issue to buy a tenement area, then tear down the structures to provide land for parks.

If the people wait too long, Johnson warned, "the land is gone—or the price is prohibitive."

Not only must land be obtained, but it must be developed, he emphasized.

"Otherwise, bit by bit, it is dissipated by this encroachment and that encroachment," Johnson said.

DIV. OF HIGHWAYS

TO AVOID GRINDING HALT

Freeways or Rapid Transit?

During the dog days last October even parts of Long Beach that the sea breeze usually sweeps clean were thick with auto exhaust.

Then the rains came.

The 35-minute Long Beach to downtown Los Angeles commute dragged on to an hour and a half.

"One day there'll be guards at each on ramp and no car will be allowed onto the freeway unless there are four people in it," mused one Long Beach-abiding secretary caught in the traffic jam.

The same day, elsewhere in the metropolis, a group of computer programers discussed their daily freeway battle over lunch.

"Maybe one day we'll all just stay home and push buttons," one suggested. And no one laughed.

Even where business leaders gathered to discuss the economy, the traffic problem brought forth ironical disgust.

"When the day comes that all the cars in Southern California come to a grinding halt in one massive traffic jam, we'll have no alternative but to pave over the top of the whole mess and start all over again," suggested J. K. Horton, president of Southern California Edison Co.

A PUSH-BUTTON society and enforced ride-sharing may be equally repugnant to freedom-loving Southern Californians.

But the alternative of a massive traffic jam, such as happened in New York during the subway and bus driver strike, could be in store for this area without rapid transit, suggests Harry A. Faull, president of the Southern California Rapid Transit District.

"In 15 or 20 years we'll have as many cars here as they have in New York. That's as good an argument as any I know for rapid transit," says Faull.

As now proposed, rapid transit for this metropolitan area would mean 70-mile-an-hour, twin-rail trains speeding from Long Beach to Van Nuys and from El Monte to Century City. During peak commuter hours more than 30,000 persons an hour could be carried each direction by trains traveling 90-seconds apart.

The cost: $2 billion.

This, of course, is the big stumbling block.

Out of the state legislature's February budget session, Faull hopes to get authorization for a $1 tax on vehicles registered in Los Angeles County to finish a preliminary engineering study.

By 1968 he hopes to get before voters a complete plan for financing to supplement passenger fares. Faull himself has proposed a combination of motor vehicle and sales taxes.

"If everything moves without a hitch we could probably get the Century City to El Monte line operating in five to six years, and the Van Nuys to Long Beach line two or three years after that," Faull hopes.

AMONG VOTERS who must foot the bill and among some special interest groups there continues, to be sure, considerable opposition. However, Faull said at mid-January he had "pretty good assurances" the Automobile Club of Southern California—whose opposition "has hurt up to now"—will not oppose the $1 vehicle tax.

Meantime, as rapid transit proponents still measure their political progress in inches, freeway mileage grows apace.

By the end of 1965 some 428 miles of freeway and expressway criss-crossed Los Angeles County and sliced into Orange County.

This is 150 miles more than existed five years ago, when the state had really just got a good start on what E. T. Telford, district engineer for the Division of Highways, now envisions as a $6-billion, 1,500-mile system interlacing three counties—Los Angeles, Orange and Ventura.

To complete the system will take another $4 billion and 20 years, Telford says.

An additional 150 miles over the next five years for Los Angeles and Orange counties "is about as close as we can estimate," Telford says.

On a percentage basis freeway mileage will probably increase faster than the number of cars in the two counties.

At present there are about 4,187,000 vehicles in the two counties. And, at the rate people have acquired new cars during the last five years, there'll be 16% more, or about 4,854,000, by 1970. Five million might be a better figure, because the more people crowd together—and the more money they make—the more cars they buy per family.

In any case, the extension of existing freeways doesn't necessarily mean they will better accommodate the additional cars wanting to go the same place at the same hour.

TELFORD HAS noted there are already "hot spots"—where usage exceeds capacity—on stretches of the Santa Ana and Long Beach freeways that serve the Long Beach area.

Telford's solution would be even more freeways.

"Double decking is attractive on the Santa Ana, but then how are you going to handle the traffic on the streets that lead to and from the freeway," he analyses. "For the most productive system we've simply got to spread the burden out and give the commuters a ride more nearly where they want to go."

While Los Angeles area decision makers continue to debate rapid transit, the San Francisco-Oakland area has already taken the plunge. Residents of the Bay Area are betting $1 billion—which, beyond passenger fares and toll fees, will come from property taxes—that high speed trains from Walnut Creek to San Francisco will solve their Bay Bridge traffic problems.

Los Angeles, by postponing its commitment on rapid transit, may slide right into the day that a revolutionary system sells itself.

In Detroit a company of transit visionaries and the City Council are asking the federal government to finance a computer based system that cuts costs because it travels suspended above present highway right-of-ways.

And aircraft men like Donald Douglas Sr. dream of one day serving a portion of the commuter traffic with planes that take off and land vertically but, once airborn, jet horizontally at high speeds.

"We can't afford to wait," he answers his own question.

"We can expect the money and the support to be forthcoming—if we don't wait for it to start coming before we act," adds Dr. Tyndall.

From the many ideas flying about the conference table comes this distillation, a tentative program for creating the urgently needed Center:

1. Form now, Mrs. MacDonald suggests, an active, working Ad Hoc committee (most group members expressed desire to participate) that will formulate "self-generating" plans for a Center, seek out and "sell" prospective donors.

Needed today, it was agreed, is a "spearhead," a "prime mover," to "take the bull by the horns and push the project." Such a person or persons could emerge from the committee or join it later.

2. Immediately bring together representatives of every local cultural group: theatrical, Long Beach Symphony, Civic Light Opera, persons involved with representational art, anyone interested in the future. Gain their best thinking on what is needed "not just now, but 5, 10, 15 years hence," and put it on paper, urges Mrs. Emery.

Then, "compromise, if need be," but formulate specific plans for a Center. Enlist architectural, engineering, legal, financial counsel—"but don't wait until the money is in pocket," Green declares.

3. Meanwhile, the steering committee begins a community public relations program to enlist broad-base support. Since municipal aid of one kind or another will be needed badly, the city government, and chamber of commerce, should early be approached, be kept apprised of all developments.

4. Early in the planning stage begin considering potential sites, says Dr. Crafts. Should the Center be located near the present Art Museum on Ocean Boulevard? Or, if possible, on unused LBSC campus property? Downtown? Eastside, westside, northside, seaside? "We aren't too concerned about the location so long as it will serve all Long Beach residents."

5. And always, from the six: "We must keep our eye on the target—our specific target.

"Most big things such as this aren't built by a single bequest or contributor," Green notes. "Rather, they come from many persons donating so that some day they, too, may be part of the 'founders' circle.'

"If we don't recognize that money is a problem—it won't be . . ."

On Local Talent

Any city worthy of its cultural salt must offer educational programs, workshop facilities, display space, to an ambitious coming generation of home-grown artists.

Long Beach Culture---

Because this demonstrably is true, says Dr. Green, "We can't afford to ask whether we should build a Cultural Complex." Instead, he believes, the question should be:

"Can we survive, culturally, without it?"

Further, those developing young artists require teachers, preceptors, models, the older, guiding hand around them as they mature. And again, in the opinion of the six, Long Beach is gifted in this realm.

Whether the city hosts distinctive "schools," or groups of like-minded creative people, is beside any worthwhile point, says the group.

Musically, notes Dr. Tyndall, "i would say the current state of talent is good-to-excellent." A "more continuous, active program would draw additional top-rate people here, however."

So far as the Long Beach Symphony is concerned, its former manager MacDonald believes progress there has been "almost incredible"—even in contrast with five years past. Her evaluation is based both on quality of music performed and standards by which it is played.

Museum director Wong concurs with Crafts that the two college are departments in Long Beach and the city museum are doing "good jobs—but we all should set our sights on something even higher."

Praise also was general and warm for the three long-established local Little Theater groups—"and don't forget the Playhouse some LBSC students are starting down on Belmont Shore," puts in Green.

Dr. Crafts seemingly sums the consensus when he says: "With the development of a planned development program, I think we can plan with confidence that local talent levels will continue to improve . . . and there is enough talent here to justify the development and maintenance of a Cultural Complex."

No Bag Popping

Complex . . . many-sided . . . worldly . . . three dictionary synonyms for sophistication.

Increasingly these words describe Long Beach's growing music-art-theater community, the panel observes, hopefully.

None of the six was willing to declare that local audiences have reached perfectability as discerning art patrons. Still, there were no reported instances here of popcorn bag popping—as in other cities duly noted — while a serious work was being presented.

One upcoming indicator of sophistication's development here will be, the group feels, how well attended is an LBSC-sponsored appearance next month of contemporary, musically-controversial composer Aaron Copland.

His presence here, incidentally, results from a personal acquaintance on the college faculty, points out Tyndall.

Always complicating our local scene is the close-in, looming presence of Los Angeles, replete as it is with a new Music Center, County Museum and other targets for artistically-inclined and footloose Southlanders.

While broadening the Basin's cultural smorgasbord, pulling outlying citizens away from their own communities, Los Angeles also—just because it's there—strengthens those same cities' artistic activities. Creative people spread out from megalopolis' center, often settling in the Long Beach area—where their talents may quickly be tapped.

"We should never attempt to divorce our activities, culturally speaking, from Los Angeles," the panel concludes.

Cooperation Is Here

"Broad spectrum cooperation" between Long Beach's creative groups will be a key factor in developing and operating a Cultural Center during the next five years, agree the panelists.

But they're not worried about the future.

Cooperation presently has "never been better," says art museum director Wong. The remaining five echoed his view.

"I've been meeting recently with groups around the city and everyone is friendly . . . agreeable . . . full of magnificent energy," Wong adds.

In the local world of theater, Dr. Green says LBSC's drama department "is not in competition with anyone . . . and is hoping to help provide additional opportunities for the community."

Community-wide interaction remains, as it long has been, a prime necessity in the music field. Both Mrs. MacDonald and Tyndall pointed out overlapping memberships in the Symphony Orchestra, Municipal Band, Civic Light Opera — and amens the music lovers who support two or more groups.

"There could be no other choice but to cooperate," both say.

Future relationships between the groups will play an even larger role when a Cultural Center comes into being as a facility to be shared by all.

Green envisions a centrally-operated booking agency — "with a full-time professional manager" — to book plays, concerts and other events using the auditorium. He sees no major conflicts arising and the community would gain immeasurably through the number of additional programs which could be attended here.

Among these, he says, would be professional, touring theater, "now rarely here because Long Beach is off its beaten path." With new facilities available this media would arrive regularly.

One less-visible asset would be in changing the present and past reputation as a "weekend town."

Concludes Green: "To operate successfully, we will have to be on a seven-day-a-week basis. We must work toward developing audiences who anticipate something new being presented regularly."

On Sculpture Symposium

One "cutural shot in the arm" still being felt in Long Beach is last summer's International Sculpture Symposium at LBSC.

"Drive out to the campus any Sunday afternoon," invites Crafts, "and spend a couple of hours watching cars driving through to see the works. They will slow down and look, often they'll get out for closer observation."

Wong says that during a recent Western Museum Directors Association convention in Los Angeles he "was receiving all the credit you should have at State . . . The association directors were excited about the project, wanted to come down and see for themselves."

A "wholesomeness" in public discussion of a modern art form is seen by Green, who says, "The mere fact there was continuing stimulation of interest and concern is much better than mere drowsy acceptance."

Credit for widely publicizing the symposium was paid Mrs. Emery, who wrote a series of articles for these newspapers discussing the works and the sculptors.

THE PLACE TO LIVE . . . THE PLACE TO INVEST

A half-century ago, Seal Beach was advertised as the "Coney Island of the Pacific," a famed watering place. Today, the City of Seal Beach is still water-oriented—strategically located right in the center of THREE MAJOR developments . . . Long Beach Marina . . . the multi-million dollar Huntington Harbour community . . . and still another multi-million dollar project, the planned Orange County Sunset Harbor. The world's foremost Senior Citizens' center, Leisure World, is also in Seal Beach.

The City of Seal Beach has become a city of fine homes . . . of fine apartments . . . of fine shops . . . and it is THE place to live. But the City of Seal Beach is more than a wonderful place to live . . . its strategic location also makes it THE place to invest. Whether you are planning for just the half-decade ahead, or for the next half-century, the City of Seal Beach offers unexcelled opportunity for investment.

Nothing in the foreseeable future would seem to prevent the growth of the City of Seal Beach into a high quality, high density, sophisticated community—a prestige address which will attract the kind of people who will contribute to this growth.

In spite of this rapid development, the City of Seal Beach still retains its friendly, "small town" character. Why don't you investigate—perhaps your future is here — as a place to live and to invest.

Long Beach Culture---

"We can't afford to wait," he answers his own question.

"We can expect the money and the support to be forthcoming—if we don't wait for it to start coming before we act," adds Dr. Tyndall.

From the many ideas flying about the conference table comes this distillation, a tentative program for creating the urgently needed Center:

1. Form now, Mrs. MacDonald suggests, an active, working Ad Hoc committee (most group members expressed desire to participate) that will formulate "self-generating" plans for a Center, seek out and "sell" prospective donors.

Needed today, it was agreed, is a "spearhead," a "prime mover," to "take the bull by the horns and push the project." Such a person or persons could emerge from the committee or join it later.

2. Immediately bring together representatives of every local cultural group: theatrical, Long Beach Symphony, Civic Light Opera, persons involved with representational art, anyone interested in the future. Gain their best thinking on what is needed "not just now, but 5, 10, 15 years hence," and put it on paper, urges Mrs. Emery.

Then, "compromise, if need be," but formulate specific plans for a Center. Enlist architectural, engineering, legal, financial counsel—"but don't wait until the money is in pocket," Green declares.

3. Meanwhile, the steering committee begins a community public relations program to enlist broad-base support. Since municipal aid of one kind or another will be needed badly, the city government, and chamber of commerce, should early be approached, be kept apprised of all developments.

4. Early in the planning stage begin considering potential sites, says Dr. Crafts. Should the Center be located near the present Art Museum on Ocean Boulevard? Or, if possible, on unused LBSC campus property? Downtown? Eastside, westside, northside, seaside? "We aren't too concerned about the location so long as it will serve all Long Beach residents."

5. And always, from the six: "We must keep our eye on the target—our specific target.

"Most big things such as this aren't built by a single bequest or contributor," Green notes. "Rather, they come from many persons donating so that some day they, too, may be part of the 'founders' circle.'

"If we don't recognize that money is a problem—it won't be . . ."

On Local Talent

Any city worthy of its cultural salt must offer educational programs, workshop facilities, display space, to an ambitious coming generation of home-grown artists.

Because this demonstrably is true, says Dr. Green, "We can't afford to ask whether we should build a Cultural Complex." Instead, he believes, the question should be:

"Can we survive, culturally, without it?"

Further, those developing young artists require teachers, preceptors, models, the older, guiding hand around them as they mature. And again, in the opinion of the six, Long Beach is gifted in this realm.

Whether the city hosts distinctive "schools," or groups of like-minded creative people, is beside any worthwhile point, says the group.

Musically, notes Dr. Tyndall, "I would say the current state of talent is good-to-excellent." A "more continuous, active program would draw additional top-rate people here, however."

So far as the Long Beach Symphony is concerned, its former manager MacDonald believes progress there has been "almost incredible"—even in contrast with five years past. Her evaluation is based both on quality of music performed and standards by which it is played.

Museum director Wong concurs with Crafts that the two college are departments in Long Beach and the city museum are doing "good jobs—but we all should set our sights on something even higher."

Praise also was general and warm for the three long-established local Little Theater groups—"and don't forget the Playhouse some LBSC students are starting down on Belmont Shore," puts in Green.

Dr. Crafts seemingly sums the concensus when he says: "With the development of a planned development program, I think we can plan with confidence that local talent levels will continue to improve . . . and there is enough talent here to justify the development and maintenance of a Cultural Complex."

Aquatic Park Envisioned East of Sunset Beach

By STEVE GIBSON

An aquatic playground with a sailing lagoon, beaches, camping and picnic areas, berths for 1,000 small craft and boat launching ramps.

That's what the Orange County Harbor District has planned for what is now a sprawling marsh and tidal slough on the southern edge of the Naval Weapons Station at Seal Beach.

The district plans to convert the area into a multi-million dollar Sunset Beach Harbor Aquatic Park covering more than 200 acres by 1975.

When completed, the marina would have facilities for launching more than 400 trailered boats at a time.

* * * *

ALREADY THE county has purchased 64 acres from the Navy for $553,800 and dredged out part of the marina, forming a peninsula—to serve as a nucleus for the development—with the dredged material.

Before the remainder of the park can be developed, however, two major obstacles must be overcome.

An additional 120 to 190 acres of land and water which is partly owned by the weapons station and partially by the state must be obtained. A complicated series of negotiations between the Navy, the state and the county are under way to work out a land swap.

And financing must be obtained. Harbor District officials estimate it will cost between $5 and $7 million to develop the aquatic park.

* * * *

SUPERVISOR DAVID BAKER, in whose district the proposed Sunset Beach Harbor Aquatic Park lies, says funds for the project will come from the county treasury and, hopefully, from state and federal grants.

"Under federal enabling acts," Baker explains, "there is funding available. And by getting the state to recognize that not all the people using this park will be from Orange County, we hope the state will participate in the financing, too."

Baker says it hasn't been decided yet exactly how the buildings, launching ramps and other facilities at the park will be financed—by private capital with the county getting a return on the leases, or by the county with a higher return from operations.

"It depends," he says, "on what restrictions are put on the land we get from the Navy and the state."

The park site lies within 15 minutes driving distance of about three million people—15 per cent of California's population.

* * * *

IT IS BORDERED by Huntington Harbour, a plush 860-acre residential development on the south, Sunset Beach on the west, the sprawling 4,900-acre weapons depot on the north, and the proposed Pacific Coast Freeway — about 10 years away from completion—on the east.

Preliminary plans call for several boat launching ramps capable of launching 465 boats at any one time, small craft berths located throughout the park, a large boating lagoon, a recreation center, beaches, picnic areas for 2,000 persons, 430 overnight camping areas, a dry boat storage area, a concession area for bait and tackle shops and restaurants, and parking space for 2,000 cars.

Baker says one of the park's big drawing points for outboard boaters is that launching ramps will be only several hundred yards —and about five minutes—from the open sea.

"That's one of the biggest drawbacks—for those who launch their boats—at Newport Harbor," he says. "You have to launch your boat in the Back Bay a couple of miles from the ocean. It takes too long to get out of the harbor.

"There is an increasing number of people with tailored boats in Orange County who are driving clear down to Mission Bay because there it's only three minutes from launch to open sea."

One of the initial phases of the aquatic park—widening and raising by 30 feet the Pacific Coast Highway bridge over the Sunset Harbor entrance — begins this spring. Financing of the new bridge is a joint venture with the county, the state and the Christiana Oil Corp., developers of Huntington Harbour, participating.

Also being studied are the possibilities of constructing one or more new entrance channels to Sunset Harbor —one at the north edge of Sunset Beach, just south of the present channel, the other at the south end, near Warner Avenue.

* * * *

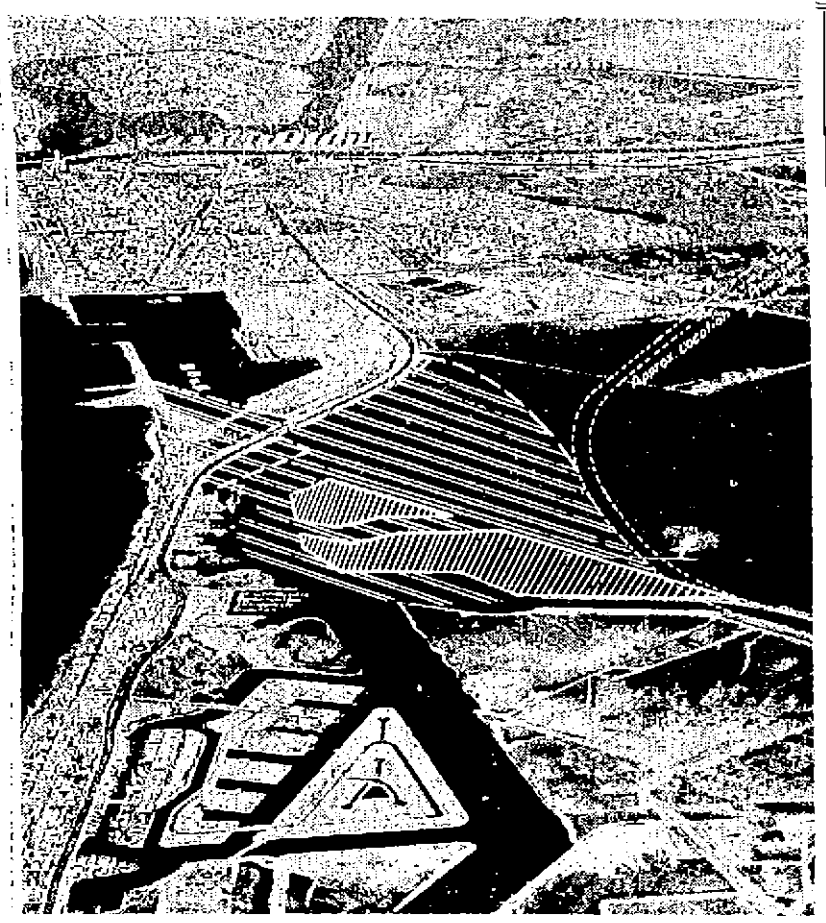
PRESENTLY ALL BOATS leaving and entering Sunset Harbor and Huntington Harbour must pass through Anaheim Bay, a Navy basin used for loading high explosives and ammunition on warships.

For security and safety reasons, the Navy would like to see a new channel to the harbor constructed.

Negotiations have been under way for two years now between the district, the state and the Navy over the marshlands at the southern boundary of the weapons depot.

The Navy has blocked off state-owned estuaries into the depot boundaries with cables and buoys so that small craft won't venture too close to high explosives.

Thus, by blocking off swamplands and water it doesn't own, the Navy could be on shaky legal ground.



However, the Navy owns land inside its marked boundaries which it has said it would be willing to trade off to acquire clear title to the state-owned property which intrudes into the depot.

A swap would pull back the Navy's southern boundary line but give the military clear title to all the land and water within its boundary—giving the weapons station a firm perimeter.

The land which would be relinquished by the Navy would be turned over by the state to the county, free, with the provision that the acreage be used only for marina purposes.

"Under federal enabling acts, there is funding available."

...What You Believe!

Dr. Collins background is as unusual and dynamic as are his plans for the future. He was a professional radio and television personality, well known for his musical and speaking ability. In fact he was led into the ministry by these very talents. His first assignment in the Baptist Church was with a salary of $18.00, quite a stepdown from the salary he had commanded before, but his ambitions were not of financial success, but of teaching the Gospel. He served as assistant to the president of the Baptist College in Springfield, Missouri, before coming to Calvary Baptist in Bellflower. Since 1963 when Dr. Collins undertook the pastorate of the Church its attendance has grown to over a thousand. A new educational building to take care of the tremendous growth has been completed under his leadership and with the cooperation of his members.

Six buses staffed by volunteers pick up at least 250 members, mostly children, every Sunday to attend services. Dr. Collins feels this encourages an introduction to spiritual education these young people would otherwise not receive.

Standing: Earl Jones, Don Nyenhuis, Bob Hall. Seated: Marvin Horrell, Vic Metcalf, Ray Armstrong.

Top, present church and educational unit. Present Church has seating capacity for 700. Three services are held each Sunday plus Sunday School Services.

At Calvary there is also a complete print shop where the weekly bulletin is printed and contains some of the finest equipment.

Three equipped Nurseries with paid professional workers take care of infants and small children while parents attend services.
Primary Church and Junior Church is conducted the same time as regular services. Sunday School enrollment is 1,000 with 55 teachers. There are four youth groups for the Junior High and up age level.

Calvary Baptist Church is very actively engaged in the Mission field with the missionary budget in 1964 at $29,790.53. The following areas are covered:

PROPOSED NEW SANCTUARY

To take care of the anticipated growth an additional five acres has been purchased which will be converted into a new sanctuary and a new parking area. Four homes adjoining the property will be taken down. It is interesting to note that the new Church will be Southern Colonial style with red brick exterior giving a warmness to the new auditorium. There will be 1,500 seating capacity.

New Auditorium: Will face Clark Ave. between Compton and Rosecrans. Elevated Choir Loft — 150-Voice Choir. 120-Ft. Steeple, Horseshoe Balcony. Architects: Jones & Poper of Long Beach. Will accommodate 2500 in educational system. Half million dollar sanctuary with 1500 seats. Exterior—red brick with white Corinthian columns. Stained glass windows. Baptistry with flowing water over rocks. Interior—Colonial with pews of mahogany and pastel walls and traditional ornamental chandeliers with rheostat lighting (controlled). Two story Educational Building will be built at the same time as the church to house nurseries, young people—two high school groups and one college group.

Sportfishing Changes Seen

Sportfishing boats with color TVs, radios in air-conditioned cabins, de luxe accommodations for sleeping and speed enough to reach Catalina Island in about one hour may be the rule of thumb within the next four or five years.

While none of these things are on the drawing board at this time, they are more than just wishful thinking on the part of managers who operate the sportfishing fleets out of Long Beach, San Pedro, Seal Beach and other points to the south.

There is even talk of basing boats at San Clemente Island and flying passengers from Long Beach to the island to save the fishermen four hours of time each way. This may be a dream, but just the same, the U.S. Navy might be persuaded to go along with such an idea. The Navy controls San Clemente Island vigorously and doesn't want anybody to step ashore there without special permits.

It takes the average boat about two hours, sometimes more, to reach Catalina now. There are many private craft that can cruise at high speed and reach the island in less than an hour, but under existing circumstances such speed for boats carrying 40 to 60 passengers is out of the question.

However, boats with catamaran and trimaran designs, plus the new hydrofoils, when properly developed, could reach the island in less than an hour. One of the problems with the present deep-sea fishing program is a 1 a.m. or 2 a.m. departure in order to reach the Cortes Bank, San Clemente Island and points farther away.

If you can sleep on a boat, well and good, but there are many of us—I happen to be one—who can't sleep on anything that is moving without a sleeping pill. Usually that leaves you so blah that when somebody yells STRIKE, you may or may not hear and any way you turn over and go back to sleep.

So, it seems that the sportfishing people must come up with boats that are faster, no matter where they go.

J. E. (MAC) McCLINTOCK, general manager of Pierpoint Landing, the largest in this area, says that he and his associates plan to build boats suited for specific purposes. He thinks that lighter hulls and more power will enable fishing boats to do a faster and more efficient job for the anglers.

For instance, Mac thinks that a half-day boat fishing Catalina Island is possible within the next five years. He also thinks that a half-day boat with twice the capacity of those running now is possible.

Eddie McEwen, Pacific Landing's general manager and one of the most noted skippers on the Pacific Coast, is facing a big problem in planning development of a faster fleet, which he, like Mac McClintock, thinks is the answer to many problems. However, a large land fill is creeping up on Pacific which means that the city will have to make new arrangements for the landing. It will mean the fourth move for that facility in the last few years.

This fill is intended to change the channel of the Los Angeles River and protect oil development projects along the west bank, but within a year or two, the fill will be in front of Pacific's docks.

One of the answers to the problem would be to move both Pierpoint and Pacific to Pier J, where they would be in business, side by side, each retaining its own identity. Perhaps this is wishful thinking, but it must be remembered that three landings live together at San Diego and have no difficulty. Pierpoint has drawn up such a plan, but the Harbor Department has never said "yes" or "no."

Eddie, however, is confident of the future of sport fishing in Long Beach. He virtually grew up on a sport fishing boat, from a raw deckhand to a masterful skipper and finally as general manager of Pacific.

Eddie feels that fishing on the ocean provides the greatest relaxation to be found anywhere. He says that nerves in our fast city living go one edge far too often and that a few hours spent on the ocean, fish or no fish, means more hours to the average American's life. (Amen, Eddie!)

POSSIBLY THE greatest changes in the next few years, possibly within the next 12 months, will occur at Belmont Pier—the new Belmont Pier, that is.

Construction has started and plans call for a pier longer than the existing Belmont Pier, now in rather serious condition, but still not dangerous.

The new pier, just east of the present structure, will be able to cater to more fishermen. The master-lease operators, Art and June Ascolesi, hope to provide far better service in many ways.

June, one of the most respected persons along the entire waterfront, has made known several of her plans for the new pier's operation. She will have a much larger tackle shop, more live-bait facilities, tram service from the land end of the pier every day, plenty of rental tackle, possibly another barge in addition to the very successful Islander which operated in 1965 and which will operate again this year.

June says that she will have two one-half-day boats operating when the public demand grows to that extent. Also, she plans to operate an all-day boat, and possibly a three-quarter-day craft. There will be small and large charter boats available, plus an excursion ride from Belmont Pier into Long Beach Marina and Alamitos Bay.

The new Belmont Pier plans call for an elaborate restaurant at the ocean end of the pier. It will be an upstairs restaurant for the elite trade. Below it will be a snack bar for the fishermen who want to grab a sandwich, coffee and return to their fishing outfits.

Lakewood

By ROBERT W. BAKER
Mayor of Lakewood

The 1966-model City of Lakewood has all the advanced styling and special features necessary to maintain its position as a pacesetter in the field of community progress; just ask any of its 83,400 satisfied owners — the analogy isn't too far fetched.

Lakewood was the nation's first completely-planned city following WW II. It opened the door on an entirely new concept of providing efficient and economic municipal service in metropolitan areas with its adoption of the Contract System of operation.

In 1954 the population numbered 67,000. As we stand on the threshhold of 1966, this figure has increased to 83,400. By the end of the year, we expect a population of at least 86,000, increasing by 1970 to approximately 91,000.

The city is continually planning in advance, trying to anticipate long-range needs and to be ready for them. The Del Amo Bridge across the San Gabriel River, soon to be completed, was initially planned by the City of Lakewood well over 10 years ago.

Looking ahead for a five-year period, I view the impending purchase of the Lakewood Country Club by the County of Los Angeles as the most significant civic project to be undertaken in Lakewood. While this will not be a city-owned facility, it will provide pleasure and enjoyment for residents throughout the entire area.

"Homebuilding in a year could move ahead again strongly."

Long Run: Soaring Flight

By LARRY LYNCH

For the next half decade the Long Beach area economy will be hitched to an airliner and a spaceship.

A soaring, uninterrupted flight is a possibility.

Indeed, for the last five years Southern California as a whole has shared in the nation's most prolonged economic climb.

The DC9 and spaceship Apollo could hold us on this steady course.

But a couple of storm clouds hang dark on the horizon. One—lagging residential construction—dampened 1965.

Another, the Viet Nam War—which to a degree is now solving past problems—poses the biggest question mark of the future. No one yet knows how tightly the economy will have to be reined for this conflict, nor how much leeway it will leave for luxuriating in dollars earned building airliners and spaceships.

To be sure, Southern California should gain a big boost in defense spending as a result of the war.

R. A. Lambeth, senior vice president and treasurer of North American Aviation, recently said his company has revised its forecast of Defense Department spending through 1968 upwards by about $.5 billion because of Viet Nam. Already, this figure looks conservative.

The pinch of inflation is on, and the Federal Reserve Board has turned to higher interest rates.

IRONICALLY, even before the Viet Nam conflict was such a factor, the success of Douglas Aircraft's DC9 had promised to revitalize the aerospace industry locally.

Elsewhere in this edition Jackson R. McGowen, Douglas vice president, predicts the company's Long Beach employment will climb by 2,000 before the end of the year, up 13,000 in five years. And Douglas spokesmen are optimistic that orders for DC9 assembly at Long Beach will hold employment near the anticipated 30,000 level for the remainder of the decade.

Other non-Viet work is also on line for local aerospace giants and the subcontractors that blanket Los Angeles and Orange counties.

North American's Downey plant is assembling the Apollo spaceship which will carry three men to the moon before 1970. Both North American and Douglas are working on rockets to propel Apollo.

And, at Huntington Beach, Douglas is giving birth to a major military space effort—the Manned Orbiting Laboratory. That Douglas facility will have completed the biggest share of a $1.5 billion contract when MOL gets into its lengthy flights in 1968.

CONRAD JAMISON, Security First National Bank's respected economist, thus chalks up aerospace as a plus factor for the local economy as certainly as he identifies it as one of four areas of economic stress for the half-decade ahead.

"Aerospace employment reached its peak in Southern California in December, 1962, then went into a decline of 2,000 jobs a month through the end of 1964," Jamison explains. "Until about May it moved sideways and then took off again. Since then the industry has been adding people at a rate of 3,000 a month and the total is still going up."

Douglas and the DC9 have been a "phenomenal part" of this turnaround, Jamison notes.

Even if the battle in Southeast Asia were to end, it would not likely take the oomph out of aerospace for half a decade. Replacing hardware chewed up in Viet Nam would keep the industry busy for a good while.

Jamison also points out that, while the health of aerospace is important to Southern California, the area's economy is more diversified than most recognize.

"The U.S. Chamber of Commerce index shows Pittsburgh with steel, Akron with rubber, New York with textiles and Cleveland with machinery are each less diversified than this area," he says.

Other major factors in the Southern California picture include, of course, agriculture, petroleum, tourist and entertainment industries. Then, too, there are the odd ones, producing everything from soap to greeting cards.

To know the resiliency of the southern half of the state to doldrums in aerospace, one need only point to the continued growth of this whole area's retail sales during the last three years despite declining space and defense employment and sluggish homebuilding.

In the months ahead, certainly, home construction will be more carefully watched than any other segment of the economy. It is a second area of stress noted by Jamison.

"RESIDENTIAL CONSTRUCTION has been the biggest negative factor in the economy, and it is certain to continue to be a problem for at least a year," the economist says.

Overbuilding from the spring of 1963 to the spring of 1965 compiled an excess inventory of 75,000 dwellings, enough to meet even this expanding area's needs for six months, Jamison analyzes. Of the present building pace of just under 100,000 units a year continues through 1966 it should chew up most of the excess, and then "the industry could well be in a position to move ahead again strongly," Jamison predicts.

You can get an idea of the kind of economic kick that's been missing recently if you realize that, even after including the increased in commercial and industrial construction, total construction in the south half of the state last year lagged $370 million behind 1964. In homebuilding alone, the cutback was a hefty $600 million, or about 25%.

Auto sales, more than any one consumer item, are capable of gearing the Southern California economy up or down.

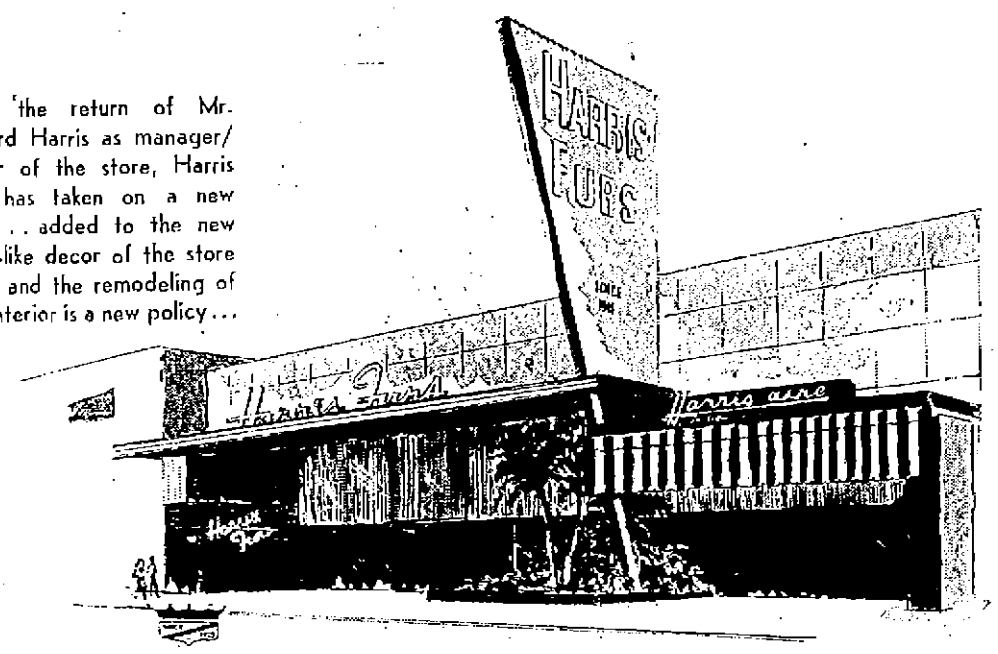
"Auto sales go all through the economy. Look at their influence on the sale of gas and repairs," says Jamison, explaining his counting this as a third major factor in the years ahead. "Last year was such a good year in autos, I wonder whether it can hold over. And yet, Southern California's sales were not as great as the rest of the county, and with the turn around in aerospace, we may have a good period ahead."

Unemployment—at least the kind resulting from the advance of technology and the absence of skills among the unemployed—is a fourth stress according to Jamison.

"We've got to try and solve the problem of people at the low end of the socio-economic scale, the Negro boy who dropped out of school in the 10th grade and can't read or write," he notes. "How you are going to make him employable is an economic problem as much as a social problem."

Already, industry's outlays to train unskilled people for jobs for which no one else is available is adding fuel to price inflation, Jamison says.

On the brighter side locally, however, are plus factors that can't help but fatten paychecks and, thus, boost consumption of everything from smart frocks to swimming pools for a good five years.



A half-billion dollars in public and private development —mostly heavy construction—is in prospect for the Long Beach shoreline. Oil production alone promises to yield major capital improvements for the Long Beach area. New industries are clambering to get into the last open space in the county—much of it on the city's perimeter. And, the area's twin ports are planning $110 million in improvements during the half decade.

When Imperial Press was housed in a converted warehouse in west Long Beach, we preferred to do business in our clients' offices. We were proud of our work, but just a little bit ashamed of our surroundings.

Now that we are settled in our new, larger building in Airport Industrial Park, we love company — the more the merrier! If you demand humility, maybe you shouldn't visit us. We can't resist a little braggery. Take our air conditioning and humidity control . . . now jobs turn out every day like they used to on rare 75 degree smog-free days.

Our complete letterpress and lithography equipment is the finest we could find. When we have visitors, we're liable to point that out.

And when it comes to color reproduction, we're slightly on the smug side. We think you'll understand why when we show you samples of brochures, annual reports and other jobs just off the presses.

When can we expect you? We believe there's a good possibility that you will decide that happiness is printing from Imperial Press.

For the next half decade the Long Beach area economy will be hitched to an airliner and a spaceship.

A soaring, uninterrupted flight is a possibility.

Indeed, for the last five years Southern California as a whole has shared in the nation's most prolonged economic climb.

The DC9 and spaceship Apollo could hold us on this steady course.

But a couple of storm clouds hang dark on the horizon. One—lagging residential construction—dampened 1965.

Another, the Viet Nam War—which to a degree is now solving past problems—poses the biggest question mark of the future. No one yet knows how tightly the economy will have to be reined for this conflict, nor how much leeway it will leave for luxuriating in dollars earned building airliners and spaceships.

To be sure, Southern California should gain a big boost in defense spending as a result of the war.

R. A. Lambeth, senior vice president and treasurer of North American Aviation, recently said his company has revised its forecast of Defense Department spending through 1968 upwards by about 8.5 billion because of Viet Nam. Already, this figure looks conservative.

The pinch of inflation is on, and the Federal Reserve Board has turned to higher interest rates.

IRONICALLY, even before the Viet Nam conflict was such a factor, the success of Douglas Aircraft's DC9 had promised to revitalize the aerospace industry locally.

Elsewhere in this edition Jackson R. McGowen, Douglas vice president, predicts the company's Long Beach employment will climb by 2,000 before the end of the year, up 13,000 in five years. And Douglas spokesmen are optimistic that orders for DC9 assembly at Long Beach will hold employment near the anticipated 30,000 level for the remainder of the decade.

Other non-Viet work is also on line for local aerospace giants and the subcontractors that blanket Los Angeles and Orange counties.

North American's Downey plant is assembling the Apollo spaceship which will carry three men to the moon before 1970. Both North American and Douglas are working on rockets to propel Apollo.

And, at Huntington Beach, Douglas is giving birth to a major military space effort—the Manned Orbiting Laboratory. That Douglas facility will have completed the biggest share of a $1.5 billion contract when MOL gets into its lengthy flights in 1968.

CONRAD JAMISON, Security First National Bank's respected economist, thus chalks up aerospace as a plus factor for the local economy as certainly as he identifies it as one of four areas of economic stress for the half-decade ahead.

"Aerospace employment reached its peak in Southern California in December, 1962, then went into a decline of 2,000 jobs a month through the end of 1964," Jamison explains. "Until about May it moved sideways and then took off again. Since then the industry has been adding people at a rate of 3,000 a month and the total is still going up."

Douglas and the DC9 have been a "phenomenal part" of this turnaround, Jamison notes.

Even if the battle in Southeast Asia were to end, it would not likely take the oomph out of aerospace for half a decade. Replacing hardware chewed up in Viet Nam would keep the industry busy for a good while.

Jamison also points out that, while the health of aerospace is important to Southern California, the area's economy is more diversified than most recognize.

"The U.S. Chamber of Commerce index shows Pittsburgh with steel, Akron with rubber, New York with textiles and Cleveland with machinery are each less diversified than this area," he says.

Other major factors in the Southern California picture include, of course, agriculture, petroleum, tourist and entertainment industries. Then, too, there are the odd ones, producing everything from soap to greeting cards.

To know the resiliency of the southern half of the state to doldrums in aerospace, one need only point to the continued growth of this whole area's retail sales during the last three years despite declining space and defense employment and sluggish homebuilding.

In the months ahead, certainly, home construction will be more carefully watched than any other segment of the economy. It is a second area of stress noted by Jamison.

"RESIDENTIAL CONSTRUCTION has been the biggest negative factor in the economy, and it is certain to continue to be a problem for at least a year," the economist says.

Overbuilding from the spring of 1963 to the spring of 1965 compiled an excess inventory of 75,000 dwellings, enough to meet even this expanding area's needs for six months, Jamison analyzes. Of the present building pace of just under 100,000 units a year continues through 1966 it should chew up most of the excess, and then "the industry could well be in a position to move ahead again strongly," Jamison predicts.

You can get an idea of the kind of economic kick that's been missing recently if you realize that, even after including the increased in commercial and industrial construction, total construction in the south half of the state last year lagged $370 million behind 1964. In homebuilding alone, the cutback was a hefty $600 million, or about 25%.

Auto sales, more than any one consumer item, are capable of gearing the Southern California economy up or down.

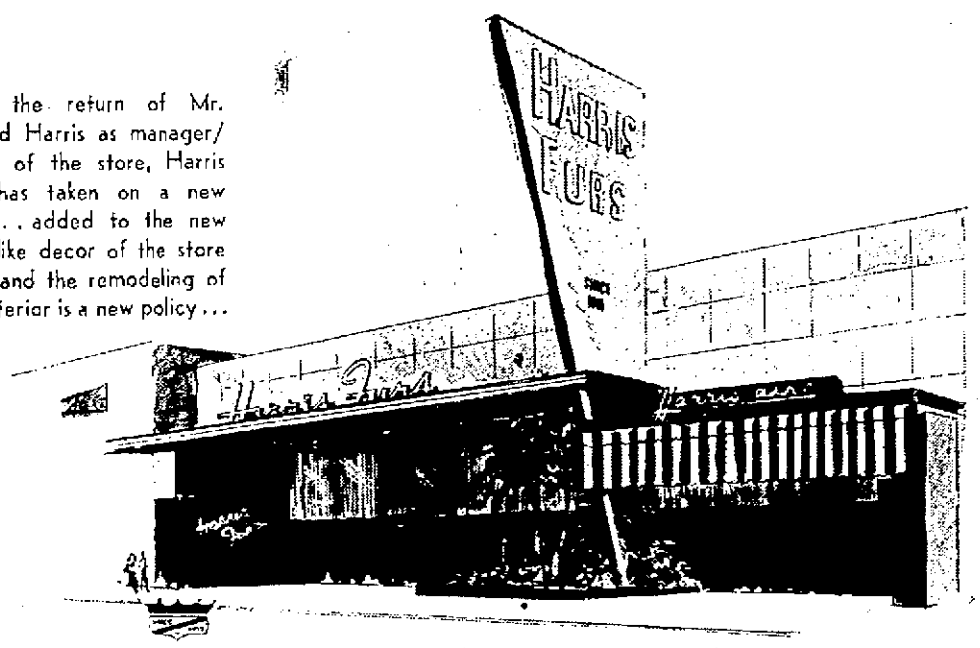
"Auto sales go all through the economy. Look at their influence on the sale of gas and repairs," says Jamison, explaining his counting this as a third major factor in the years ahead. "Last year was such a good year in autos, I wonder whether it can hold over. And yet, Southern California's sales were not as great as the rest of the county, and with the turn around in aerospace, we may have a good period ahead."

Unemployment—at least the kind resulting from the advance of technology and the absence of skills among the unemployed—is a fourth stress according to Jamison.

"We've got to try and solve the problem of people at the low end of the socio-economic scale, the Negro boy who dropped out of school in the 10th grade and can't read or write," he notes. "How you are going to make him employable is an economic problem as much as a social problem."

Already, industry's outlays to train unskilled people for jobs for which no one else is available is adding fuel to price inflation, Jamison says.

On the brighter side locally, however, are plus factors that can't help but fatten paychecks and, thus, boost consumption of everything from smart frocks to swimming pools for a good five years.



A half-billion dollars in public and private development —mostly heavy construction—is in prospect for the Long Beach shoreline. Oil production alone promises to yield major capital improvements for the Long Beach area. New industries are clambering to get into the last open space in the county—much of it on the city's perimeter. And, the area's twin ports are planning $110 million in improvements during the half decade.

Meteoroid Penetration? Once in a Hundred Years

$20-Billion Apollo Shot Goes in 1969

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

Sometime in 1969, three Americans will culminate the most intensive national effort ever launched in peacetime history—a mammoth $20 billion undertaking involving 300,000 men in 20,000 companies — with a 200-hour voyage to the moon and back.

Focal point of this massive project is here, where North American Aviation's Space and Information Systems Division at Downey is prime contractor for the Apollo spacecraft and service module.

NAA's Rocketdyne Division will furnish the mighty engines for stages of the Saturn 5 rocket that will propel the Apollo capsule away from the earth.

At NAA'S facility at the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station, the S-2 second stage of Saturn 5 is being built while nearby at Douglas' Space Systems Center in Huntington Beach, the S-4B third stage is under production.

* * * *

MATED WITH the Apollo spacecraft, Saturn 5 will stand 365 feet high, 50 feet taller than the Statue of Liberty. Its huge first stage will generate more than 7.5 million pounds of thrust, providing the mightiest boost ever delivered to any spacecraft.

To be sure that this incredibly complex endeavor is successful—so far as it can be ensured—safeguards have been built into the project.

After the crew has left earth, their mid-course corrections and insertion into lunar orbit will be made so as to assure that they will return to the earth if they fail to orbit the moon.

The astronauts still will not be committed to a landing when they achieve lunar orbit; they will have two propulsion system left capable of bringing them back.

Two astronauts will enter the bug-like lunar excursion module, leave the Apollo command and service modules and descend to the moon's surface.

Even then, however, they are not committed to land. Inches above the moon, they could change their minds, ignite their ascent stage and go back to the orbiting mother ship.

The spidery LEM (lunar excursion module) is stronger than it appears. It has been designed to withstand a touchdown on the moon at speeds up to 7 miles an hour vertically and 3.5 miles an hour horizontally. Further, it will remain stable after landing even on a surface tilted as much as 15 degrees from the verticle.

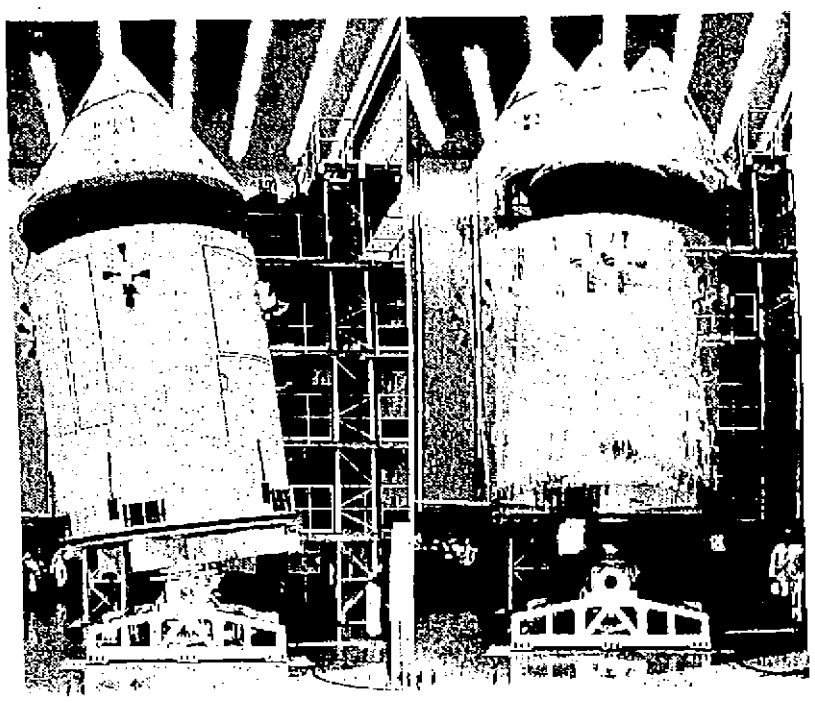
The moon's lesser gravity pull will also help. The "bug" will weigh only 2,000 pounds, compared to its 12,000 pounds of earth weight.

A clearance of two feet will be furnished by the LEM's four legs. Each LEM foot will measure about 1,000 square inches, providing enough surface to hold the pressure on landing to a maximum of 12 pounds per square inch.

* * * *

AMONG OTHER risks to the flight are meteoroids and solar flares.

Extensive research has shown that meteoroids present a negligible danger. Many will doubtless be encountered; both by the spacecraft and by the astronauts who will walk about on the moon.



Most of these, however, are so small that they have not the power to penetrate spacecraft or space suit. Larger meteoroids—a pound or more—are so rare that their danger may be discounted. Our scientists now calculate that a penetrating hit on a spacesuit could occur . . . but only about once every 100 years.

Radiation from the sun is a material risk for the astronauts, with the possibility that a flare may eject a cloud of protons which will envelop the spacecraft while it is outside the earth's protective atmosphere and magnetic field.

Therefore, the Apollo command module has been designed to protect the astronauts from radiation with its walls and equipment items lining the walls. Timing also would be during a period when intense solar activity is not expected.

ALL SYSTEMS GO as this Apollo Saturn I launch vehicle (photo at left) boosts experimental Apollo spacecraft test model and S-IV second stage into earth orbit from Cape Kennedy on May 28 last year. Test proved compatibility of spacecraft and launch vehicle.

Furnace side of clam-shaped tester heats to 600 degrees while dousing the other half with liquid nitrogen at temperatures of about 320 degrees below zero.

SPACECRAFT gets rock 'n' roll treatment atop an Apollo "polarity checker" in nation's largest cleanroom at North American's Space and Information Systems Division, Downey. Polarity checker includes rocking unit, on which Apollo spacecraft sits, and associated electronics equipment, to measure the response of gyroscopes. Rocker can lean six degrees to right or left, in addition to providing pitch, yaw, and roll.

TWIN HARBORS OF LOS ANGELES AND LONG BEACH (BACKGROUND) AS SEEN FROM PALOS VERDES

a maritime backwater

NOW A GATEWAY TO THE WORLD

By LOU JOBST

The side-by-side harbors of Long Beach and Los Angeles were a maritime backwater less than a half-century ago. In a few short decades, they've become the busiest commercial ports on the Pacific seaboard and, together, the fastest growing harbor in the nation.

The view ahead is for more of the same: accelerated physical growth, increased commerce and greater importance as a world trading center.

Created from the sea and a network of reed-clogged mudflats and tied to the phenomenal growth of the Southern California megalopolis, the twin ports have emerged as the most important gateway to the Orient in North America.

They handled an aggregate commerce of about 38 million tons of cargo last year, against 24 million tons for all San Francisco Bay ports combined. More than 5,000 merchant ships stopped at the Long Beach-Los Angeles docks to unload or load this tonnage.

* * * *

PLANS ARE, in the next 20 years, to double the 132 shipping berths and 75 miles of waterfront that make up the interlocking industrial-maritime complex.

Los Angeles expects to have 170 deepwater berths by 1985; Long Beach 107. Harbor officials say two to four new deepwater berths are needed in the port district every year just to stay apace of the increasing demands of the vast market area the twin ports serve.

Estimates are that the joint waterfront of 277 berths will handle more than 75 million tons of national and international trade by 1985.

This great expansion is no dream; it has already begun.

Last year saw work started on a $4.5 million U.S. Customhouse on Terminal Island, a project with far-reaching ramifications and one that the entire waterfront community jointly fought to bring here.

The customhouse, many observers believe, is more than a physical landmark.

It is proof that more and more interharbor identity of interest is ahead.

* * * *

"THE ERA of go-it-alone for the various communities that comprise the waterfront is about to pass the board," said one maritime expert.

Long an economic entity the LB-LA waterfront, which in addition to the complex of islands and channels includes San Pedro, Wilmington, Long Beach and the Dominguez reaches, is being pulled closer and closer together physically.

The Vincent Thomas Bridge connecting San Pedro with Terminal Island and the Harbor Freeway was an important step.

An equally significant element in this tightening will be the $18-million Gerald Desmond Bridge which is to rise above the Main Entrance Channel at Long Beach Harbor replacing the troublesome, traffic-jamming Pontoon bridge between the Long Beach harbor and Terminal Island.

Work was started on the Desmond Bridge in late 1965 and when it is opened in 1967 it will provide for quick, easy movement between Long Beach and San Pedro via Terminal Island.

With the completion of the Desmond Bridge, the federal customs facility and Long Beach shoreline redevelopment, the daily intercourse between the three waterfront districts will greatly increase.

Another characteristic of the years-ahead will be a continued expansion of the waterfront seaward.

Los Angeles is planning to add 650 acres of land fill to the south shore of Terminal Island and Long Beach has projects which call for building hundreds of acres of new land along its downtown shore and in the harbor district.

Eventually, says Lawrence Whiteneck, chief harbor engineer at Los Angeles, it will be possible—if needed — to build landfill around the 8-mile long Long Beach-Los Angeles breakwater and build a new barrier farther out to sea.

This would add thousands of acres of new land to the port district.

With the problem of subsidence of the ports solved and massive remedial projects under way or planned, industrial and maritime development of great areas of empty land on Terminal Island and in the west flats of the Long Beach-Wilmington area can be expected.

* * * *

LONG BEACH'S PORT with more than $150 million already invested in its development, is busy growing at both ends.

At the southern or seaward terminus of the 2,200 acre port, largest dry cargo harbor on the coast and the most modern port in the world, a new landfill is being extended toward the breakwater. Futuristic automated facilities are being built and rapidly put into operation.

On the north end, the so-called Inner Harbor, decrepit and antiquated facilities are coming down and badly subsided and unused acreage is being reclaimed.

Bernard J. Coughlin, Los Angeles Harbor's general manager, views the future of the Port simply and emphatically:

"We must build as fast and as much as we can, using all possible means of revenues available to the Harbor.

"We can't build fast enough to keep up with the trade and movement of cargo. In the last five years, $42,000,000 has been spent and in the next five years the figure will be about $50,000,000."

Charles L. Vickers, general manager of Long Beach, looks for continued expansion over the next five years:

"With the exception of the Port of New York, Long Beach has spent since the end of World War II more money on the development of new facilities than any other port in the United States and Canada. And in the coming years, Long Beach will spend at least $1 million a month (at least $60 million over five years)

To Moon and How to Get Back

Meteoroid Penetration? Once in a Hundred Years

$20-Billion Apollo Shot Goes in 1969

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

Sometime in 1969, three Americans will culminate the most intensive national effort ever launched in peacetime history—a mammoth $20 billion undertaking involving 300,000 men in 20,000 companies — with a 200-hour voyage to the moon and back.

Focal point of this massive project is here, where North American Aviation's Space and Information Systems Division at Downey is prime contractor for the Apollo spacecraft and service module.

NAA's Rocketdyne Division will furnish the mighty engines for stages of the Saturn 5 rocket that will propel the Apollo capsule away from the earth.

At NAA'S facility at the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station, the S-2 second stage of Saturn 5 is being built while nearby at Douglas' Space Systems Center in Huntington Beach, the S-4B third stage is under production.

* * * *

MATED WITH the Apollo spacecraft, Saturn 5 will stand 365 feet high, 50 feet taller than the Statue of Liberty. Its huge first stage will generate more than 7.5 million pounds of thrust, providing the mightiest boost ever delivered to any spacecraft.

To be sure that this incredibly complex endeavor is successful—so far as it can be ensured—safeguards have been built into the project.

After the crew has left earth, their mid-course corrections and insertion into lunar orbit will be made so as to assure that they will return to the earth if they fail to orbit the moon.

The astronauts still will not be committed to a landing when they achieve lunar orbit; they will have two propulsion system left capable of bringing them back.

Two astronauts will enter the bug-like lunar excursion module, leave the Apollo command and service modules and descend to the moon's surface.

Even then, however, they are not committed to land. Inches above the moon, they could change their minds, ignite their ascent stage and go back to the orbiting mother ship.

The spidery LEM (lunar excursion module) is stronger than it appears. It has been designed to withstand a touchdown on the moon at speeds up to 7 miles an hour vertically and 3.5 miles an hour horizontally. Further, it will remain stable after landing even on a surface tilted as much as 15 degrees from the verticle.

The moon's lesser gravity pull will also help. The "bug" will weigh only 2,000 pounds, compared to its 12,000 pounds of earth weight.

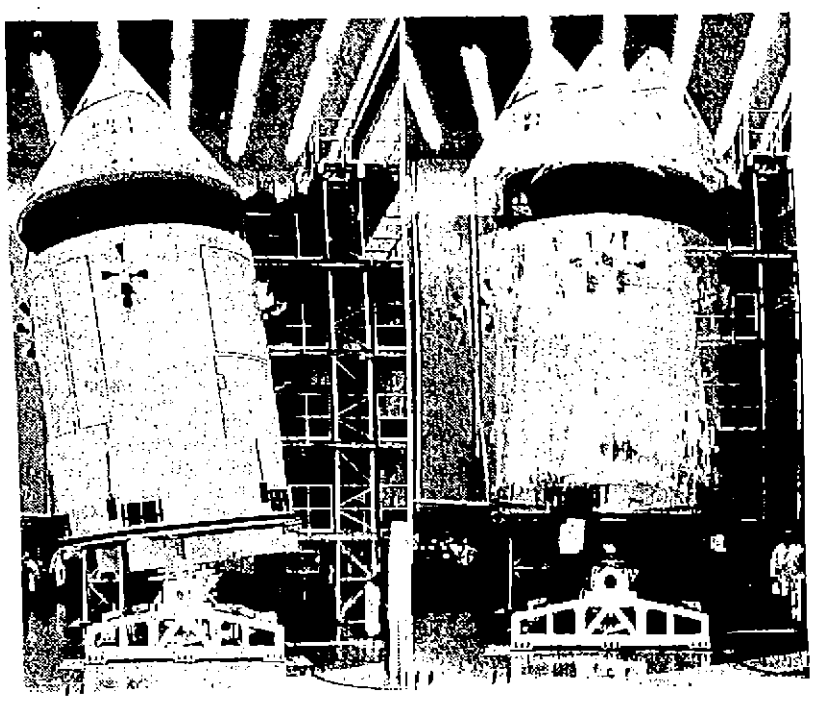
A clearance of two feet will be furnished by the LEM's four legs. Each LEM foot will measure about 1,000 square inches, providing enough surface to hold the pressure on landing to a maximum of 12 pounds per square inch.

* * * *

AMONG OTHER risks to the flight are meteoroids and solar flares.

Extensive research has shown that meteoroids present a negligible danger. Many will doubtless be encountered, both by the spacecraft and by the astronauts who will walk about on the moon.

Most of these, however, are so small that they have not the power to penetrate spacecraft or space suit. Larger meteoroids—a pound or more—are so rare that their danger may be discounted. Our scientists now calculate that a penetrating hit on a spacesuit could occur . . . but only about once every 100 years.



Radiation from the sun is a material risk for the astronauts, with the possibility that a flare may eject a cloud of protons which will envelop the spacecraft while it is outside the earth's protective atmosphere and magnetic field.

Therefore, the Apollo command module has been designed to protect the astronauts from radiation with its walls and equipment items lining the walls. Timing also would be during a period when intense solar activity is not expected.

ALL SYSTEMS GO as this Apollo Saturn I launch vehicle (photo at left) boosts experimental Apollo spacecraft test model and S-IV second stage into earth orbit from Cape Kennedy on May 28 last year. Test proved compatibility of spacecraft and launch vehicle.

THIS COMBINATION spacecraft oven-freezer is a device (photo alone) used to test Apollo command module's strength and resistance to heat and cold at North American's Space Division in Downey. Furnace side of clam-shaped tester heats to 600 degrees while dousing the other half with liquid nitrogen at temperatures of about 320 degrees below zero.

SPACECRAFT gets rock 'n' roll treatment atop an Apollo "polarity checker" in nation's largest cleanroom at North American's Space and Information Systems Division, Downey. Rocker tests the guidance and navigation unit to be aboard NASA's moon-bound Apollo vehicle. Polarity checker includes rocking unit, on which Apollo spacecraft sits, and associated electronics equipment, to measure the response of gyroscopes. Rocker can lean six degrees to right or left, in addition to providing pitch, yaw, and roll.

FLYING IS GOOD BUSINESS

L.B. Private Air Center

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

In an age when airports have come to rival seaports as attractions to industry, Long Beach stands in clover.

Area residents have become well informed on the eminence of the city's bustling port. Recognition of Long Beach Airport as the major installation that it is, has been slower in coming.

In terms of activity, Long Beach ranks second nationally only to O'Hare Field of Chicago, with 422,000 takeoffs and landings in 1964.

Or, to put it another way, an average of four airplanes land or take off at the airport here every five minutes, every hour of every day in the year.

Long Beach Airport has long been overshadowed by its gigantic neighbor, Los Angeles International Airport, one of the world's great passenger terminals.

Yet, in its own area of operations — mainly small plane use — Long Beach's stature is equally formidable.

* * * *

GENERAL AVIATION, these days, is one of the nation's most rapidly rising industries, with the sale of small aircraft rocketing to undreamed of heights.

One of the biggest reasons for the booming market in do-it-yourself flying is the realization by more and more businesses that airplanes can help their profits.

They've found that it makes sense to have a means of transportation that renders them independent of airline schedules and that can take them to smaller towns where airliners do not go.

Many companies have also found that—like it or not—they must have their own plane simply to hold their own with air-minded competitors.

This boom in small-plane travel for fun and profit has been largely responsible for Long Beach's surge in four short years from ninth to second in the Federal Aviation Agency's list of the nation's busiest fields.

More airplanes are based here—varying between 750 and 800—than at any airport in the world.

And, of primary importance to the city, more than a third of these, according to City Aeronautics Director Nick Dallas, are owned by area companies or by individuals who use them for business purposes.

* * * *

DIRECT INCOME from leases on the airport's sprawling 1,314 acres totals more than $360,000 a year. Various taxes — possessory interest, sales, gas — return the city about $3 million annually.

During the past fiscal year, the airport turned a $177,000 profit, largest in the field's history over to the city's treasury.

And, even with the handicap of minimal commercial travel schedules, the flow of airborne visitors to the airport is startling in its volume.

During the past year, 187,676 revenue passengers — those aboard scheduled, non-scheduled or contract flights—were logged here.

But an estimated 300,000 others came in aboard small aircraft flying from other cities in the largest movement of itinerant general aviation traffic of any airport in the country.

No one attraction accounts for this popularity, Dallas says.

Rather, he believes, it's a combination of factors: completeness of aircraft services available, nearness to downtown Los Angeles, Orange County, and other points via the San Diego Freeway, and proximity to tourist magnets such as Disneyland and others.

PROSPECTS FOR the future, also, appear bright.

Despite the current volume of air traffic, the airport — thanks to its dual runway system operated by one of the Southland's top Federal Aviation tower crews — can still handle more.

This capability will be further enhanced when the field's $1 million control tower, recently authorized, begins operation in 1968.

Western Air Lines passengers to San Francisco were up 300% in 1965 over the previous year, leading to thought by Western of adding more flights, perhaps to additional destinations.

Pacific Air Lines, now about holding its own, should do much better when new routes open soon to Bakersfield, Fresno and San Jose. And passenger traffic to Catalina from Long Beach should at least hold firm at about 100,000 yearly.

In the airport's sprawling industrial complex — the largest in the city — more than 60 acres remain available for future development, to add to the current 56 lessees.

"Frankly," Dallas admits, "we'll never be a big airline passenger terminal . . . nor do we want to be.

"Our objective is to serve the community's needs with an all-purpose facility, one that will prove a source of pride to local residents and an attraction to both individuals and businesses considering settling here."

Judging by the record, that objective is on the verge of achievement.

a maritime backwater

NOW A GATEWAY TO THE WORLD

By LOU JOBST

The side-by-side harbors of Long Beach and Los Angeles were a maritime backwater less than a half-century ago. In a few short decades, they've become the busiest commercial ports on the Pacific seaboard and, together, the fastest growing harbor in the nation.

The view ahead is for more of the same: accelerated physical growth, increased commerce and greater importance as a world trading center.

Created from the sea and a network of reed-clogged mudflats and tied to the phenomenal growth of the Southern California megalopolis, the twin ports have emerged as the most important gateway to the Orient in North America.

They handled an aggregate commerce of about 38 million tons of cargo last year, against 24 million tons for all San Francisco Bay ports combined. More than 5,000 merchant ships stopped at the Long Beach-Los Angeles docks to unload or load this tonnage.

* * * *

PLANS ARE, in the next 20 years, to double the 132 shipping berths and 75 miles of waterfront that make up the interlocking industrial-maritime complex.

Los Angeles expects to have 170 deepwater berths by 1985; Long Beach 107. Harbor officials say two to four new deepwater berths are needed in the port district every year just to stay apace of the increasing demands of the vast market area the twin ports serve.

Estimates are that the joint waterfront of 277 berths will handle more than 75 million tons of national and international trade by 1985.

This great expansion is no dream; it has already begun.

Last year saw work started on a $4.5 million U.S. Customhouse on Terminal Island, a project with far-reaching ramifications and one that the entire waterfront community jointly fought to bring here.

The customhouse, many observers believe, is more than a physical landmark.

It is proof that more and more interharbor identity of interest is ahead.

* * * *

"THE ERA of go-it-alone for the various communities that comprise the waterfront is about to pass the board," said one maritime expert.

Long an economic entity the LB-LA waterfront, which in addition to the complex of islands and channels includes San Pedro, Wilmington, Long Beach and the Dominguez reaches, is being pulled closer and closer together physically.

The Vincent Thomas Bridge connecting San Pedro with Terminal Island and the Harbor Freeway was an important step.

An equally significant element in this tightening will be the $18-million Gerald Desmond Bridge which is to rise above the Main Entrance Channel at Long Beach Harbor replacing the troublesome, traffic-jamming Pontoon bridge between the Long Beach harbor and Terminal Island.

Work was started on the Desmond Bridge in late 1965 and when it is opened in 1967 it will provide for quick, easy movement between Long Beach and San Pedro via Terminal Island.

With the completion of the Desmond Bridge, the federal customs facility and Long Beach shoreline redevelopment, the daily intercourse between the three waterfront districts will greatly increase.

Another characteristic of the years-ahead will be a continued expansion of the waterfront seaward.

Los Angeles is planning to add 650 acres of land fill to the south shore of Terminal Island and Long Beach has projects which call for building hundreds of acres of new land along its downtown shore and in the harbor district.

Eventually, says Lawrence Whiteneck, chief harbor engineer at Los Angeles, it will be possible—if needed — to build landfill around the 8-mile long Long Beach-Los Angeles breakwater and build a new barrier farther out to sea.

This would add thousands of acres of new land to the port district.

With the problem of subsidence of the ports solved and massive remedial projects under way or planned, industrial and maritime development of great areas of empty land on Terminal Island and in the west flats of the Long Beach-Wilmington area can be expected.

* * * *

LONG BEACH'S PORT with more than $150 million already invested in its development, is busy growing at both ends.

Orbiting Lab On Line; Flys in '68

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

For Douglas Aircraft Company's Space Systems Center at Huntington Beach, a deliberate gamble has paid off.

In anticipation of a successful bid for the lucrative Manned Orbiting Laboratory (MOL) contract, Douglas went ahead with preparations for filling the contract just as if it were assured.

It was not. Competition was formidable, with General Electric, Boeing and Lockheed all scrapping for the program.

But Douglas deliberately decided to push its master building program ahead more than a year in order to have the facilities ready and waiting if the contract should come through.

Work was begun in December, 1964, on structures not scheduled until 1966. Two of these additional engineering-administration buildings—each containing 180,000 square feet—have been already completed and a third is due for completion in June.

HOPES WERE JUSTIFIED when the presidential announcement came last Aug. 25 that Douglas had been selected to design and build MOL, with General Electric getting the job of planning and developing experiments to be performed aboard the spacecraft.

As a result of its bold decision, Douglas should have no difficulty hewing to the Air Force-dictated pace for MOL: unmanned flights beginning late this year, first unmanned launch of a fully equipped laboratory by 1968, with the first of five flights with two-man crews following later in the same year.

Cost of developing MOL is estimated at slightly more than $1.5 billion, of which Douglas will receive the major share.

Added to the half-billion-dollar backlog Douglas still has on its production of Saturn moon rocket stages, the Space Systems Center's fiscal picture is bright.

Employment is nudging near 6,000 and is expected to increase steadily towards the 1970 goal of 10,000.

A MOL ATOP TITAN 3C LAUNCH VEHICLE
Modified Gemini as Manned Orbiting Lab

Other new construction under way include an extensive addition to the existing manufacturing building, plus two new vertical assembly towers for Saturn and a 90,000-square-foot general services building which is being moved a section at a time from Santa Monica.

Plans are also being implemented to triple the size of one laboratory building and to construct an additional separate laboratory. To provide for future growth, 68 more acres of land to the east has been acquired.

Specific predictions regarding the future are avoided by Charles R. Able, group vice president, Missile and Space Systems Division, which recently moved its headquarters from Santa Monica to the Huntington Beach facility.

"THIS IS A RISKY business," Able said. "Things are going well now, of course. But how they will be in another five years is something no one can foretell."

However, it's no secret that Douglas, and Able, regard the MOL contract as just a foot in the door to a multitude of related projects which may ultimately make the current contract appear as a small drop in a very large bucket.

Military follow-on work could include larger, more complex space laboratories than the minimal-sized MOL. Douglas feels these are pretty sure to come as man's military role in space is established.

This, of course, is the purpose of MOL; to determine man's efficiency in space for 30-day periods. The military application of knowledge gained might come through orbital command posts or reconnaissance spaceships.

The latter role would require maneuverability not built into the first MOLs; Douglas sees this as a possibility for future contracts.

The Huntington Beach plant also has been working on study contracts on a larger space station for the past few years for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

This concept currently envisions orbiting a crew of six to nine scientists, who would be relieved by others through rendezvous and docking through the two to five-year life of the station. The Air Force's smaller MOL will carry only two men and there are no present provisions for re-using the same station with another crew.

Other possible ramifications which might keep Douglas in the space station business in future years include manned orbiting weather satellites, geologic study stations and others used for topographic mapping, oceanography and various other research purposes.

One plum especially eyed by Able would be a contract to design a reentry vehicle to provide shuttle transportation for space station crews and supplies.

Such a vehicle would be able to endure the searing heat of reentry, then descend like an airplane to a preselected landing area.

Navy's Plans

Nuclear Ships Due

By BUCK LANIER
Naval Affairs Editor

Long Beach will become the Navy's major port for nuclear powered surface ships within the next few months.

Three of the Navy's four atomic powered surface ships have been assigned here.

Two are due to tie up at their new home port within six weeks. The sleek missile cruiser USS Long Beach is expected around the middle of March and the missile frigate USS Bainbridge gets here in May or June.

Another nuclear missile frigate, the USS Truxton, is due here by the end of the year.

* * * *

THIS "NEW" NAVY in Long Beach reiterates the value of Long Beach as a home port with direct access to the sea.

The vast reaches of the Pacific are tailor-made for nuclear ships' unlimited cruising. Six years from now the Long Beach still will have plenty of "go" in its reactors.

FLYING IS GOOD BUSINESS

L.B. Private Air Center

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

In an age when airports have come to rival seaports as attractions to industry, Long Beach stands in clover.

Area residents have become well informed on the eminence of the city's bustling port. Recognition of Long Beach Airport as the major installation that it is, has been slower in coming.

In terms of activity, Long Beach ranks second nationally only to O'Hare Field of Chicago, with 422,000 takeoffs and landings in 1964.

Or, to put it another way, an average of four airplanes land or take off at the airport here every five minutes, every hour of every day in the year.

Long Beach Airport has long been overshadowed by its gigantic neighbor, Los Angeles International Airport, one of the world's great passenger terminals.

Yet, in its own area of operations — mainly small plane use — Long Beach's stature is equally formidable.

* * * *

GENERAL AVIATION, these days, is one of the nation's most rapidly rising industries, with the sale of small aircraft rocketing to undreamed of heights.

One of the biggest reasons for the booming market in do-it-yourself flying is the realization by more and more businesses that airplanes can help their profits.

They've found that it makes sense to have a means of transportation that renders them independent of airline schedules and that can take them to smaller towns where airliners do not go.

Many companies have also found that—like it or not—they must have their own plane simply to hold their own with air-minded competitors.

This boom in small-plane travel for fun and profit has been largely responsible for Long Beach's surge in four short years from ninth to second in the Federal Aviation Agency's list of the nation's busiest fields.

More airplanes are based here—varying between 750 and 800—than at any airport in the world.

And, of primary importance to the city, more than a third of these, according to City Aeronautics Director Nick Dallas, are owned by area companies or by individuals who use them for business purposes.

* * * *

DIRECT INCOME from leases on the airport's sprawling 1,314 acres totals more than $360,000 a year. Various taxes — possessory interest, sales, gas — return the city about $3 million annually.

During the past fiscal year, the airport turned a $177,000 profit, largest in the field's history over to the city's treasury.

And, even with the handicap of minimal commercial travel schedules, the flow of airborne visitors to the airport is startling in its volume.

During the past year, 187,676 revenue passengers — those aboard scheduled, non-scheduled or contract flights—were logged here.

But an estimated 300,000 others came in aboard small aircraft flying from other cities in the largest movement of itinerant general aviation traffic of any airport in the country.

No one attraction accounts for this popularity, Dallas says.

Rather, he believes, it's a combination of factors: completeness of aircraft services available, nearness to downtown Los Angeles, Orange County, and other points via the San Diego Freeway, and proximity to tourist magnets such as Disneyland and others.

PROSPECTS FOR the future, also, appear bright.

Despite the current volume of air traffic, the airport — thanks to its dual runway system operated by one of the Southland's top Federal Aviation tower crews — can still handle more.

This capability will be further enhanced when the field's $1 million control tower, recently authorized, begins operation in 1968.

Western Air Lines passengers to San Francisco were up 300% in 1965 over the previous year, leading to thought by Western of adding more flights, perhaps to additional destinations.

Pacific Air Lines, now about holding its own, should do much better when new routes open soon to Bakersfield, Fresno and San Jose. And passenger traffic to Catalina from Long Beach should at least hold firm at about 100,000 yearly.

In the airport's sprawling industrial complex — the largest in the city — more than 60 acres remain available for future development, to add to the current 56 lessees.

"Frankly," Dallas admits, "we'll never be a big airline passenger terminal . . . nor do we want to be.

"Our objective is to serve the community's needs with an all-purpose facility, one that will prove a source of pride to local residents and an attraction to both individuals and businesses considering settling here."

Judging by the record, that objective is on the verge of achievement.

ployed here, making it Long Beach's second largest single employer.

One shipyard project that has not received any fanfare will grow in importance.

It is called ARD 20.

The ARD is an advanced base repair dock and is listed as the Navy's first mother ship for a bathyscaph, or deep sea vehicle.

The project comes under the Navy's many-faceted Deep Sea Submergence Program and carries a multi-million dollar price tag.

SUPER AUTOMATION via computer places the Long Beach Naval Supply Center in a command position to maintain its standard of excellence for service to the fleet.

Families of Long Beach-based men serving afloat are begining to get used to sudden deployment and turnarounds soon after a duty tour is completed.

Three times this has been the case with the amphibious assault carrier USS Princeton. Ships of Amphibious Squadron 7 (The Lucky 7) returned home in December, and two were sent back into action this month.

Yet ranking Naval officers in Long Beach, as in Washington, worry that no solution has been found for the Navy's retention problem.

Pay is an issue, too. The Long Beach's chief working with her nuclear reactors makes a little over $600 a month. In private industry this skill can draw well into five figures yearly.

Retention experts are beginning t careful analysis of "the fourth man," or the one in four who decides to stay in.

His reasons and viewpoints might be turned to advantages in dealing with the "other three."

Douglas Long Beach Employes May Hold at About 30,000

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

A pair of jet wings are the main hopes of Douglas Aircraft Company and Long Beach to boost the economy of both during the coming years.

Right now, those hopes are high, with popularity of Douglas' tried and proven four-jet DC8 transport remaining steady and with orders surging for the new twin-jet DC9.

Main concern of Long Beach Douglas executives is a happy one: where to find enough workers to keep production flowing at the needed pace?

Present Douglas employment at Long Beach stands at better than 28,000, up to 11,000 more than it totaled four short years ago.

Recruiting and training programs are in high gear to help fill the need for still more employes.

By the end of this year, employment should push past the 30,000 mark, highest since World War II, according to Jackson R. McGowen, group vice president-aircraft, headquartered at the Long Beach plant.

Douglas leaders are optomistic that employment won't dip far below the 30,000 mark for the next five years.

Necessitating the inflow of workers are increases in production rates scheduled for both Douglas transports.

* * * *

DC8 PRODUCTION, now three monthly, will go to six a month by March, 1967. Current DC8 backlog of 79 sales will carry production through June, 1967; however, by that time the current option total of 33 will have been transferred into the sales column, carrying production through December, 1967. This makes no allowance for anticipated additional sales.

By November, 1966, DC9 production will have increased to 12 monthly from four a month now, with the backlog of 273 aircraft assuring production through March, 1968. By then, the current backlog of 136 options will have become orders, continuing production through February, 1969.

Future sales of the two transports should continue the pace, McGowen believes.

During the next 15 years, he predicts, world air carriers will need an additional 1400 DC8-size aircraft to transport the expanding air travel market.

But — of even greater significance to plane manufacturers — another 1800 DC8-size aircraft will be required for the booming air cargo trade, he believes.

Nearly all airlines now operating jet cargo aircraft, McGowen points out, have planned increases in their all-cargo fleets over the next few years.

He is convinced that this development marks the beginning of an air cargo era which should reach tremendous proportions in the next 10-20 years.

* * * *

THE RESULT, for Douglas and other manufacturers, will be a total potential market — passenger and cargo planes — of more than $20 billion.

During the same time period, the Douglas executive believes, there will be a demand for about 1,400 DC9-type transports, of which Douglas expects to sell 500 to 600.

Douglas, aslo, is considering construction of a giant subsonic transport which could carry up to 550 passengers or 250,000 pounds of cargo. However, a decision on production of this craft probably will not come before the end of the year.

Meanwhile, many airlines requiring greater capacity planes than standard DC8s are eyeing Douglas' three stretched versions of the four-jet craft.

Termed the "Super-Sixty" series, the new DC8s have been lengthened to increase their passenger capacity up to 251. Aerodynamic improvements give added efficiency and range also on the most advanced of the three planes in the series.

Production on Douglas' A4 and TA4 Skyhawk attack-bombers is assured through 1967. Additional Department of Defense orders are anticipated during this period as well as additional sales to foreign countries, now authorized by the Department of State.

Douglas' failure to win the coveted C5A Air Force transport contract was painful. However, McGowen has plans for the production space which would have been utilized for the big plane.

Other military competitions—principally for fighter type aircraft—are coming up and Douglas will bid for them. Also, Douglas — notorious in the industry for being close-mouthed about its plans — is capable of springing a surprise by coming up with a completely new project.

Orbiting Lab On Line; Flys in '68

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

For Douglas Aircraft Company's Space Systems Center at Huntington Beach, a deliberate gamble has paid off.

In anticipation of a successful bid for the lucrative Manned Orbiting Laboratory (MOL) contract, Douglas went ahead with preparations for filling the contract just as if it were assured.

It was not. Competition was formidable, with General Electric, Boeing and Lockheed all scrapping for the program.

But Douglas deliberately decided to push its master building program ahead more than a year in order to have the facilities ready and waiting if the contract should come through.

Work was begun in December, 1964, on structures not scheduled until 1966. Two of these additional engineering-administration buildings—each containing 180,000 square feet—have been already completed and a third is due for completion in June.

HOPES WERE JUSTIFIED when the presidential announcement came last Aug. 25 that Douglas had been selected to design and build MOL, with General Electric getting the job of planning and developing experiments to be performed aboard the spacecraft.

As a result of its bold decision, Douglas should have no difficulty hewing to the Air Force-dictated pace for MOL: unmanned flights beginning late this year, first unmanned launch of a fully equipped laboratory by 1968, with the first of five flights with two-man crews following later in the same year.

Cost of developing MOL is estimated at slightly more than $1.5 billion, of which Douglas will receive the major share.

Added to the half-billion-dollar backlog Douglas still has on its production of Saturn moon rocket stages, the Space Systems Center's fiscal picture is bright.

Employment is nudging near 6,000 and is expected to increase steadily towards the 1970 goal of 10,000.

A MOL ATOP TITAN 3C LAUNCH VEHICLE
Modified Gemini as Manned Orbiting Lab

Other new construction under way include an extensive addition to the existing manufacturing building, plus two new vertical assembly towers for Saturn and a 90,000-square-foot general services building which is being moved a section at a time from Santa Monica.

Plans are also being implemented to triple the size of one laboratory building and to construct an additional separate laboratory. To provide for future growth, 68 more acres of land to the east has been acquired.

Specific predictions regarding the future are avoided by Charles R. Able, group vice president, Missile and Space Systems Division, which recently moved its headquarters from Santa Monica to the Huntington Beach facility.

"THIS IS A RISKY business," Able said. "Things are going well now, of course. But how they will be in another five years is something no one can foretell."

However, it's no secret that Douglas and Able, regard the MOL contract as just a foot in the door to a multitude of related projects which may ultimately make the current contract appear as a small drop in a very large bucket.

Military follow-on work could include larger, more complex space laboratories than the minimal-sized MOL. Douglas feels these are pretty sure to come as man's military role in space is established.

This, of course, is the purpose of MOL; to determine man's efficiency in space for 30-day periods. The military application of knowledge gained might come through orbital command posts or reconnaissance spaceships.

The latter role would require maneuverability not built into the first MOLs; Douglas sees this as a possibility for future contracts.

The Huntington Beach plant also has been working on study contracts on a larger space station for the past few years for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

This concept currently envisions orbiting a crew of six to nine scientists, who would be relieved by others through rendezvous and docking through the two to five-year life of the station. The Air Force's smaller MOL will carry only two men and there are no present provisions for re-using the same station with another crew.

Other possible ramifications which might keep Douglas in the space station business in future years include manned orbiting weather satellites, geologic study stations and others used for topographic mapping, oceanography and various other research purposes.

One plum especially eyed by Able would be a contract to design a reentry vehicle to provide shuttel transportation for space station crews and supplies.

Such a vehicle would be able to endure the searing heat of reentry, then descend like an airplane to a preselected landing area.

Navy's Plans

Nuclear Ships Due

By BUCK LANIER
Naval Affairs Editor

Long Beach will become the Navy's major port for nuclear powered surface ships within the next few months.

Three of the Navy's four atomic powered surface ships have been assigned here.

Two are due to tie up at their new home port within six weeks. The sleek missile cruiser USS Long Beach is expected around the middle of March and the missile frigate USS Bainbridge gets here in May or June.

Another nuclear missile frigate, the USS Truxton, is due here by the end of the year.

* * * *

THIS "NEW" NAVY in Long Beach reiterates the value of Long Beach as a home port with direct access to the sea.

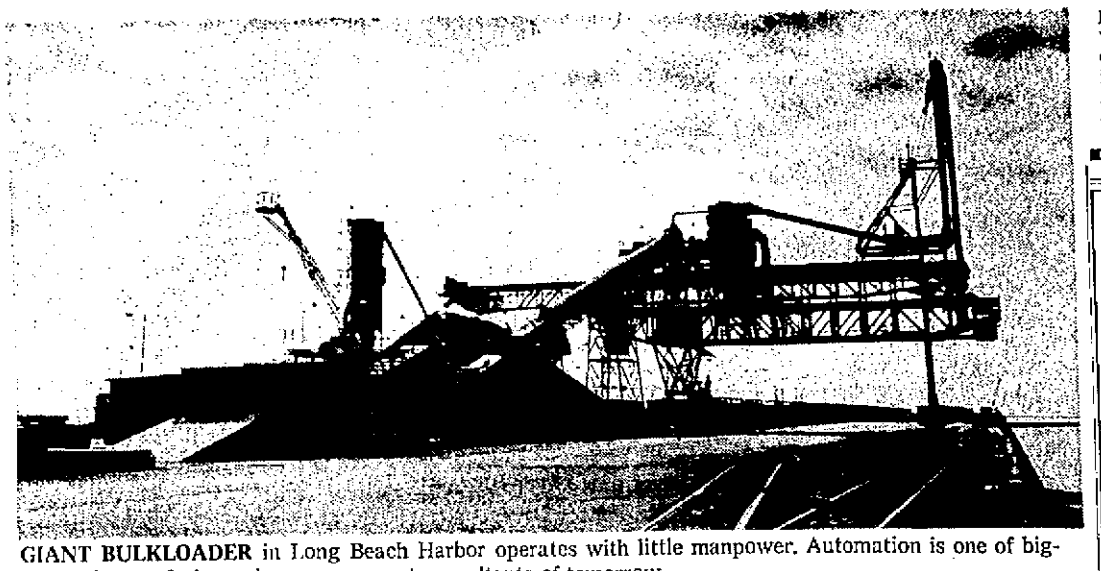
Government's Role Looms Big In Collective Bargaining



(When Douglas Aircraft Co. held its most recent contract negotiations with the United Auto Workers and the International Association of Machinists, the federal government, unbeknownst to the public, played a behind-the-scenes role in the drama.

Indeed, some labor negotiators are convinced that few wage settlements involving government aerospace contracts are made without final approval of the Defense Department. Whether this is the case, or whether the government has merely become an intensely interested third party in such negotiations, is a matter of some speculation. What seems to be without question, however, is the fact that collective bargaining as it was known 10 and 20 years ago is undergoing some subtle but important changes. The question of government intervention in labor disputes has now been raised with dramatic impact by the New York subway strike.

Paul Jacobs, a long-time student of the labor movement, believes collective bargaining has already outlived its usefulness. Is his prognosis premature? Or is collective bargaining already "old before its time?" In the following article, excerpted from a paper prepared for the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara, Jacobs argues his views on questions that must be partially resolved if industrial peace is to be maintained five years from now.—Editor)

Automation Also Hits Tradition

By PAUL JACOBS

GIANT BULKLOADER in Long Beach Harbor operates with little manpower. Automation is one of biggest factors facing union-management consultants of tomorrow.

On 16th Street across the park from the White House is an eight-story, squarish, marble building set back from the sidewalk. Inside, men and women go to their floors in automatic elevators and do their work in comfortable, well-lit offices. The men who dominate the life of the building, the high officials of the AFL-CIO, deal almost exclusively in their outside work with high officials of the American government, or business leaders.

* * * *

A man in a mended jacket, unpressed pants and cracked shoes trudges up the steps of a small, dingy building just off Mission Street on the edge of Skid Row in San Francisco. At the top of the stairs, he goes to a grilled window marked DUES and stands on line.

When he gets to the window, he gives the woman behind it tattered dollar bills stuck in a little black book and tells her he wants to pay his dues for one month.

Then he moves around to another window under a sign that says DISPATCHER. But the man who sits behind that opening shakes his head, for there are no jobs to which the members of the Miscellaneous Culinary Workers Local 110 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union can be dispatched. So the man shuffles over to sit down, wearily, in one of the chairs that are spread out along the dirty windows overlooking the street below.

"Miscellaneous Culinary Workers" is a euphemism for dishwashers, bus boys and porters.

Vast distances, social and geographic, separate the members of Miscellaneous Culinary Workers Local 110, San Francisco, from the men and women whose offices are in the marble AFL-CIO headquarters on 16th Street, the monumental Labor Department offices on Constitution Avenue, or the rectangular glass-box buildings favored by the corporations.

But despite the distances and differences, the high union, government and corporate officials have always been linked to the "catchers" of Local 110. The link has been a collective bargaining system in which unions and employers have dealt directly with each other, free from outside intervention.

In this system, the government has played a hands-off role, acting only as a referee or as a mediator when disputes have broken out in certain key industries.

Now, however, the collective bargaining system is collapsing, and with its collapse the unions that have been so integral a part of it face a dim and uncertain future.

Some symptoms of the breakdown of collective bargaining are obvious and attract immediate attention. Others remain obscure. But all point toward two fundamental alterations in industrial society today. First, the system of collective bargaining, which has operate successfully since the passage of the Wagner Act, 30 years ago, has proved less and less adequate for the solution of some basic problems now faced by unions and management, and second, an increasing number of workers remain outside the system, with very little possibility that they will ever come into it.

Automation and the particular unemployment it brings to a particular plant are problems obviously beyond the capabilities of union-management collective bargaining. No one can reasonably expect management to continue employing unneeded workers, but no one can reasonably expect unions to concede that they and their members have become superfluous.

No one can expect management to absorb all the costs of moving and training displaced workers, but no one can expect the workers to bear those costs themselves. And so the problem of automation and particular unemployment cannot be kept inside the confines of traditional collective bargaining; the government must share the responsibility for its solution, and perhaps assume the major share.

"The days are also past when the government's role in labor-management relations was merely as a referee."

* * * *

MANY PEOPLE, including some without any vested interest in collective bargaining, do not agree that traditional collective bargaining patterns have become archaic.

They look at the existence of thousands and thousands of peaceful agreements between local unions and management as proof that collective bargaining operates reasonably well at the plant level. But even those who still believe in the basic vitality of the present collective bargaining system agree some issues are beyond its capabilities.

George Meany, AFL-CIO president, who maintains his confidence in the traditional methods, concedes that some basic problems raised by technology and automation are not susceptible to solution.

Despite the present breakdown of collective bargaining, industrial justice still depends upon the existence of unions, at least in the immediate future. Meanwhile, new concepts of industrial justice are beginning to emerge from the wreckage of collective bargaining. It is impossible to imagine, for example, that America could ever return to the kind of labor-management relations that existed before the passage of the Wagner Act, when the employer was given all the authority for determining the relations between himself and his workers.

The days are also past when the government's role in labor-management relations was merely as a referee. Today, whether union leaders and management spokesmen like it or not, government is entering directly and increasingly into these relations. Both the courts and the legislature have begun to involve themselves deeply in areas that were once considered inviolate.

As the legal attitude is changing about the rights of union members vis-avis their leaders, so there is a growing change in the views of workers toward rights in their jobs. Although the right not to be fired arbitrarily, the right to bargain collectively for wages, the right to help determine working conditions, and the basic right to hold a job are derived initially from the terms of the union contract, workers eventually begin to look at these rights as having an existence apart.

The airline flight engineer who is replaced by a pilot, the railroad fireman who is taken out of the cab, or the steelworker who loses his job to another union member with more seniority because of an operational merger is fighting not only for a job, for the right to make a living, but for the particular job at which he has been employed.

No one has come with a solution that satisfies all the conflicting interests in such situations. Here, again, collective bargaining is of little use, for its limited and special nature, its dependence on "collective" action, prevents it from being a useful tool to assess individual rights. Government, through the law, will be required to assume the burden of developing a theory about job rights.

* * * *

THE MOST SERIOUS weakness in traditional collective bargaining however, is its incapacity to deal with the economic conditions that are making unemployment a permanent way of life for millions.

Now, more and more Americans are becoming discontented with the view of a future in which a high rate of unemployment is accepted, in which other countries equal and sometimes exceed our once untouchable rate of growth, and in which an accelerating technology makes each of us increasingly dependent on the other.

The concept that government is there not just to help when economic catastrophe strikes, but to avert the catastrophe before it begins, is widely accepted today. More, rather than less, government seems inevitable.

No precise predictions can be made about the long-term replacement for the obsolescent tool of traditional collective bargaining. One development probably will be the replacement of crisis negotiations with continuous bargaining under the watchful eyes of public representatives.

Gradually, also, unions may give up certain kinds of strike actions (in exchange for key concessions from management on the right to unilaterally) set the size of the work force and determine the distribution of profits.

Some national consensus about both jobs and profits will have to emerge, however, before unions or workers will ever abandon the right to certain strikes.

One shipyard project that has not received any fanfare will grow in importance.

It is called ARD 20.

The ARD is an advanced base repair dock and is listed as the Navy's first mother ship for a bathyscaph, or deep sea vehicle.

The project comes under the Navy's many-faceted Deep Sea Submergence Program and carries a multi-million dollar price tag.

SUPER AUTOMATION via computer places the Long Beach Naval Supply Center in a command position to maintain its standard of excellence for service to the fleet.

Families of Long Beach-based men serving afloat are begining to get used to sudden deployment and turnarounds soon after a duty tour is completed.

Three times this has been the case with the amphibious assault carrier USS Princeton. Ships of Amphibious Squadron 7 (The Lucky 7) returned home in December, and two were sent back into action this month.

Yet ranking Naval officers in Long Beach, as in Washington, worry that no solution has been found for the Navy's retention problem.

Pay is an issue, too. The Long Beach's chief working with her nuclear reactors makes a little over $600 a month. In private industry this skill can draw well into five figures yearly.

Retention experts are beginning t careful analysis of "the fourth man," or the one in four who decides to stay in.

His reasons and viewpoints might be turned to advantages in dealing with the "other three."

Douglas Long Beach Employes May Hold at About 30,000

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

A pair of jet wings are the main hopes of Douglas Aircraft Company and Long Beach to boost the economy of both during the coming years.

Right now, those hopes are high, with popularity of Douglas' tried and proven four-jet DC8 transport remaining steady and with orders surging for the new twin-jet DC9.

Main concern of Long Beach Douglas executives is a happy one: where to find enough workers to keep production flowing at the needed pace?

Present Douglas employment at Long Beach stands at better than 28,000, up to 11,000 more than it totaled four short years ago.

Recruiting and training programs are in high gear to help fill the need for still more employes.

By the end of this year, employment should push past the 30,000 mark, highest since World War II, according to Jackson R. McGowen, group vice president-aircraft, headquartered at the Long Beach plant.

Douglas leaders are optomistic that employment won't dip far below the 30,000 mark for the next five years.

Necessitating the inflow of workers are increases in production rates scheduled for both Douglas transports.

* * * *

DC8 PRODUCTION, now three monthly, will go to six a month by March, 1967. Current DC8 backlog of 79 sales will carry production through June, 1967; however, by that time the current option total of 33 will have been transferred into the sales column, carrying production through December, 1967. This makes no allowance for anticipated additional sales.

By November, 1966, DC9 production will have increased to 12 monthly from four a month now, with the backlog of 273 aircraft assuring production through March, 1968. By then, the current backlog of 136 options will have become orders, continuing production through February, 1969.

Future sales of the two transports should continue the pace, McGowen believes.

During the next 15 years, he predicts, world air carriers will need an additional 1400 DC8-size aircraft to transport the expanding air travel market.

But — of even greater significance to plane manufacturers — another 1800 DC8-size aircraft will be required for the booming air cargo trade, he believes.

Nearly all airlines now operating jet cargo aircraft, McGowen points out, have planned increases in their all-cargo fleets over the next few years.

He is convinced that this development marks the beginning of an air cargo era which should reach tremendous proportions in the next 10-20 years.

* * * *

THE RESULT, for Douglas and other manufacturers, will be a total potential market — passenger and cargo planes — of more than $20 billion.

During the same time period, the Douglas executive believes, there will be a demand for about 1,400 DC9-type transports, of which Douglas expects to sell 500 to 600.

Douglas, aslo, is considering construction of a giant subsonic transport which could carry up to 550 passengers or 250,000 pounds of cargo. However, a decision on production of this craft probably will not come before the end of the year.

Meanwhile, many airlines requiring greater capacity planes than standard DC8s are eyeing Douglas' three stretched versions of the four-jet craft.

Termed the "Super-Sixty" series, the new DC8s have been lengthened to increase their passenger capacity up to 251. Aerodynamic improvements give added efficiency and range also on the most advanced of the three planes in the series.

Production on Douglas' A4 and TA4 Skyhawk attack-bombers is assured through 1967. Additional Department of Defense orders are anticipated during this period as well as additional sales to foreign countries, now authorized by the Department of State.

Douglas' failure to win the coveted C5A Air Force transport contract was painful. However, McGowen has plans for the production space which would have been utilized for the big plane.

Other military competitions—principally for fighter type aircraft—are coming up and Douglas will bid for them. Also, Douglas — notorious in the industry for being close-mouthed about its plans — is capable of springing a surprise by coming up with a completely new project.

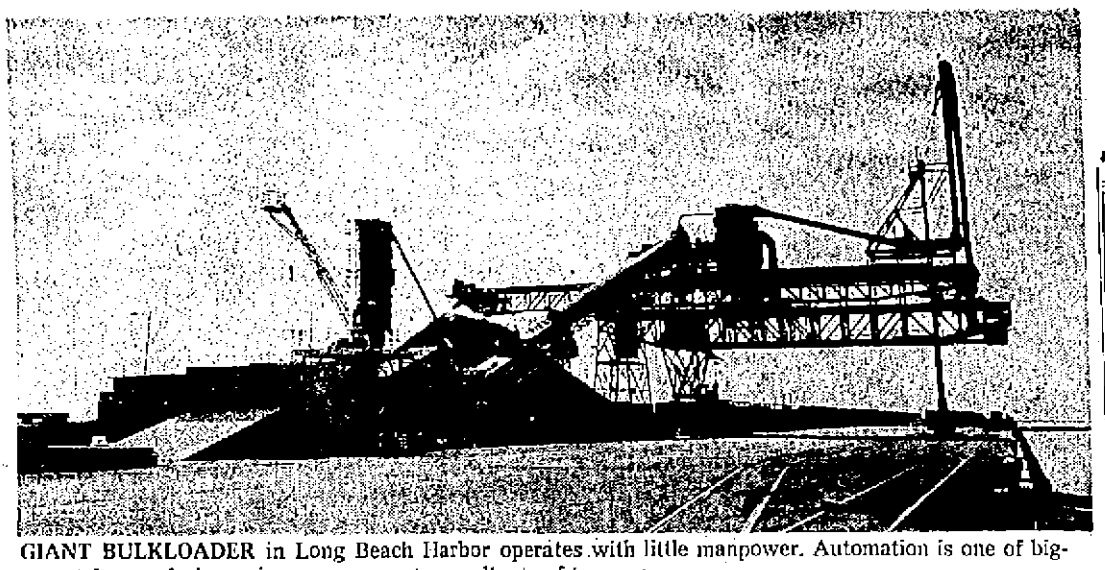
Government's Role Looms Big In Collective Bargaining



Automation Also Hits Tradition

By PAUL JACOBS

(When Douglas Aircraft Co. held its most recent contract negotiations with the United Auto Workers and the International Association of Machinists, the federal government, unbeknownst to the public, played a behind-the-scenes role in the drama.

Indeed, some labor negotiators are convinced that few wage settlements involving government aerospace contracts are made without final approval of the Defense Department. Whether this is the case, or whether the government has merely become an intensely interested third party in such negotiations, is a matter of some speculation. What seems to be without question, however, is the fact that collective bargaining as it was known 10 and 20 years ago is undergoing some subtle but important changes. The question of government intervention in labor disputes has now been raised with dramatic impact by the New York subway strike.

Paul Jacobs, a long-time student of the labor movement, believes collective bargaining has already outlived its usefulness. Is his prognosis premature? Or is collective bargaining already "old before its time?" In the following article, excerpted from a paper prepared for the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara, Jacobs argues his views on questions that must be partially resolved if industrial peace is to be maintained five years from now.—Editor)

GIANT BULKLOADER in Long Beach Harbor operates with little manpower. Automation is one of biggest factors facing union-management consultants of tomorrow.

On 16th Street across the park from the White House is an eight-story, squarish, marble building set back from the sidewalk. Inside, men and women go to their floors in automatic elevators and do their work in comfortable, well-lit offices. The men who dominate the life of the building, the high officials of the AFL-CIO, deal almost exclusively in their outside work with high officials of the American government, or business leaders.

* * * *

A man in a mended jacket, unpressed pants and cracked shoes trudges up the steps of a small, dingy building just off Mission Street on the edge of Skid Row in San Francisco. At the top of the stairs, he goes to a grilled window marked DUES and stands on line.

When he gets to the window, he gives the woman behind it tattered dollar bills stuck in a little black book and tells her he wants to pay his dues for one month.

Then he moves around to another window under a sign that says DISPATCHER. But the man who sits behind that opening shakes his head, for there are no jobs to which the members of the Miscellaneous Culinary Workers Local 110 of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers Union can be dispatched. So the man shuffles over to sit down, wearily, in one of the chairs that are spread out along the dirty windows overlooking the street below.

"Miscellaneous Culinary Workers" is a euphemism for dishwashers, bus boys and porters.

Vast distances, social and geographic, separate the members of Miscellaneous Culinary Workers Local 110, San Francisco, from the men and women whose offices are in the marble AFL-CIO headquarters on 16th Street, the monumental Labor Department offices on Constitution Avenue, or the rectangular glass-box buildings favored by the corporations.

But despite the distances and differences, the high union, government and corporate officials have always been linked to the "catchers" of Local 110. The link has been a collective bargaining system in which unions and employers have dealt directly with each other, free from outside intervention.

In this system, the government has played a hands-off role, acting only as a referee or as a mediator when disputes have broken out in certain key industries.

Now, however, the collective bargaining system is collapsing, and with its collapse the unions that have been so integral a part of it face a dim and uncertain future.

Some symptoms of the breakdown of collective bargaining are obvious and attract immediate attention. Others remain obscure. But all point toward two fundamental alterations in industrial society today. First, the system of collective bargaining, which has operate successfully since the passage of the Wagner Act, 30 years ago, has proved less and less adequate for the solution of some basic problems now faced by unions and management, and second, an increasing number of workers remain outside the system, with very little possibility that they will ever come into it.

Automation and the particular unemployment it brings to a particular plant are problems obviously beyond the capabilities of union-management collective bargaining. No one can reasonably expect management to continue employing unneeded workers, but no one can reasonably expect unions to concede that they and their members have become superfluous.

No one can expect management to absorb all the costs of moving and training displaced workers, but no one can expect the workers to bear those costs themselves. And so the problem of automation and particular unemployment cannot be kept inside the confines of traditional collective bargaining; the government must share the responsibility for its solution, and perhaps assume the major share.

"The days are also past when the government's role in labor-management relations was merely as a referee."

* * * *

MANY PEOPLE, including some without any vested interest in collective bargaining, do not agree that traditional collective bargaining patterns have become archaic.

They look at the existence of thousands and thousands of peaceful agreements between local unions and management as proof that collective bargaining operates reasonably well at the plant level. Selective Industrial Recruitment Seen

During the coming five years the recruitment of industry for the Long Beach area may become more selective.

Such a projection comes from the Chamber of Commerce's Economic-Industrial Development Committee.

"We're in a real demand area," says Ernest La Belle, staff administrator for the committee.

But Roland Robbins, vice president and general manager of the main branch of the Bank of America, Long Beach, and chairman of the committee, concedes, "Right now we're seeking industry as such."

"But during the next five years we may attempt to point toward more specific types of industry. The time may come when we say 'We don't want you,'" he adds.

* * * *

EVEN FROM today's vantage point La Belle and Robbins can identify several industries as candidates for increasing facilities in the area of the Chamber's concern much of which is outside the boundaries of Long Beach simply because more land is available on the perimeter.

"We're hoping to attract paper product concerns, because the natural growth pattern of that industry makes it particularly interesting," they say.

"Food processing is another field that's going to be awfully important in the future ... petrochemicals, certainly, are a natural for this area ... the field of furniture manufacturing will see a great deal of growth ... and we hope to see the garment industry grow here. The school district has a really fine sewing program that should be some help there."

A 1964 Chamber survey counted 3,000 acres within Long Beach's sphere of interest—the Dominguez area, Signal Hill north to Norwalk, Garden Grove, Westminster, Los Alamitos, Seal Beach and Huntington Beach—available for industrial development.

Of this probably 500 acres has been eaten up in the last year and a half, La Belle says. But he declines to project what might happen to this inventory in the coming half decade:

"It's too highly flexible. Tomorrow the number of acres may be vastly larger or smaller because of zoning changes."

* * * *

IN ANY EVENT, to support terming Long Beach "a demand area" La Belle points to the City Water Department's 65 acres industrial park at the airport.

In the last two-and-a-half-years, under the direction of Harold Levy, the department has sold 61 acres to companies that have promised to put up original buildings within two years.

Leavy, head of lands and leases, predicts the park will add about 700 jobs by the end of first phase of development—about 1967—and another 1,800 to 2,500 inside 10 years.

As frequently noted, additional land that's now oil producing may open up in the near future. A chunk of this is in Signal Hill adjacent to Long Beach and the airport.

"All told there must be 300 acres of developable industrial land outside the fence in the area of the airport," La Belle says. "In Signal Hill one oil company alone has 150 acres about to be ground leased."

• NEW INDUSTRY MEANS NEW JOBS

• AVAILABLE 2,500 ACRES FOR NEW INDUSTRIES

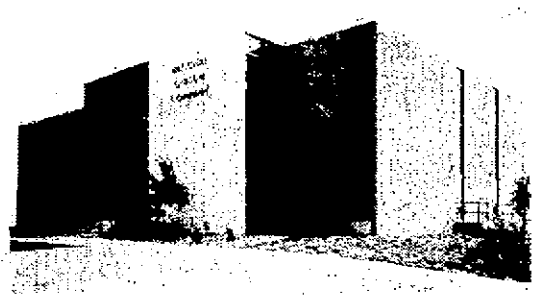
Undeveloped Acreage Limited Inside City

Residential and commercial development already has chewed up most of the land in Long Beach.

What's left?

Frank Sherlock, principal planner for Long Beach, estimates that within the city there remain some 157 acres readily available for industrial development—without any restrictions.

This available acreage is concentrated in two areas, he says. Most is in North Long Beach between Cherry Avenue and Paramount Boulevard and north of South Street. Some is adjacent to the Port of Long Beach.



* * * *

INSIDE THE port considerable land remains—some 480 acres. Sherlock notes, however, that much of this acreage is still producing oil and gas, which usually precludes surface development. In any event, companies interested in a port site must meet certain requirements of the harbor—generally they must plan to use the shipping facilities.

However, an additional 95 acres available inside the port with the completion of the Pier J land fill, might be developed by businesses unrelated to shipping—restaurants, hotels and the like.

Also, inside Long Beach airport there is an additional 60 acres available to industry on a lease bsis.

"The most interesting area for future industrial development is the open area to the west, the Dominguez area," says Sherlock. "It has millions of dollars in plants already there and is one of the few areas of the county that still has large sections of industrial land undeveloped."

NEW INDUSTRIAL ADDITION

In the Dominguez area, however, as in the rest of the county residential projects have recently been pressing in on land zoned for industrial use.

One result has been conflicting pressures for incorporation and annexation of all or part of the area to adjacent cities—Long Beach, Compton and Los Angeles. Another has been a moratorium for an indefinite period on zoning chages, laid down by the County Board of Supervisors last April.

FOR RESIDENTIAL development, Sherlock notes aside from scattered lots only one good chunk remains:

The area bordered generally by the Veteran's Hospital on the north, Marine Stadium or the Los Cerritos Channel to the south and the residential streets Manila Avenue to the west and Margo and Daroca Avenues to the east.

Some of this land—and adjacent land outside the city limits but still within the county—is tied up in oil production.

But housing projects are already announced for most of it by developers Macco Realty Co., S & S Construction Co. and William Lansdale.

Sherlock, who also watches population trends in his planning capacity, notes "most residential growth is coming by way of multiple dwelling construction downtown.

Mayor of Rolling Hills Estates

In the nine years since its incorporation, this city has become a charming community of fine homes, many of which have won national recognition for beauty of design and quality of construction.

It is logical that in this community there is a very active civic beautification program. A committee aids home owners in the landscaping of entry and parkways. Looking forward, the city expects a continuation of the program. Other projects will improve traffic circulation and further protect our community's youngsters at school crossings.

Rolling Hills Estates expects to double its 5,200 population by 1970.

Still more new cars and diesels, too, for Santa Fe.

Our $145-million improvement program for 1966 includes over 5,000 freight cars and 60 diesels. That brings our investment to more than $360-million for over 18,000 new freight cars and new diesels in just four years. All to better serve the busy Santa Fe country and you, Mr. Shipper!

Here are the up-to-date facts about Santa Fe. With our program for 1966 more than 20% of our huge fleet of freight cars will be less than 4 years old. And over 50% of our diesel freight power has been replaced with units of the high-horsepower type.

But even these figures do not tell our full progress story.

Santa Fe's new diesels, like practically all others in our fleet, are equipped with radio communications and other modern features which combined with their high-horsepower enables them to pull trains on fast, dependable schedules.

Our new freight cars meet demonstrated preferences of shippers. Some are longer, others are two and one half times larger in cubic capacity; many haul twice the tonnage of cars they replace.

Our special task force of 100-ton covered hopper cars for grain, potash, and other bulk commodities is being further enlarged. Soon 5,600 of these jumbo hoppers will be in service and this fleet will have the carrying capacity equivalent to more than 11,000 conventional box cars.

Every new car offers a special benefit to Santa Fe customers. Multi-level automobile cars. Huge auto-parts box cars. Mechanical temperature-control cars. Insulated cars. Faster-loading hoppers. Piggy-back trailers and flat cars. For every type of carload, Santa Fe has a modern car. And as we add new specialty cars, we can assign more of our regular box cars, along with our new 100-ton hoppers, to handle the grain shipments to alleviate shortages.

New microwave communications, rapid car-reporting, modern terminals keep our freight fleet rolling throughout the country.

Across the U.S., Santa Fe men in 64 Traffic Centers linked in a network coordinated with our railroad are fully prepared to serve shippers everywhere. How can Santa Fe help you?

"We're going to have a lot more residents in this area, and they're going to be people with more expendable income," says Vaile G. Young, president of the Buffums department store chain which last year spent $500,000 remodeling its headquarters store downtown.

Downtown Success Visualized By Young

"The people coming into the new high rise and multiple dwellings downtown are a whole new type of consumer," Young explains. "These are working people, not the retired. And the new office buildings in the area put buyers downtown during the day."

And yet, warns the president of Buffums', turning the tourist-drawing potential of a redeveloped shoreline into more retail trade "depends on getting a major motel, hotel and restaurant complex" in the downtown area.

YOUNG PROJECTS that "the availability of retail space, if modernized and rebuilt, is adequate" and the existing complex of stores downtown can take care of buyers needs "until 1980" through their own expansion and modernization.

Long Beach is not likely to get another major retailer downtown, anyway, Young notes. "The trend is not in that direction (toward major new downtown stores)," he says adding, "there's not any major retailer looking. They've already passed us up."

Proposals for the revitalization of the downtown area range from the controversial and hopeful to the concrete and initiated. A pedestrian mall, apparently successful in some California cities, inspires controversy. A rapid transit terminal downtown would be part of a system that will still take more than five years to finance and construct.

Yet improvements are proceeding apace and some beautification efforts, such as landscaping the oil drilling islands offshore, appear certain.

THE PALM ISLANDS dividing seven blocks of Long Beach Boulevard were installed last year. City officials have announced plans to extend the islands another six blocks to Anaheim Street during fiscal 1966 at a cost of $125,000, and to eventually carry the planted divider as far north as Willow Street for an additional $250,000.

Also, street widening and island installation is scheduled for Ocean Boulevard from Alamitos Avenue to Golden Avenue, with the Alamitos to Long Beach section getting first attention for about $400,000.

Mrs. George P. Taubman, Year of Beauty chairman, marks two parts of the shoreline as important to city beautification.

"THUMS wants to do a good job on the beautification of the offshore drilling islands, but it's still imperative that the citizens make it known that they want these islands landscaped so well that the drilling apparatus is hidden even from the high rise apartments on the shoreline," she says.

"And we need to be concerned with what goes in on the near side of Pier J," Mrs. Taubman adds. "I think we've a perfectly beautiful shoreline looking towards town from The Reef. Now we've got to be concerned about looking the other way."

On what basis will industry, during the next five years, choose one plant location from another?

William T. (Bill) Huston, sophisticated and obviously successful developer of plant sites just west of Long Beach, identifies four factors:

FREEWAY ACCESSIBILITY — Consumer oriented industry is particularly interested in sites adjacent to freeways, so they can advertise their products with on-plant signs. But any company has to get workers and products in and out.

SUFFICIENT AVAILABLE LAND—One type of industry most interested in new plant sites now and in the near future is the company that grew up out of the "back yard," has since expanded to two or three locations and needs to get back into one large facility for efficiency reasons.

FAVORABLE LOCAL TAX STRUCTURE—Taxes are a cost of doing business and, if high, naturally force industry out. For example, since Nevada and Arizona have omitted inventory taxes while California's remains, businesses increasingly locate warehouses to serve the Long Beach - Los Angeles metropolis in the two neighboring states.

BETTER LIFE FOR EMPLOYES—This factor, which rarely makes such lists, is noted by Huston as one of Orange County's big drawing cards. The beaches and relative spaciousness of Orange County attract industry because they attract people. Locations along the San Diego freeway in Los Angeles County provide easy access to the same advantages, Huston adds.

WATSON LAND CO., with Huston as president, during an initial 12-months promotion has leased 60 acres of its 750-acre development in the Dominquez area.

Huston expects the company to maintain this pace, well ahead of the 25-acre a year closure record he originally anticipated for the next five years.

"The biggest item in our favor is the San Diego freeway and its orientation to the interstate freeways," he says. "It's important that we're on a comparatively non-congested freeway—the real congestion is in about a three mile radius from downtown Los Angeles core. And when the Artesia freeway is finished and the Pacific Coast and Industrial freeways come along, we'll be in an even better position."

"If a consumer oriented company does not get a good location within the next two or three years on a major freeway, then it will not get one," Houston adds. "You can still get land on a freeway at $1.50 a square foot. But three years from now it will be four times as expensive."

HUSTON CALLS the Long Beach - Los Angeles metropolitan area "industrially underdeveloped" because a large number of companies in the area have grown into three or four inefficient plants."

"There is a tremendous demand by local industry to integrate their facilities into a well planned industrial location," he explains.

This is one major category of industry his development attracts, he says. A second is "the typical midwestern and eastern company that wants to get into this fastest growing consumer market in the county."

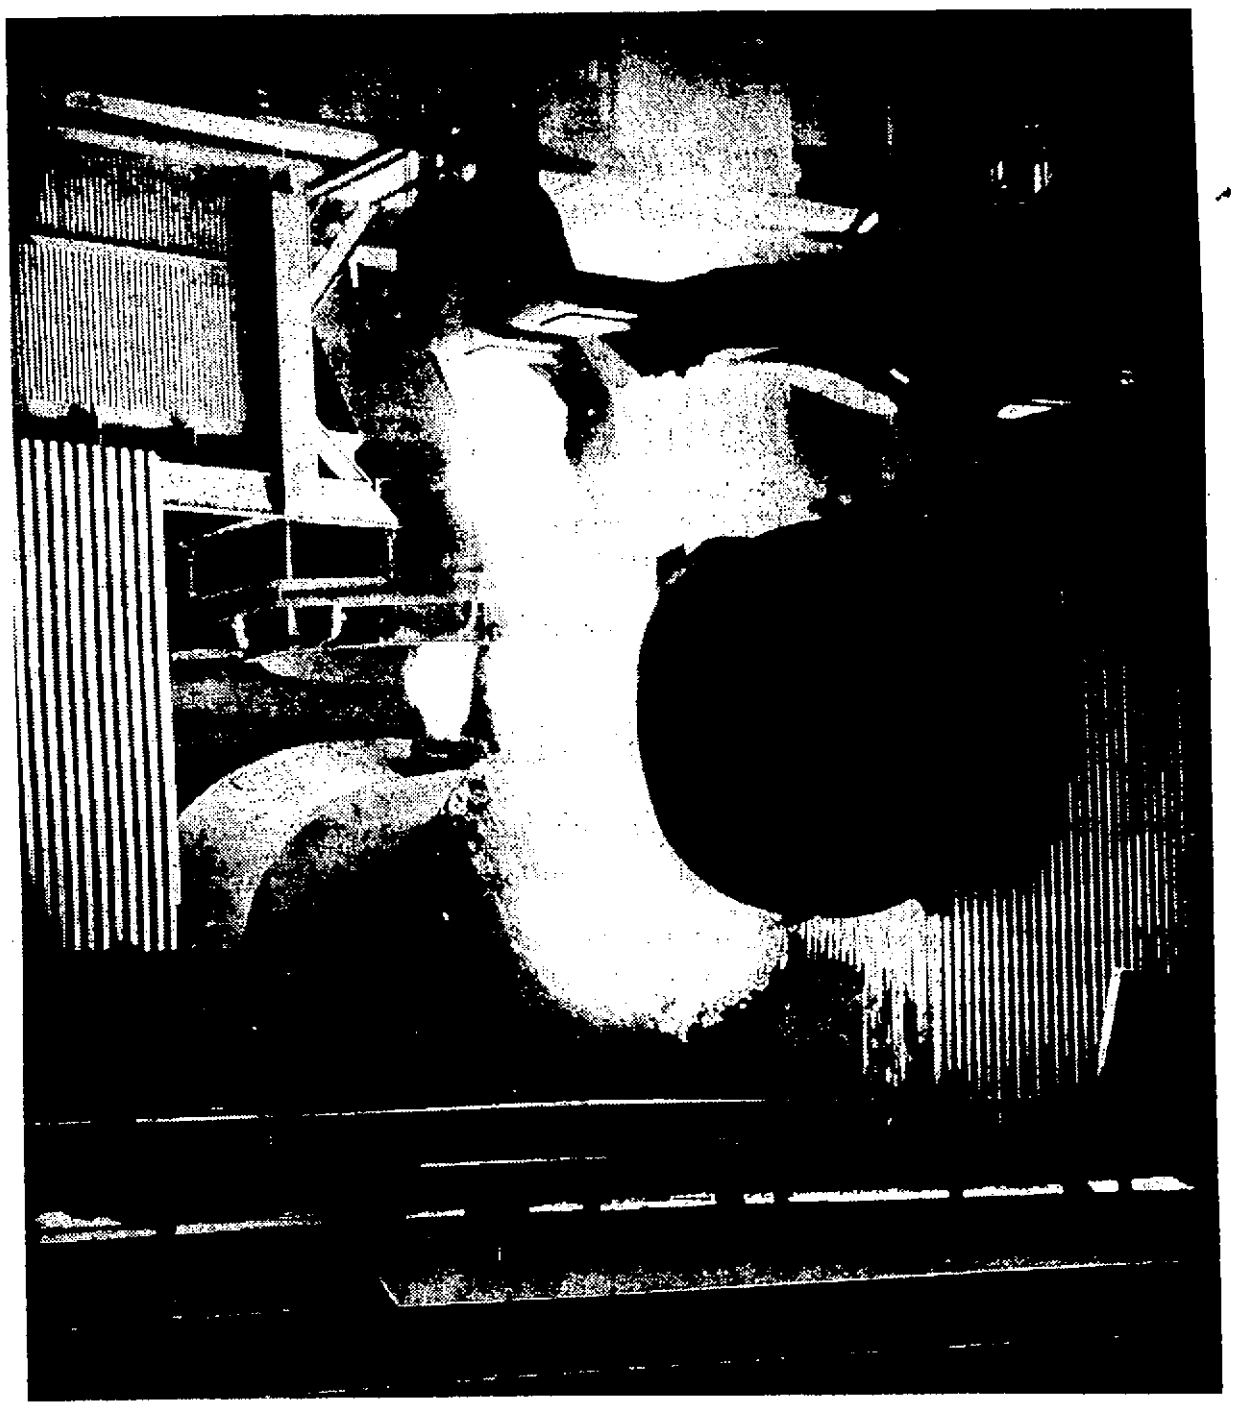
HOWEVER, taxes "if they get out of hand are going to hurt California and Southern California," Huston says. Los Angeles County has in its favor a definite assessment practice. To industry, being able to predict what property taxes will amount to is most important. Orange County, and some others, keep industry guessing, Huston says.

Industry would like to say: "Let us grow with low taxes and we'll take care of your unemployment."

On the other hand "school boards have to realize they can do an awful lot to attract industry or drive it away. For schools account for 50 to 60% of property taxes," he says.



"Welfare is also costly, and I think we've seen in Watts that welfare is not the answer. Employment is the answer. Industry would like to say 'let us grow with low taxes, and we'll take care of your unemployment," continues Huston.

In any event Huston notes, the frantic pace of Southern California growth is likely to continue. Despite the increasing recognition by industry of the importance of Long Beach - Los Angeles' metropolitan problems such as congestion and air pollution don't seem to be stemming the tide.

"The measure is whether people are being forced away. It doesn't seem that they are, so we'll simply live less comfortably in the future."

Selective Industrial Recruitment Seen

• NEW INDUSTRY MEANS NEW JOBS

During the coming five years the recruitment of industry for the Long Beach area may become more selective.

Such a projection comes from the Chamber of Commerce's Economic-Industrial Development Committee.

"We're in a real demand area," says Ernest La Belle, staff administrator for the committee.

But Roland Robbins, vice president and general manager of the main branch of the Bank of America, Long Beach, and chairman of the committee, concedes, "Right now we're seeking industry as such."

"But during the next five years we may attempt to point toward more specific types of industry. The time may come when we say "We don't want you," he adds.

* * * * *

EVEN FROM today's vantage point La Belle and Robbins can identify several industries as candidates for increasing facilities in the area of the Chamber's concern much of which is outside the boundaries of Long Beach simply because more land is available on the perimeter.

"We're hoping to attract paper product concerns, because the natural growth pattern of that industry makes it particularly interesting," they say.

"Food processing is another field that's going to be awfully important in the future ... petrochemicals, certainly, are a natural for this area ... the field of furniture manufacturing will see a great deal of growth ... and we hope to see the garment industry grow here. The school district has a really fine sewing program that should be some help there."

A 1964 Chamber survey counted 3,000 acres within Long Beach's sphere of interest—the Dominguez area, Signal Hill north to Norwalk, Garden Grove, Westminster, Los Alamitos, Seal Beach and Huntington Beach—available for industrial development.

Of this probably 500 acres has been eaten up in the last year and a half, La Belle says. But he declines to project what might happen to this inventory in the coming half decade:

"It's too highly flexible. Tomorrow the number of acres may be vastly larger or smaller because of zoning changes."

* * * * *

IN ANY EVENT, to support terming Long Beach "a demand area" La Belle points to the City Water Department's 65 acres industrial park at the airport.

In the last two-and-a-half years, under the direction of Harold Levy, the department has sold 61 acres to companies that have promised to put up original buildings within two years.

Leavy, head of lands and leases, predicts the park will add about 700 jobs by the end of first phase of development—about 1967—and another 1,800 to 2,500 inside 10 years.

As frequently noted, additional land that's now oil producing may open up in the near future. A chunk of this is in Signal Hill adjacent to Long Beach and the airport.

"All told there must be 300 acres of developable industrial land outside the fence in the area of the airport," La Belle says. "In Signal Hill one oil company alone has 150 acres about to be ground leased."

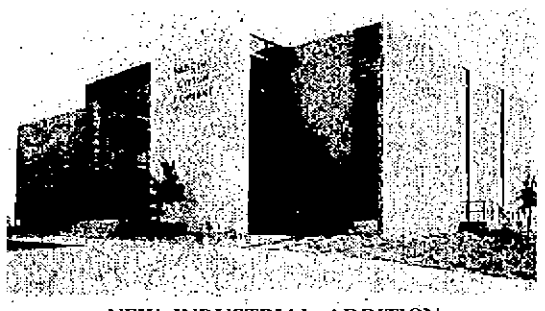
Undeveloped Acreage Limited Inside City

Residential and commercial development already has chewed up most of the land in Long Beach.

What's left?

Frank Sherlock, principal planner for Long Beach, estimates that within the city there remain some 157 acres readily available for industrial development—without any restrictions.

This available acreage is concentrated in two areas, he says. Most is in North Long Beach between Cherry Avenue and Paramount Boulevard and north of South Street. Some is adjacent to the Port of Long Beach.



* * * *

INSIDE THE port considerable land remains—some 480 acres. Sherlock notes, however, that much of this acreage is still producing oil and gas, which usually precludes surface development. In any event, companies interested in a port site must meet certain requirements of the harbor—generally they must plan to use the shipping facilities.

However, an additional 95 acres available inside the port with the completion of the Pier J land fill, might be developed by businesses unrelated to shipping—restaurants, hotels and the like.

Also, inside Long Beach airport there is an additional 60 acres available to industry on a lease bsis.

"The most interesting area for future industrial development is the open area to the west, the Dominguez area," says Sherlock. "It has millions of dollars in plants already there and is one of the few areas of the county that still has large sections of industrial land undeveloped."

NEW INDUSTRIAL ADDITION

In the Dominguez area, however, as in the rest of the county residential projects have recently been pressing in on land zoned for industrial use.

One result has been conflicting pressures for incorporation and annexation of all or part of the area to adjacent cities—Long Beach, Compton and Los Angeles. Another has been a moratorium for an indefinite period on zoning chages, laid down by the County Board of Supervisors last April.

FOR RESIDENTIAL development, Sherlock notes aside from scattered lots only one good chunk remains:

The area bordered generally by the Veteran's Hospital on the north, Marine Stadium or the Los Cerritos Channel to the south and the residential streets Manila Avenue to the west and Margo and Daroca Avenues to the east.

Some of this land—and adjacent land outside the city limits but still within the county—is tied up in oil production.

But housing projects are already announced for most of it by developers Macco Realty Co., S & S Construction Co. and William Lansdale.

Sherlock, who also watches population trends in his planning capacity, notes "most residential growth is coming by way of multiple dwelling construction downtown.

Rolling Hills Estates

By JACK HOPKINS
Mayor of Rolling Hills Estates

In the nine years since its incorporation, this city has become a charming community of fine homes, many of which have won national recognition for beauty of design and quality of construction.

It is logical that in this community there is a very active civic beautification program. A committee aids home owners in the landscaping of entry and parkways. Looking forward, the city expects a continuation of the program. Other projects will improve traffic circulation and further protect our community's youngsters at school crossings.

Rolling Hills Estates expects to double its 5,200 population by 1970.

Still more new cars and diesels, too, for Santa Fe.

Our $145-million improvement program for 1966 includes over 5,000 freight cars and 60 diesels. That brings our investment to more than $360-million for over 18,000 new freight cars and new diesels in just four years. All to better serve the busy Santa Fe country and you, Mr. Shipper!

Here are the up-to-date facts about Santa Fe. With our program for 1966 more than 20% of our huge fleet of freight cars will be less than 4 years old. And over 50% of our diesel freight power has been replaced with units of the high-horsepower type.

But even these figures do not tell our full progress story.

Santa Fe's new diesels, like practically all others in our fleet, are equipped with radio communications and other modern features which combined with their high-horsepower enables them to pull trains on fast, dependable schedules.

Our new freight cars meet demonstrated preferences of shippers. Some are longer, others are two and one half times larger in cubic capacity; many haul twice the tonnage of cars they replace.

Our special task force of 100-ton covered hopper cars for grain, potash, and other bulk commodities is being further enlarged. Soon 5,600 of these jumbo hoppers will be in service and this fleet will have the carrying capacity equivalent to more than 11,000 conventional box cars.

Every new car offers a special benefit to Santa Fe customers. Multi-level automobile cars. Huge auto-parts box cars. Mechanical temperature-control cars. Insulated cars. Faster-loading hoppers. Piggy-back trailers and flat cars. For every type of carload, Santa Fe has a modern car. And as we add new specialty cars, we can assign more of our regular box cars, along with our new 100-ton hoppers, to handle the grain shipments to alleviate shortages.

New microwave communications, rapid car-reporting, modern terminals keep our freight fleet rolling throughout the country.

Across the U.S., Santa Fe men in 64 Traffic Centers linked in a network coordinated with our railroad are fully prepared to serve shippers everywhere. How can Santa Fe help you?

fill this land and make it available for industrial development.

Working jointly with the city, the harbor has launched a six month study and promotion program aimed at attracting ocean-oriented industries and enterprises.

At the same time, steps are under way to develop 311-acre Pier J.

A feasibility study aimed at determining what will be the fullest and best use of the 95 acres comprising the east (or city facing) side of the peninsular shaped pier is to be completed soon.

Work is well along on the construction of a giant container-handling, crane terminal at the western face of the Pier.

CONSTRUCTION has started, too, on a major modification of the $6 million bulkloader on Pier G. The modification will allow the facility, already handling 1 million tons of iron ore each year, to ship an additional 800,000 tons of iron ore pellets.

During the year the port put into operation in the outer harbor district a steel terminal on Pier F, costing $2.8 million. It will handle about 250,000 tons of steel products each year.

Nearby the world's first fully-automated banana terminal began work during 1965.

The 12 months ahead will see more than $50 million put into new projects in the shore-harbor district.

These will include construction of a bridge between the downtown shore, from Magnolia Avenue to Pier A or J, an operating base and transmission center for Thums Long Beach Co. on Pier G and at Mitchell Avenue and conversion of Pier B into a military terminal among many others.

Land negotiations, actual work and engineering is proceeding to build a huge oil terminal in the Inner Harbor district for Texaco, Inc.

Other immediately down-the-road jobs include construction of a 25-acre Pier Y and a 50-acre Pier H, as well as a network of improved road and rail facilities.

LOS ANGELES Harbor, in the first major maritime improvement of Terminal Island since World War II, opened an $8 million international shipping terminal at Berths 218-223 during 1965.

Comprising two giant 200-by-1,008-foot clear span terminal buildings and a multi-story satellite headquarters, this Indies Terminal features the longest single wharf — 3,550 feet—ever built in the harbor.

Capable of handling six cargo vessels simultaneously, the high security terminal (it is completely fenced and illuminated) has 40 acres of paved outdoor storage area.

It is located on the main channel at the western edge of the island—indicative of a trend to push port operations closer and closer to the open sea, cutting down the turn-around time of vessels calling here.

At the same time, the Los Angeles port put its $8 million bulkloader into operation at Berths 49-50 in the Outer Harbor.

ON THE drawing boards or in the initial engineering phase are plans to tear down the Ferry Building and Landing at San Pedro to construct a Harbor Commission auditorium. Long range plans are to build a multi-story administration center immediately adjacent.

L.B. Bus Service to Grow

Over the next five years the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. will probably increase its routes 10 to 15 per cent "and add that many more buses," William F. Farell, executive vice president, says.

"Rapid transit, if it comes and if it's operated in the corridor now planned, would be a considerable help to our line," Farell adds.

The general manager of the local bus line expects people who now drive to work would use the bus to get to and from transit terminals.

For now, however, the city owned bus line is concentrating on a human relations program, which has stopped a decline in passenger miles, and on continuation of a bus replacement program.

In three years since voters decided to subsidize the company to keep it operating, it has purchased 68 new buses to bring the total of new buses on the line to 83. Some 20 outdated vehicles remain to be replaced over the next one to two years, Farell says.

Less tangible, perhaps, but just as important to Farell, have been the company's other efforts to attract riders. A pair of "bus bunnies" have been hired to circulate about the line playing hostess to riders. Orange juice is served on selected morning runs. At the request of downtown merchants, buses were repainted in Christmas colors. And so on.

"The girls went to work in the middle of November. In December our passenger miles were well up over a year ago. And so far in January our revenue is up 10 per cent," he says.

Freeways to Opén

Considerable additional mileage of four freeways serving the Long Beach area is scheduled for opening during the next two years.

Another freeway, the Artesia, is expected to slice across the northern reach of the city sometime during the next half-decade, but construction plans are not yet firm.

The Pacific Coast Freeway spanning Long Beach east to west is still several years off.

To open during 1966-67 are these stretches:

The San Diego Freeway from Beach Boulevard to Harbor Boulevard in the fall.

The San Gabriel River Freeway from Cecilia Street to 166th Street in Dairy Valley this spring and from 166th to Interstate 405 in Rossmoor this summer.

The Garden Grove Freeway from Bolsa Chica Road to Knott Avenue in Westminster this summer and from Main Street in Santa Ana to the Newport Freeway in the spring of 1967.

And, the Newport Freeway from Warner Avenue to Palisades Road and Bristol Street in Costa Mesa in about a year.

Downtown Success Visualized By Young

The thrust of high rise apartments and capital improvements on the beach—these may draw the kind of residents and tourists that will revitalize business in downtown Long Beach, civic leaders project.

Palm tree islands on Long Beach Boulevard have already added an eye-pleasing note to the shopping area. And, more such street improvements are in the works.

"We're going to have a lot more residents in this area, and they're going to be people with more expendable income," says Valle G. Young, president of the Buffums department store chain which last year spent $500,000 remodeling its headquarters store downtown.

Looking to the future, United States Steel is installing new galvanizing lines in Pennsylvania and Alabama to better serve automobile, appliance and other manufacturers. And, in 1967, it will begin construction of its first steel-producing plant in Texas to provide steel plate for the expanding industrial and construction markets in the Southwest.

That's progress—the kind that steel makes possible for the world of today and the world of tomorrow.

STRUCTURES DESIGN

Openings exist in conceptual design of primary airframe structures, fuselage, including empennage wing and control surfaces.

- Research and development programs involving investigations into the use of advanced manufacturing techniques, joining methods, new materials and composites for aircraft structural needs.
- Development of new conceptual designs for advanced aircraft systems and the testing and development of various structures to assure functional integrity of a production design.
- Analytical work necessary to size structural members.

Requires a BS in Engineering and one to fifteen years experience.

STRUCTURAL MECHANICS

- ACOUSTICAL ANALYSIS

Assignments utilizing all levels of experience in acoustics, including the prediction, control and evaluation of both interior and exterior vehicle noise environments.

- STRESS ANALYSIS

Perform Stress and Fatigue analysis on airframe structures and related systems. This includes landing gear, control systems and mechanical supporting systems.

- FLUTTER ANALYSIS

Perform flutter analysis of airframe vehicles.

- DESIGN CRITERIA AND LOADS ANALYSIS

Determine critical conditions, structural operating limitations, the histories of loads on flexible aircraft components and load spectra for fatigue resulting from gusts, maneuvers, landing and taxiing. An understanding of aerodynamics and structural response to aerodynamic and inertial forces is required.

The above positions require at least a BS in Engineering and two to ten years of experience.

ADVANCED SYSTEMS

- Conceptual design and analysis of advanced airborne ASW and Tactical Warfare electronics systems.
- Establishment of effectiveness criteria and mission evaluation models for conceptual weapon system designs.
- Analysis of conceptual weapon system designs to predict mission reliability and operational availability.

The above positions require a BS or MS in Mathematics, EE or Physics and recent experience.

- Senior Project Engineer to direct conceptual design effort on advanced carrier and land based tactical weapon systems.

SENIOR OPENINGS

. . . exist in the STRUCTURES and STRUCTURAL MECHANICS (Stress Analysis, Dynamic Analysis and Load Analysis) and ADVANCED DESIGN Sections for highly qualified Aircraft Engineers. These persons will be responsible for the technical supervision of other engineers in analysis and conceptual design activities.

REQUIRES a degree in engineering and 8 to 15 years of related experience.

AERODYNAMICS

Assignments will involve advanced and/or production design of subsonic commercial and military aircraft as well as supersonic military aircraft and research vehicles. Positions are available in the fields of high lift systems, stability and control, drag analysis, internal aerodynamics, and wing design.

- PROPULSION ENGINEERS

Assignments will involve analytical and experimental studies for the development of advanced supersonic aircraft. A BS or MS in aeronautical engineering with emphasis on thermodynamics and compressable flow theory plus three or more years active experience with supersonic air inlets nozzle performance and propulsion.

- PERFORMANCE ENGINEERS

Primary assignments will include design and operational performance analysis for the DC-8 Series 60 and the new DC-9 short to medium range aircraft. Minimum requirements are an AS or MS in Aeronautical Engineering and 2 or more years of recent operational experience in jet aircraft with an airline or an airframe manufacturer.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING

- AIRCRAFT WIRING DIAGRAM ENGINEERS

Assignments in preparing interconnecting wiring diagrams for aircraft electrical and electronic systems. General knowledge of circuitry, ATA specifications and aircraft required. Requires a BSEE plus aircraft experience.

- AIRCRAFT ELECTRICAL/ELECTRONIC INSTALLATION DESIGN

Assignments will involve board work in production installation design of electrical and electronic equipment racks and supports, switch panels, circuit breakers panels, relay panels, etc.
Requires a BS or MS and aircraft experience.

- AIRCRAFT WIRING DEVELOPMENT ENGINEERS

Assignment involves engineering of aircraft electrical and electronic system wiring and cabling in aircraft. Knowledge of applicable specifications, RFI avoidance and aircraft installation practices required.
Requires directly related experience.

- AIRCRAFT RADAR SYSTEMS

System analysis, probability theory, Fortran programming and formulation of mathematical models of weather, precision mapping, terrain following, terrain avoidance and AMTI-radar systems. Development of interfaces with other systems and operators. Requires a BSEE and 3 to 5 years directly related experience.

- AIRCRAFT NAVIGATION SYSTEMS

System analysis, probability theory, Fortran programming and formulation of mathematical models of stellar-doppler-inertial systems. Development of interface requirements with other systems.
Requires a BSEE and 3 to 5 years directly related experience.

- AIRCRAFT ELECTRICAL POWER SYSTEMS

Assignments in aircraft electrical power generation, distribution and lighting systems. Knowledge of current military requirements. Ability to analyze systems, prepare and evaluate specification documents for system procurement.
Requires a BSEE and 3 to 5 years directly related experience.

- ELECTRONIC BLACK BOX DESIGNERS

Will design Electronic Test Equipment for testing of auto-control components or control systems.
Requires a BSEE and a minimum of five years directly related experience.

POWER PLANT and ENVIRONMENTAL ENGINEERING

- PERSONNEL OXYGEN SYSTEM
- HEAT TRANSFER ANALYSIS
- ENGINE PERFORMANCE ANALYSIS

- ENGINE BLEED AIR PNEUMATIC SYSTEMS
- AIRCRAFT FUEL SYSTEM DESIGN
- AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEMS
- POWER PLANT AND RELATED SYSTEMS ANALYSIS
- CABIN PRESSURE CONTROL SYSTEMS
- POWER PLANT OR AUXILIARY POWER UNIT INSTALLATION DESIGN

The above positions require a BSME or BSAE and two or more years experience.

CABIN INTERIOR DESIGN

- Openings exist for interior design engineers with structural and mechanical design experience in interior component design for commercial aircraft. This will include both flight deck and passenger cabin design.
- Also needed are engineers with backgrounds in mathematics with experience in setting up computer programs for trajectory studies.
- Aircrew station designers with experience in emergency escape systems and components such as parachute systems, ballistic devices, pneumatics and mechanical controls.

Gateway to the World

(Continues from Pages S-26)

fill this land and make it available for industrial development.

Working jointly with the city, the harbor has launched a six month study and promotion program aimed at attracting ocean-oriented industries and enterprises.

At the same time, steps are under way to develop 311-acre Pier J.

A feasibility study aimed at determining what will be the fullest and best use of the 95 acres comprising the east (or city facing) side of the peninsular shaped pier is to be completed soon.

Work is well along on the construction of a giant container-handling, crane terminal at the western face of the Pier.

CONSTRUCTION has started, too, on a major modification of the $6 million bulkloader on Pier G. The modification will allow the facility, already handling 1 million tons of iron ore each year, to ship an additional 800,000 tons of iron ore pellets.

During the year the port put into operation in the outer harbor district a steel terminal on Pier F, costing $2.8 million. It will handle about 250,000 tons of steel products each year.

Nearby the world's first fully-automated banana terminal began work during 1965.

The 12 months ahead will see more than $50 million put into new projects in the shore-harbor district.

These will include construction of a bridge between the downtown shore, from Magnolia Avenue to Pier A or J, an operating base and transmission center for Thums Long Beach Co. on Pier G and at Mitchell Avenue and conversion of Pier B into a military terminal among many others.

Land negotiations, actual work and engineering is proceeding to build a huge oil terminal in the Inner Harbor district for Texaco, Inc.

Other immediately down-the-road jobs include construction of a 25-acre Pier Y and a 50-acre Pier H, as well as a network of improved road and rail facilities.

LOS ANGELES Harbor, in the first major maritime improvement of Terminal Island since World War II, opened an $8 million international shipping terminal at Berths 218-223 during 1965.

Comprising two giant 200-by-1,008-foot clear span terminal buildings and a multi-story satellite headquarters, this Indies Terminal features the longest single wharf — 3,550 feet—ever built in the harbor.

Capable of handling six cargo vessels simultaneously, the high security terminal (it is completely fenced and illuminated) has 40 acres of paved outdoor storage area.

It is located on the main channel at the western edge of the island—indicative of a trend to push port operations closer and closer to the open sea, cutting down the turn-around time of vessels calling here.

At the same time, the Los Angeles port put its $8 million bulkloader into operation at Berths 49-50 in the Outer Harbor.

ON THE drawing boards or in the initial engineering phase are plans to tear down the Ferry Building and Landing at San Pedro to construct a Harbor Commission auditorium. Long range plans are to build a multi-story administration center immediately adjacent.

L.B. Bus Service to Grow

Over the next five years the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. will probably increase its routes 10 to 15 per cent "and add that many more buses," William F. Farell, executive vice president, says.

"Rapid transit, if it comes and if it's operated in the corridor now planned, would be a considerable help to our line," Farell adds.

The general manager of the local bus line expects people who now drive to work would use the bus to get to and from transit terminals.

For now, however, the city owned bus line is concentrating on a human relations program, which has stopped a decline in passenger miles, and on continuation of a bus replacement program.

In three years since voters decided to subsidize the company to keep it operating, it has purchased 68 new buses to bring the total of new buses on the line to 83. Some 20 outdated vehicles remain to be replaced over the next one to two years, Farell says.

Less tangible, perhaps, but just as important to Farell, have been the company's other efforts to attract riders. A pair of "bus bunnies" have been hired to circulate about the line playing hostess to riders. Orange juice is served on selected morning runs. At the request of downtown merchants, buses were repainted in Christmas colors. And so on.

"The girls went to work in the middle of November. In December our passenger miles were well up over a year ago. And so far in January our revenue is up 10 per cent," he says.

Freeways to Open

Considerable additional mileage of four freeways serving the Long Beach area is scheduled for opening during the next two years.

Another freeway, the Artesia, is expected to slice across the northern reach of the city sometime during the next half-decade, but construction plans are not yet firm.

The Pacific Coast Freeway spanning Long Beach east to west is still several years off.

To open during 1966-67 are these stretches:

The San Diego Freeway from Beach Boulevard to Harbor Boulevard in the fall.

The San Gabriel River Freeway from Cecilia Street to 166th Street in Dairy Valley this spring and from 166th to Interstate 405 in Rossmoor this summer.

The Garden Grove Freeway from Bolsa Chica Road to Knott Avenue in Westminster this summer and from Main Street in Santa Ana to the Newport Freeway in the spring of 1967.

And, the Newport Freeway from Warner Avenue to Palisades Road and Bristol Street in Costa Mesa in about a year.

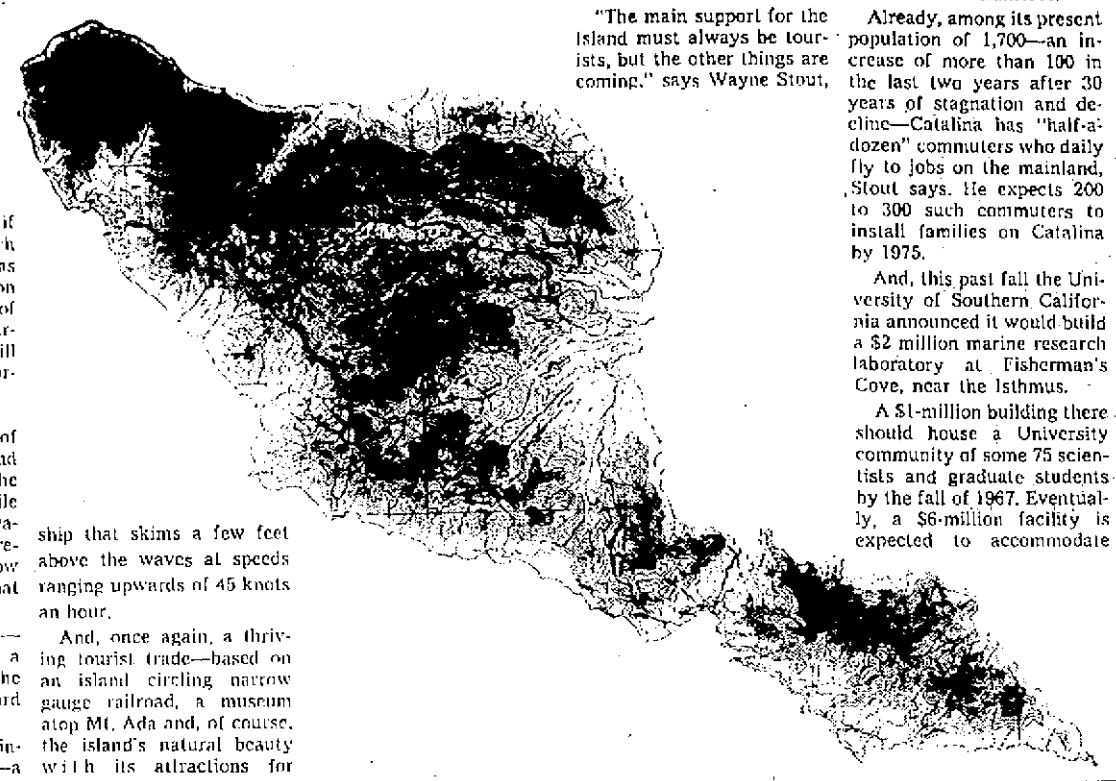
Partner to Industry.

At General Telephone, fostering economic growth in the 175 Southern California communities we serve is a permanent objective. For years, our Industrial Development Section has served as a Company task force aimed at speeding relocation of new plants in General's territory.

But the "partnership" doesn't dissolve with the completion of a new structure or the enlargement of an older one. Times change. Businesses expand, diversify, literally outgrow their communications systems.

At this point, we offer another team of specialists to advise management—our Communications Consultants. They're thoroughly familiar with all types of available equipment, systems and service—and how to apply them to a firm's specific needs, present and future. They're trained to translate the statistics of communications—number of incoming and outgoing calls, average length of conversations, and ratio of local to long distance calls, into equipment specifications.



Their talents are available free-of-charge to any commercial or professional operation we serve. A call to your local business office will put a Communications Consultant at your service.

WRIGLEY'S DREAM

Catalina Becoming Suburb of Future

Four years ago the idea that Santa Catalina Island might be the suburb of the future—and the home of a thriving marine science industry—was largely a dream in the mind of Phillip K. Wrigley, landlord of most of the "magic isle."

Wrigley, of the chewing gum family, then postulated that the island's potential was similar to that of Orange County's Irvine ranch.

"The only difference is that Irvine land is accessible to the automobile and ours is not," he said. "Transportation poses one of our two major problems. An adequate domestic water supply is the other."

Today Wrigley's dream is a couple of firm steps toward realization.

And, within five years, if announced plans of such conservative institutions as Southern California Edison Co. and the University of Southern California are carried through, the island will have taken a giant leap forward.

* * * *

AT THE REQUEST of Wrigley's Catalina Island Co., which owns all of the island except the square mile occupied by the city of Avalon, planner William L. Pereira and Associates has now detailed a 1975 future that includes:

A population of 20,000—split between Avalon and a scientific community at the low-slung Isthmus toward the island's northern tip.

Commuters going to mainland jobs by hydrofoil—a ship that skims a few feet above the waves at speeds ranging upwards of 45 knots an hour.

And, once again, a thriving tourist trade—based on an island circling narrow gauge railroad, a museum atop Mt. Ada and, of course, the island's natural beauty with its attractions for yachtsmen, fishermen and hunters.

"The main support for the island must always be tourists, but the other things are coming," says Wayne Stout, manager of the Avalon Chamber of Commerce.

Already, among its present population of 1,700—an increase of more than 100 in the last two years after 30 years of stagnation and decline—Catalina has "half-a-dozen" commuters who daily fly to jobs on the mainland, Stout says. He expects 200 to 300 such commuters to install families on Catalina by 1975.

And, this past fall the University of Southern California announced it would build a $2 million marine research laboratory at Fisherman's Cove, near the Isthmus.

A $1-million building there should house a University community of some 75 scientists and graduate students by the fall of 1967. Eventually, a $6-million facility is expected to accommodate 450 university people and account for a community of 1,500.

Southern California Edison has spent $1 million during the last year to improve utilities on the island, where it has taken on responsibility for water supply. The company is raising the height of Thompson Dam to increase its storage capacity from 200 to 1,000-acre-feet.

It earlier moved a seawater evaporator to the island to serve as a supplemental source of fresh water during the tourist season.

* * * *

SINCE APRIL of 1964 three builders have put up a trio of apartment houses and a cluster of town houses—60 units in all—that are "about 75% occupied," Stout says.

Travel to and from the island, now limited to relatively expensive seaplane jaunts or often too leisurely ship crossings, may take a leap into the future this summer when one of the transportation companies serving the island expects to take delivery on a 75-passenger hydrofoil.

Stout expects the hydrofoil to be based on Catalina to bring people to the mainland in the morning and return them in the evening. The one-way trip would take about 40 minutes from embarkation to setting foot on the other side. Cost of traveling by hydrofoil has not yet been fixed.

By 1975:

- 20,000 people
- High-speed commuter boats
- Increased tourist trade

Presently a complex of companies operate ships to and from the island daily, with frequency and capacity depending on demand. By sea the trip generally takes three hours one way and costs about $7.50 round trip; by air it takes fifteen minutes one way and costs about $12 round trip.

NEW PATTERNS IN HOMES

Architecture for Better Living--Housing for the Five Years Ahead

By LARRY LYNCH

"The single family house, as you know it today, is going to be like the dinosaur before too long. Land values are going to drive the single family owner right out," says William A. Lockett, Long Beach architect and member of the City Planning Commission.

What then will replace the one family home?

In Long Beach it is likely to be high rise apartments and it ought to be, as well, superblocks of community-like attached housing, according to Lockett and two other local architects. The two others:

Edward A. Killingsworth, secretary of the Southern California chapter of the American Institute of Architects and part time instructor at the USC school of architecture.

And, Donald Gibbs, the second generation half of an architectural firm that is designing many of Long Beach's high rise buildings.

"The main support for the island must always be tourists, but the other things are coming," says Wayne Stout, manager of the Avalon Chamber of Commerce.

Already, among its present population of 1,700—an increase of more than 100 in the last two years after 30 years of stagnation and decline—Catalina has "half-a-dozen" commuters who daily fly to jobs on the mainland, Stout says. He expects 200 to 300 such commuters to install families on Catalina by 1975.

And, this past fall the University of Southern California announced it would build a $2 million marine research laboratory at Fisherman's Cove, near the Isthmus.

A $1-million building there should house a University community of some 75 scientists and graduate students by the fall of 1967. Eventually, a $6-million facility is expected to accommodate 450 university people and account for a community of 1,500.

Southern California Edison has spent $1 million during the last year to improve utilities on the island, where it has taken on responsibility for water supply. The company is raising the height of Thompson Dam to increase its storage capacity from 200 to 1,000 acre-feet.

It earlier moved a seawater evaporator to the island to serve as a supplemental source of fresh water during the tourist season.

* * * *

SINCE APRIL of 1964 three builders have put up a trio of apartment houses and a cluster of town houses—60 units in all—that are "about 75% occupied," Stout says.

Travel to and from the island, now limited to relatively expensive seaplane jaunts or often too leisurely ship crossings, may take a leap into the future this summer when one of the transportation companies serving the island expects to take delivery on a 75-passenger hydrofoil.

Stout expects the hydrofoil to be based on Catalina to bring people to the mainland in the morning and return them in the evening. The one-way trip would take about 40 minutes from embarkation to setting foot on the other side. Cost of traveling by hydrofoil has not yet been fixed.

By 1975:

- 20,000 people
- High-speed commuter boats
- Increased tourist trade

Presently a complex of companies operate ships to and from the island daily, with frequency and capacity depending on demand. By sea the trip generally takes three hours one way and costs about $7.50 round trip; by air it takes fifteen minutes one way and costs about $12 round trip.

Hospitals Grow to Meet Demands

As Medicare approaches, and as new medical findings pour in, here is a glimpse into the future of Long Beach hospitals:

MEMORIAL

Memorial Hospital, which describes itself as the nation's first space-age hospital, hopes to cut medical costs by featuring a new treatment concept.

Early this year it is opening an 86-bed addition, called Memorial West, that will specialize in what is called advanced care.

This unit, located west of Memorial's main building, will make available elsewhere general hospital beds now occupied by patients not requiring acute-level care.

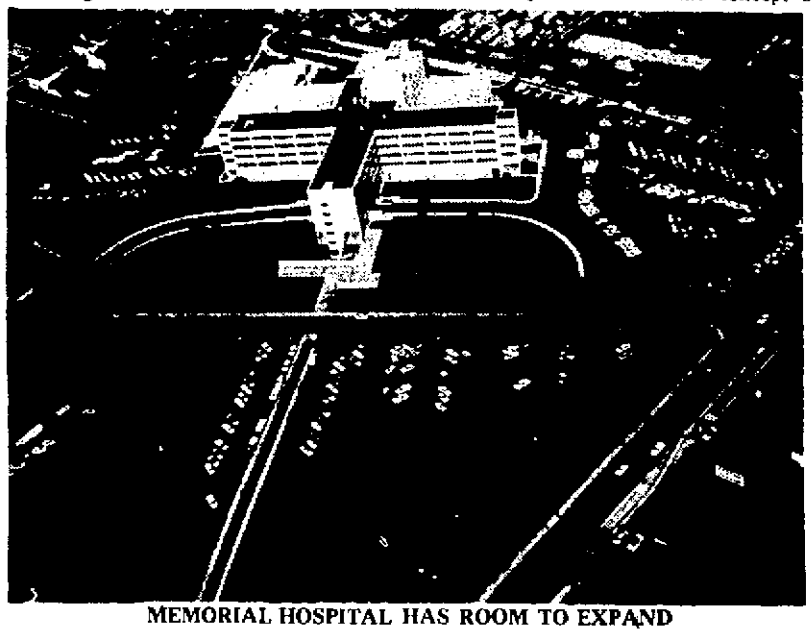
In Memorial West itself will be such patients as stroke victims, long-term accident victims (whiplash, etc.), diabetics, those with tumors, post-coronary conditions and orthopedic complications.

Memorial West will also include an expanded rehabilitation center, combining physical therapy, occupational therapy and speech and hearing therapy in a central location.

Physical features of the rehabilitation unit will include an audiometric room for hearing diagnosis and treatment, a physical therapy exercise area, an outdoor recreational area and a hydrotherapy area that will include a 20-by-40 foot pool with whirlpool agitators, hydraulic lift for paraplegic patients, and a sauna bath.

Although Memorial West will be in full use before the first Medicare patient is admitted to the hospital, the unit was designed with the Medicare patient in mind, hospital officials say.

Memorial officials say they have been advised that the number of patients over 65 years old will double and will represent nearly 35% of all hospital patients.



Another way of putting it: Number of days of care will increase by 20%.

But Memorial West's 86 new beds will increase hospital capacity by 20%.

Should this expansion prove inadequate, the second floor of Memorial West, now constructed simply as a "shell," can be completed quickly and placed in service.

Memorial proper, in addition, was designed to carry two additional floors which would provide for another 200 patients.

If absolutely necessary, Memorial West could go as high as four floors. So it would be possible to bring Memorial's bed total to 1,000 beds.

MEMORIAL HOSPITAL HAS ROOM TO EXPAND

ST. MARY'S

A long-range expansion and improvement program at St. Mary's Hospital will cost an estimated $10 million.

To cope with the expected impact of state and federal medicare programs, St. Mary's now is shaping plans for the handling of patients requiring long-term care.

This is in line with the concept of progressive care. Two phases of progressive care—acute care and intensive care—are already in operation at the 349-bed facility.

Plans are also being made to provide new intern and resident quarters, including both bachelor units and family apartments. Additional classroom facilities are planned.

Expanded and renovated outpatient and diagnostic facilities are part of the hospital's master plan.

Discussions are now being held with state and federal authorities concerning participation in research programs dealing with heart disease, stroke and cancer.

St. Mary's has just completed a renovation and expansion program costing $1,615,068. Improvements have been effected in the X-ray department, laboratory, admitting offices, business and administrative offices and lobby facilities.

PACIFIC

At Pacific Hospital of Long Beach, proposed expansion to 400 beds is now being studied. The hospital now has 195 beds.

Pacific is constantly adding new equipment and has recently beefed up its medical education program by scheduling seminars featuring out-of-town speakers, and closed-circuit TV lectures on medical topics.

COMMUNITY

Long Beach Community Hospital, which recently completed a major face-lifting, plans to continue to remodel and expand to keep pace with demands for medical care.

A cobalt "bomb," for the treatment of deep-seated tumors, is being added to the hospital's armamentarium.

Work on a chapel will begin this year.

Already modernized and exanded are Community's intensive-care and orthopedic units.

The intensive-care unit has been increased to seven beds and staffed with specialty personnel to cope with major emergency problems that may rise among the critically ill patients assigned there.

The orthopedic facility, now 64 beds, is believed to be the largest of its type in the city.

Recent installations include a gurney shower, enabling a patient to shower while lying on a cart—without being painfully moved.

Community also boasts a 12-bed communicable-disease unit, only one of its kind in Long Beach. It was constructed solely to cope with special problems of those with contagious ailments.

The laboratory at Community has been doubled in size.

NEWEST LONG BEACH HOSPITAL IS NAVY FACILITY

NAVAL

Newest hospital on the Long Beach horizon is the Naval Hospital, still under construction but slated for completion before the end of this year.

This 350-bed facility, to cost $7½ million, is located on a 30½-acre site at 7100 E. Carson St. Its completion will permit closing of the hospital ship USS Haven, based in Long Beach.

The five-story structure will also feature an outpatient clinic.

VA HOSPITAL

Long Beach's largest hospital, the Veterans Administration, is slated to become even larger.

Now a 1,581-bed facility, it is scheduled to be a 1,725-bed hospital eventually.

An $18 million construction and expansion program at the hospital has been under way for more than a year and is slated for completion in the fall of 1968.

The project calls for a new two-story psychiatric building and an 11-story "tower" structure, plus remodeling of existing facilities on the 110-acre grounds.

The psychiatric building will double the size of the hospital's neuropsychiatric service, bringing it to 240 beds. This structure will be located just north of the hospital's 564-bed wing, which was completed in 1958.

The psychiatric building is scheduled for completion this fall but will be used for general medical purposes until the entire construction project has been completed.

The tower building is expected to be completed by September 1967.

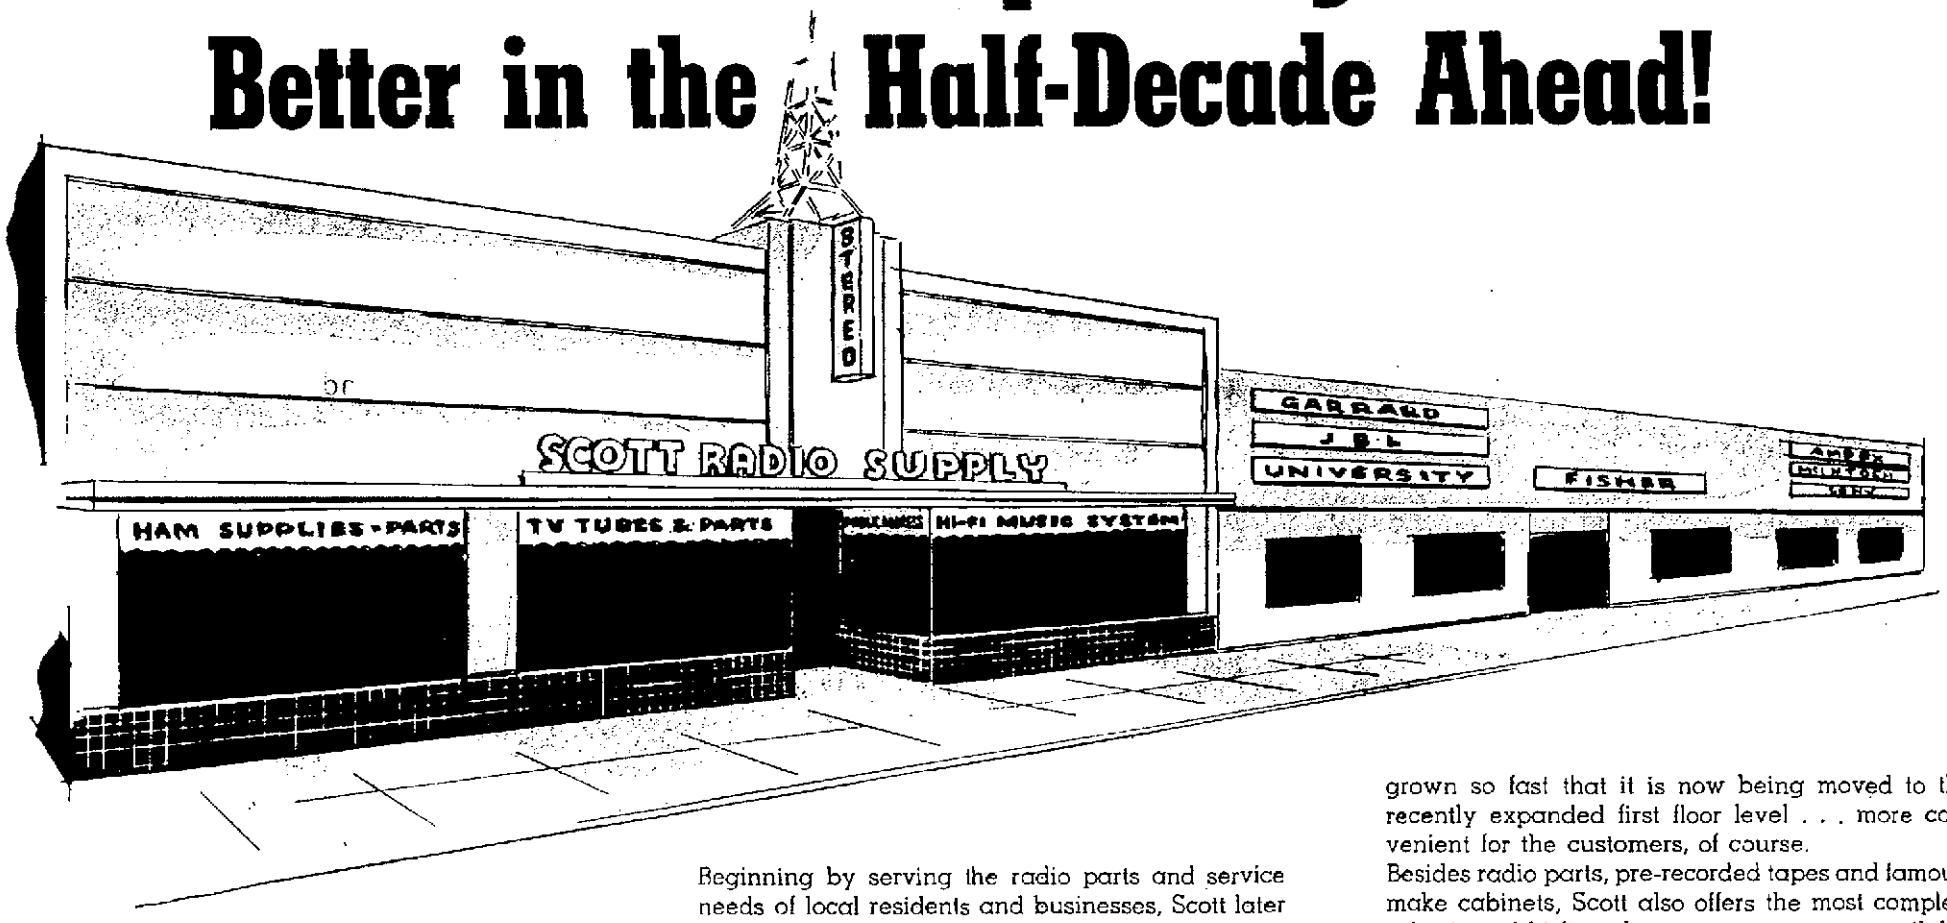
Eventually, all barrack-type buildings, with the exception of the research building, will be removed from the grounds.

DOMINGUEZ VALLEY

Dominguez Valley Hospital plans an enlargement of nuclear medicine and radiation therapy facilities this year, Dr. Paul Cardey, president, says. In 1967, the hospital expects to add about 120 beds and "possibly," the following year, another 68 Medicare beds, Cardey said. "At the end of five years we would hope to be at about 350 beds," he added.

OTHERS

Long Beach General Hospital, once a tuberculosis facility, has catered exclusively since 1961 to elderly persons with chronic illness. It expects to continue to specialize in geriatric rehabilitation.



Long Beach El Cerrito Hospital, a long-term and rehabilitation hospital, is, like General, a county-operated facility. It plans to continue its policy of admitting patients only after they have recovered from the acute phase of their illness or accident. El Cerrito specializes in providing medical and rehabilitation services designed to hasten convalescence and to return patients home as rapidly as possible.

Lakewood General, currently licensed for 93 beds, hopes to enlarge to 200 beds eventually. Its long-range program calls for additional surgery units, a cobalt device and a two-year training program for registered nurses.

Woodruff Community Hospital plans to expand, but no date has been set for start of the expansion program. The hospital has started a new training program for licensed vocational nurses.

Los Altos Hospital is looking forward to establishment of a cardiopulmonary laboratory in the near future. The hospital's master plan also calls for addition of a 120-bed convalescent hospital and construction of a nurses residence.

NEW PATTERNS IN HOMES

Architecture for Better Living-- Housing for the Five Years Ahead

By LARRY LYNCH

"The single family house, as you know it today, is going to be like the dinosaur before too long. Land values are going to drive the single family owner right out," says William A. Lockett, Long Beach architect and member of the City Planning Commission.

What then will replace the one family home?

In Long Beach it is likely to be high rise apartments and it ought to be, as well, superblocks of community-like attached housing, according to Lockett and two other local architects. The two others:

Edward A. Killingsworth, secretary of the Southern California chapter of the American Institute of Architects and part time instructor at the USC school of architecture.

And, Donald Gibbs, the second generation half of an architectural firm that is designing many of Long Beach's high rise buildings.

Scientific Research Key to Advancement In Medical Field

Medical libraries are hard put to keep up with the explosion in medical knowledge.

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Medical scientists are predicting these changes in the next five years or so:

An implantable artificial heart.

More successes in organ transplants.

Antiviral drugs to cope with influenza.

Portable, perhaps implantable artificial kidneys.

Vaccines to protect against German measles and hepatitis (liver inflammation).

A drug cure for leukemia.

Improved drug treatment for alcoholism.

Improved drugs for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis.

New ways to predict and prevent strokes.

Emergency surgical procedures to deal with heart attacks.

Use of a powerful light beam—the laser—to dissolve malignant tumors.

"Cold-knife" surgical operations to freeze off tonsils.

Surgical glues to hold together tiny blood vessels.

All-out research effort to find new ways to fight emphysema, a crippling lung disease.

Virtual eradication of some forms of venereal disease.

A new role for nurses—upgrading in some instances to "assistant doctors."

Genetic tinkering with cells to prevent certain birth defects.

An oral contraceptive for males.

Routine blood transfusions for unborn babies in distress.

Large regional diagnostic centers as emphasis swings to predictive and preventive medicine.

A large new research effort to deal with the world's No. 1 medical problem—malaria.

New emphasis on agricultural science and nutrition to deal with hunger in various parts of the world.

Dorothy Mauer and Jocelyn Diotte demonstrate giant Maxitron, capable of delivering pin-point "doses" of disease-killing radiation. The Maxitron here is at Long Beach Memorial Hospital.

The golden age of medicine has arrived, and Long Beach, already a major medical center, is tooling up to keep pace with advances in health care.

The growth of scientific research is booming as 1966 opens. Scientific reports, many of them dealing with medicine and allied fields, are now appearing at the rate of a half million a year.

Dr. John R. Brobeck, professor of physiology at the University of Pennsylvania, says:

"Scientific knowledge is advancing so rapidly that the scientific information stored in the mind of a young physician is obsolescent the day he opens his first office."

Medical libraries are hard put to keep up with the explosion in medical knowledge.

Doctors are putting new emphasis on adapting new findings to clinical practice. Postgraduate medical education has become an "in" thing.

* * * *

MEDICARE which is expected to increase demand on hospital facilities by 20% is just five months away. New nursing homes and convalescent hospitals are springing up.

Hospitals are a major industry nowadays. They rank as one of the nation's largest employers. Total employment in 7,127 hospitals registered by the American Hospital Association has reached 1,886,839.

Nearly 1½ million persons are patients in hospitals on any given day.

Training programs for personnel are highly important today because, as one hospital administrator notes, "manpower — or more accurately, womanpower — will be the big bottleneck" to medical progress in the days, months and years to come.

Donald C. Carner, executive vice president at Memorial Hospital, says:

"We can build buildings in a few months, but years are required to train the skilled people needed to provide hospital care.

"In this regard we are fortunate in Long Beach to have three nursing programs in full swing today where just a few years ago there was but one small vocational-nurse course."

* * * *

MEMORIAL, for example, is training laboratory and X-ray technicians, conducting medical terminology courses for clerks and participating in programs to train pharmacists and physical therapists. Training programs also are in the works for nursing clerks and operating room technicians.

The hospital also conducts periodic refresher courses for registered nurses contemplating a return to active nursing practice.

Memorial also has a full-time director of training to concentrate on employe training.

Carner says hospital personnel must be given an opportunity to learn new skills and to find better ways to perform their tasks.

Carner, in visualizing the hospital of the future, sees such trends as:

Hospitals will become educational health centers as well as centers for diagnosis and treatment. They will be actively engaged in training health workers as well as helping patients to understand better the importance of protecting their health.

* * * *

TOMORROW'S hospital will offer facilities for rehabilitation, intensive care, limited care and treatment of mental illness as well as the traditional facilities for medicine, surgery, obstetrics, pediatrics, emergency room and X-ray and laboratory matters.

Eventually, paper work will be all but eliminated, thanks to the "systems" approach. Computers will play a role in medical care.

Because of economic factors, hospitals will be fewer and larger. Topnotch executives will be needed to administer these facilities to hold down costs and to improve quality of service in a rapidly changing medical world.

STUDENT LINDA MARTIN AND DR. EDWIN L. BAKER
Baker Shows Device for Checking Blood

Walter M. Oliver, administrator at Community Hospital, says he does not look forward to Medicare.

Because of Medicare, he fears hospitals may become the object of abuse.

Under the financial limitations of Medicare, Oliver does not see how it will be possible to give the same quality care at prices less than those now prevailing.

He points out that Community, being nonprofit, operates as closely to actual cost as it can and still remain solvent. Additional patients will mean additional costs for the hospital, he says.

"There is real danger of our hospitals being accused of not providing service free to the patient, in the amount that the patient himself decides he is entitled to," Oliver says.

E. H. DeKoven, administrator of Lakewood General, believes that Medicare will result in overcrowding of existing hospital facilities throughout the nation.

However, he adds:

"There are still many facets of this program that need clarification before we can determine how it will affect the operation of our hospital."

BLOOD SAMPLES are checked by Mrs. R. Tate, and student Chuck Lattenton at Long Beach Veteran's Administration Hospital.

Bandits Will Learn to Fear That Bazooka

By BILL HAZLETT

"Attention, all units . . . attention, all downtown units . . . armed robbery in progress at liquor store, Broadway and Alamitos . . ."

Darkness was beginning to slip into Long Beach, and an on-shore breeze was producing fog filters for the neon lights as the black and white police cruiser cramped the corner at Long Beach Boulevard and accelerated east on Broadway.

One of the helmeted officers thumbed his mike to life:

"Unit two at Broadway and the Boulevard . . . en route to the 211 in progress . . ."

The police dispatcher's voice continued to crackle through the receiver with details for the approaching cars:

"Robbery suspects are two men . . . late 20's . . . believed driving a 1969 sedan . . . dark over light blue . . ."

"Let's move," the officer in the passenger seat said.

Less than a minute passed before the patrol car screached to a stop near the curb in front of the liquor store just east of Alamitos Avenue.

Both doors flew open and the uniformed officers leaped out. The driver started towards the door of the liquor store just as a dark sedan, parked at the curb about 30 feet away, peeled into the traffic lane and sped east on Broadway.

"GO AHEAD, I'll mark him," the second officer said, reaching behind his seat for an odd tube-shaped weapon similar to the Army's bazooka of World War II.

Without seeming to hurry, the officer crouched beside the patrol car and lifted the weapon to his shoulder. He squeezed the firing lever and felt the jolt as the projectile left the muzzle.

The speeding car was more than a block away when the canister struck. The police officer nodded with satisfaction as he saw the bright orange blotch of dye spreading over the back of the vehicle.

"Won't be any trouble for one of the helicopter units to spot him," he thought to himself as he put the weapon back into its rack and turned his attention to the computer console in the patrol car.

Within seconds he had programmed a description of the car and driver, escape route and the fact he'd used the dye-launcher onto the computer. The master computer in records was already searching files for additional information, while at the same time passing the on-scene information to other units.

Inside the liquor store, the other officer had found one of the suspects cowering near the walk-in refrigerator —a wicked-looking knife clutched in his hand.

The suspect hardly noticed a small metal cylinder in the approaching officer's left hand. In a flash, the officer flicked his wrist and a long metal wand snaked out of the cylinder. The metal tip on the wand hit the suspect's wrist causing him to drop the knife.

Without warning the youthful bandit lunged at the police officer. The patrolman sidestepped the charge and drew a strange-looking gun. There was a sharp poof, and a small needle buried itself in the suspect's right leg. The man slumped to the floor, almost unconscious.

Back on the sidewalk with his docile prisoner, the helmeted officer turned to his partner.

"Got this one, how about the other one?"

"No problems," his partner answered, "helicopter patrol spotted the dye marker and another unit got him on the freeway entrance at 3rd Street.

"Computer central says both are ex-convicts, and they're wanted in Los Angeles and Orange County for a whole series of stickups.

"Looks like a good catch," he added.

"Yeah, it sure does," the other officer mused, as he loaded his prisoner into the rear seat of the patrol car.

THIS IS THE STORY of an armed liquor store robbery—circa 1970. The officers are Long Beach patrolmen, and the weapons used—metal wand, tranquilizer gun and dye marker—are typical of the advancements police experts expect for law enforcement in Long Beach as well as all of Southern California during the next five years.

But, along with steady progress, police agencies will face stubborn problems.

Increasing crime rates, already spiralling upward at more than twice the rate of population growth, will force cities to provide larger, better trained and better equipped police forces.

Scientific Research Key to Advancement In Medical Field

Medical libraries are hard put to keep up with the explosion in medical knowledge.

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Medical scientists are predicting these changes in the next five years or so:

An implantable artificial heart.

More successes in organ transplants.

Antiviral drugs to cope with influenza.

Portable, perhaps implantable artificial kidneys.

Vaccines to protect against German measles and hepatitis (liver inflammation).

A drug cure for leukemia.

Improved drug treatment for alcoholism.

Improved drugs for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis.

New ways to predict and prevent strokes.

Emergency surgical procedures to deal with heart attacks.

Use of a powerful light beam—the laser—to dissolve malignant tumors.

"Cold-knife" surgical operations to freeze off tonsils.

Surgical glues to hold together tiny blood vessels.

All-out research effort to find new ways to fight emphysema, a crippling lung disease.

Virtual eradication of some forms of venereal disease.

A new role for nurses—upgrading in some instances to "assistant doctors."

Genetic tinkering with cells to prevent certain birth defects.

An oral contraceptive for males.

Routine blood transfusions for unborn babies in distress.

Large regional diagnostic centers as emphasis swings to predictive and preventive medicine.

A large new research effort to deal with the world's No. 1 medical problem—malaria.

New emphasis on agricultural science and nutrition to deal with hunger in various parts of the world.

Dorothy Mauer and Jocelyn Diotte demonstrate giant Maxitron, capable of delivering pin-point "doses" of disease-killing radiation. The Maxitron here is at Long Beach Memorial Hospital.

By BEN ZINSER
Medical Science Editor

The golden age of medicine has arrived, and Long Beach, already a major medical center, is tooling up to keep pace with advances in health care.

The growth of scientific research is booming as 1966 opens. Scientific reports, many of them dealing with medicine and allied fields, are now appearing at the rate of a half million a year.

Dr. John R. Brobeck, professor of physiology at the University of Pennsylvania, says:

"Scientific knowledge is advancing so rapidly that the scientific information stored in the mind of a young physician is obsolescent the day he opens his first office."

Medical libraries are hard put to keep up with the explosion in medical knowledge.

Doctors are putting new emphasis on adapting new findings to clinical practice. Postgraduate medical education has become an "in" thing.

* * * *

MEDICARE which is expected to increase demand on hospital facilities by 20% is just five months away. New nursing homes and convalescent hospitals are springing up.

Hospitals are a major industry nowadays. They rank as one of the nation's largest employers. Total employment in 7,127 hospitals registered by the American Hospital Association has reached 1,866,839.

Nearly 1½ million persons are patients in hospitals on any given day.

Training programs for personnel are highly important today because, as one hospital administrator notes, "manpower — or more accurately, womanpower — will be the big bottleneck" to medical progress in the days, months and years to come.

Donald C. Carner, executive vice president at Memorial Hospital, says:

"We can build buildings in a few months, but years are required to train the skilled people needed to provide hospital care.

"In this regard we are fortunate in Long Beach to have three nursing programs in full swing today where just a few years ago there was but one small vocational-nurse course."

* * * *

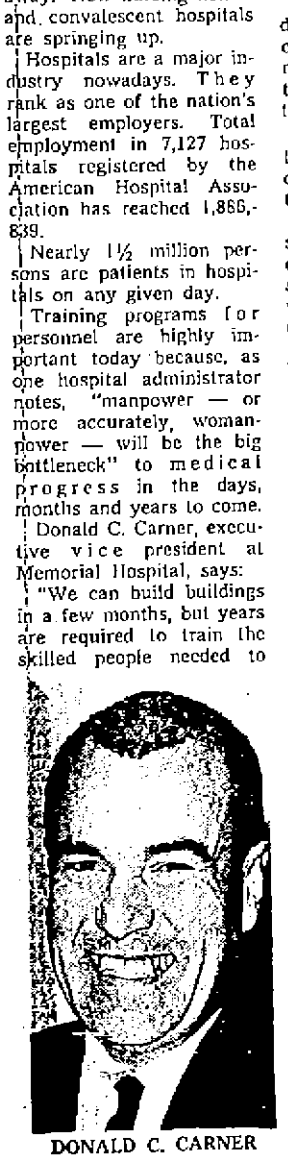
MEMORIAL, for example, is training laboratory and X-ray technicians, conducting medical terminology courses for clerks and participating in programs to train pharmacists and physical therapists. Training programs also are in the works for nursing clerks and operating room technicians.

The hospital also conducts periodic refresher courses for registered nurses contemplating a return to active nursing practice.

Memorial also has a full-time director of training to concentrate on employe training.

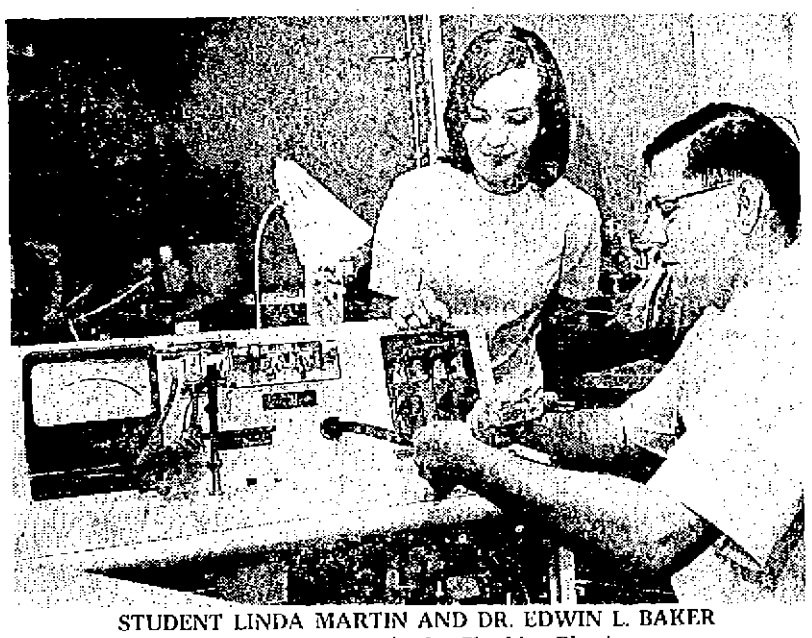
Carner says hospital personnel must be given an opportunity to learn new skills and to find better ways to perform their tasks.

Carner, in visualizing the hospital of the future, sees such trends as:



Hospitals will become educational health centers as well as centers for diagnosis and treatment. They will be actively engaged in training health workers as well as helping patients to understand better the importance of protecting their health.

* * * *



TOMORROW'S hospital will offer facilities for rehabilitation, intensive care, limited care and treatment of mental illness as well as the traditional facilities for medicine, surgery, obstetrics, pediatrics, emergency room and X-ray and laboratory matters.

Eventually, paper work will be all but eliminated, thanks to the "systems" approach. Computers will play a role in medical care.

Because of economic factors, hospitals will be fewer and larger. Topnotch executives will be needed to administer these facilities to hold down costs and to improve quality of service in a rapidly changing medical world.

DONALD C. CARNER

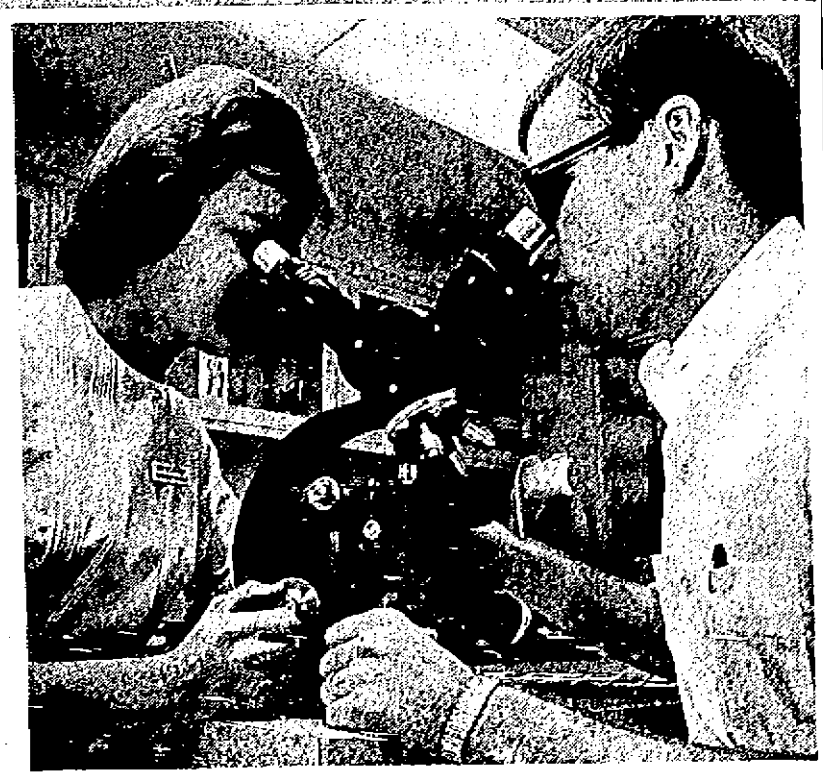
Baker Shows Device for Checking Blood

Walter M. Oliver, administrator at Community Hospital, says he does not look forward to Medicare.

Because of Medicare, he fears hospitals may become the object of abuse.

Under the financial limitations of Medicare, Oliver does not see how it will be possible to give the same quality care at prices less than those now prevailing.



He points out that Community, being nonprofit, operates as closely to actual cost as it can and still remain solvent. Additional patients will mean additional costs for the hospital, he says.

"There is real danger of our hospitals being accused of not providing service free to the patient, in the amount that the patient himself decides he is entitled to," Oliver says.

E. H. DeKoven, administrator of Lakewood General, believes that Medicare will result in overcrowding of existing hospital facilities throughout the nation.

However, he adds:

"There are still many facets of this program that need clarification before we can determine how it will affect the operation of our hospital."

BLOOD SAMPLES are checked by Mrs. R. Tate, and student Chuck Lattenton at Long Beach Veteran's Administration Hospital.

Survey Projects Statewide System of Super, Automated Libraries

By JACK O. BALDWIN

A biology student researching a term paper asks a Long Beach City librarian for an explanation of transfer of ribonucleic acid. Minutes later, the student gets the answer via teletype from a library in San Francisco.

A novelist wants to see the bridge over the James River built during the Civil War. From a library in Sacramento, via high-speed facsimile transmission equipment; comes a picture of the bridge.

Such are two innovations envisioned in a recent survey of library facilities in California.

The comprehensive report, requested by the California State Librarian proposes a state-wide network of libraries linked by a high-speed communications system for reader service.

* * * *

ONE LIBRARY CARD would be honored at any of the libraries in the system.

Prepared by Lowell A. Martin, formerly dean of the Graduate School of Library Service, Rutgers University, and by Roberta Bowler, former assistant city librarian, Los Angeles Public Library, the report was based on more than 106 field visits to individual libraries, large and small, in the state. The visits were augmented by information obtained from detailed questionnaires completed by 171 of the 213 libraries in the state.

The report claims that library facilities in the state have not kept pace with population growth and are lagging behind the rate of development of educational facilities.

Community library service must be geared to almost one-third more Californians — 25,000,000 — by 1975, the survey indicates.

* * * *

PROPOSED IS a five-level state-wide library structure.

On the community level would be the local library stocked and staffed to serve the more frequent needs of the reading public.

Minimum standards for the community library would include a collection of 50,000 volumes, to which 2,500 new titles would be added each year. The library should subscribe to 200 periodicals and should be staffed by one trained librarian for each 2,000 people in the area.

Also each community library should have one qualified juvenile librarian for each 10,000 children aged five to 13 living in the area.

These libraries would be linked to Reader Subject Centers providing resources and services for the more advanced and specialized reader.

Such centers should be located no more than a half-hour's driving time from metropolitan areas and one hour from all other areas, the report suggests.

To meet demand, 40 would be established using existing facilities wherever possible. Among Southland communities recommended for a center are Long Beach, Anaheim, Santa Ana and Hawthorne.

* * * *

SUPER LIBRARIES in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Sacramento would cap the pyramidical system. Each of the three super libraries would stock at least 1,000,000 titles, subscribe to at least 8,000 periodicals, and catalogue 2,000 educational films.

Materials at the super libraries would be available to a patron anywhere in the state on a loan basis.

The Martin-Bowler report makes reference to a similar survey of current library facilities in the Greater Los Angeles Region —Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, and San Bernardino counties.

Recommended by both reports is the establishment of a cooperative library system within the four counties with reciprocal loan privileges and a rapid delivery service for shuttle of books, films, recordings between the cooperating branches.

The Martin-Bowler report recommends its sponsor, the State Library Department, administer the state-wide system.

Authors of the state's survey claim there is a flaw in the educational structure in California — a "library lag."

"California is approximately half way to the kind of public library program that its own policy proclaims and that its people need," the report says.

The report claims the state-wide system of community libraries, Reader Subject Centers, and super-libraries could be in operation within five years.

* * * *

TO FINANCE the program would cost approximately $5 per capita as compared to a present $3.22 per capita spent on library facilities.

The authors charge the state is ". . . particularly derelict in not carrying its share of this part of the educational program."

In fact, at one point the report alleges the federal government actually provides more money for public-library service within California than does the state itself.

Growth of Disneyland Expected to Continue

"Disneyland will continue to grow, to add new things as long as there is imagination left in the world."

So said Walt Disney when the world famous amusement park opened in 1955.

Disneyland has been growing ever since.

Since the facility opened in Anaheim 11 years ago, it has doubled its number of attractions and drawn more than 50 million visitors.

When it opened, Disneyland represented an investment of $17 million. Today the figure is $54 million. It has been estimated that another $45 million will be expended during the next five years.

Under construction now are a New Orleans Square, Pirates of the Caribbean bayou ride under the square and It's a Small World—the same display that was shown at the World's Fair in New York.

Also in the works is another diaorama — this one a prehistoric display — next to the Grand Canyon diaorama on the Disneyland railroad.

Future plans, Disney says, call for the construction of a moon ride, designed with the aid of rocket expert Wernher von Braun, and a Liberty Street.

As Disneyland has grown, so has the city of Anaheim, once a sleepy agricultural community.

The city which has expanded around the 65-acre Disneyland park has grown from 22,158 persons in 1955 to more than 150,000 today.

City officials credit Disneyland with attracting hundreds of new industries and millions of free spending tourists to Anaheim.

JULY 4TH FUN

When Disneyland first opened, there were only a few motels in Anaheim. Today there are more than 100 motels and hotels.

During the summer months, Disneyland employs a peak number of 5,000 employes and has an annual payroll of $7 million. Taxes from the park add more than $4 million to the Anaheim city coffers.

And, a report last year by Economic Research Associates disclosed that the amusement park has attracted more than $560 million to the area.

More than $61 million is spent in the community each year as a result of Disneyland, the report said.

SERVING CALIFORNIA FOR OVER 46 YEARS

Since 1919 McMahan's have been serving the people of California. From a small store started over 46 years ago, McMahan's have grown to be the largest group of independently owned furniture stores in the world. Over 120 stores now display nationally advertised, name brand furniture, carpet and appliances at budget prices. From the early beginning, McMahan's have carried their own accounts . . . No bank or finance company is ever involved and customers deal only with McMahan's from start to finish. The huge carload buying power means quality merchandise, at lower prices, and terms to fit any budget. McMahan's have merchandise buyers who are constantly searching the markets at New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco, High Point and Dallas for new items that will measure up to the rigid specifications required to guarantee satisfaction, quality and service . . . At McMahan's, a satisfied customer is our most important asset.

Four of McMahan's finest stores are in Long Beach and adjacent communities. Prices, merchandise and policy are the same at all four. We invite you to patronize the one nearest to you.

Bandits Will Learn to Fear That Bazooka

By BILL HAZLETT

"Attention, all units . . . attention, all downtown units . . . armed robbery in progress at liquor store, Broadway and Alamitos . . ."

Darkness was beginning to slip into Long Beach, and an on-shore breeze was producing fog filters for the neon lights as the black and white police cruiser cramped the corner at Long Beach Boulevard and accelerated east on Broadway.

One of the helmeted officers thumbed his mike to life:

"Unit two at Broadway and the Boulevard . . . en route to the 211 in progress . . ."

The police dispatcher's voice continued to crackle through the receiver with details for the approaching cars:

"Robbery suspects are two men . . . late 20's . . . believed driving a 1969 sedan . . . dark over light blue . . ."

"Let's move," the officer in the passenger seat said.

Less than a minute passed before the patrol car screached to a stop near the curb in front of the liquor store just east of Alamitos Avenue.

Both doors flew open and the uniformed officers leaped out. The driver started towards the door of the liquor store just as a dark sedan, parked at the curb about 30 feet away, peeled into the traffic lane and sped east on Broadway.

"GO AHEAD, I'll mark him," the second officer said, reaching behind his seat for an odd tube-shaped weapon similar to the Army's bazooka of World War II.

Without seeming to hurry, the officer crouched beside the patrol car and lifted the weapon to his shoulder. He squeezed the firing lever and felt the jolt as the projectile left the muzzle.

The speeding car was more than a block away when the cannister struck. The police officer nodded with satisfaction as he saw the bright orange blotch of dye spreading over the back of the vehicle.

"Won't be any trouble for one of the helicopter units to spot him," he thought to himself as he put the weapon back into its rack and turned his attention to the computer console in the patrol car.

Within seconds he had programmed a description of the car and driver, escape route and the fact he'd used the dye-launcher onto the computer. The master computer in records was already searching files for additional information, while at the same time passing the on-scene information to other units.

Inside the liquor store, the other officer had found one of the suspects cowering near the walk-in refrigerator —a wicked-looking knife clutched in his hand.

The suspect hardly noticed a small metal cylinder in the approaching officer's left hand. In a flash, the officer flicked his wrist and a long metal wand snaked out of the cylinder. The metal tip on the wand hit the suspect's wrist causing him to drop the knife.

Without warning the youthful bandit lunged at the police officer. The patrolman sidestepped the charge and drew a strange-looking gun. There was a sharp poof, and a small needle buried itself in the suspect's right leg. The man slumped to the floor, almost unconscious.

Back on the sidewalk with his docile prisoner, the helmeted officer turned to his partner.

"Got this one, how about the other one?"

"No problems," his partner answered, "helicopter patrol spotted the dye marker and another unit got him on the freeway entrance at 3rd Street.

"Computer central says both are ex-convicts, and they're wanted in Los Angeles and Orange County for a whole series of stickups.

"Looks like a good catch," he added.

"Yeah, it sure does," the other officer mused, as he loaded his prisoner into the rear seat of the patrol car.

THIS IS THE STORY of an armed liquor store robbery—circa 1970. The officers are Long Beach patrolmen, and the weapons used—metal wand, tranquilizer gun and dye marker—are typical of the advancements police experts expect for law enforcement in Long Beach as well as all of Southern California during the next five years.

But, along with steady progress, police agencies will face stubborn problems.

Increasing crime rates, already spiralling upward at more than twice the rate of population growth, will force cities to provide larger, better trained and better equipped police forces.

Battle Cry Sounds for Fashion '70

By Mary Ellis Carlton

WHITE boots of Courreges fame have taken a definite step forward in the fashion world for those above-the-knee styles.

If you think the world is moving too fast, take a look at fashion. It's going like '60!

Never has a decade wrought so many changes in the female wardrobe. Never has the American woman had so much freedom in dress . . . and, certainly, never so much exposure.

Trade papers, fashion magazines and the garment industry are calling it the great Fashion Revolution.

Who started it?

Many say it was the British—with their Mods, Rockers, Beatles (especially!), Knacks and Darlings. Others say it was Paris with its Discotheque and Courreges, who shook the fashion world with his welded, architectural shapes and short-short skirts. He also is the one who started that stampede of white boot around the world.

But many believe the revolution REALLY got going with liberation of the bosom by California's Rudi Gernreich, whose topless swimsuits and no-bra bra unfettered a new Natural Woman.

On the beach it went from bare to barest. The see-through look moved into separates with sheer skirts and peek-a-boo crochet "coverups" worn over a body stocking or absolutely nothing.

YOUTH kick is still one . . . skirts above the knees, flurry of frills and ruffles in Baby Doll style for today's New Generation.

BAREST of bare for the beach . . . two-piece bikini with fitting bias bound soft bra and pleated trunk and pert bow at the back will give Girl Watchers a special treat.

Youth, the youth kick, the youth quake . . . all are battle cries in today's going army of fashion reactionaries.

Skirts for spring '66 have climbed well above the knee, many waistlines have dropped to hip level. Sexy long legs demand new stocking lengths . . . demand more feminine shoes that walk on the lowest heels since Baby Jane.

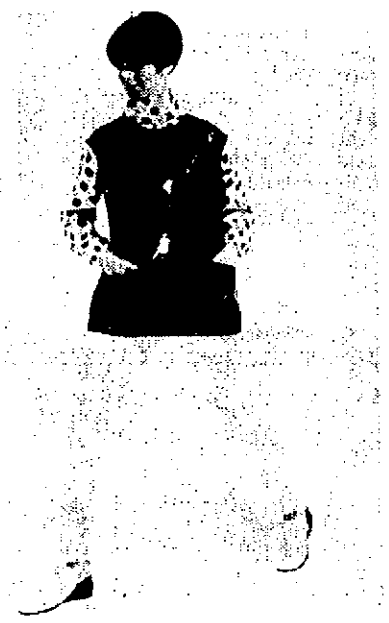
But the American woman was—and is—ready to demonstrate her fashion independence.

She has revolted against the gussied, stereotyped clothes of just a few years ago . . . maybe because they seemed more an expression of the designer in his ivory tower than of the woman herself.

Besides, yesterday's clothes with their wallpaper fit weren't free and young enough for today's New Generation and jet paced space age.

Comfort, freedom and individuality are the undercurrents of today's changing world of fashion.

It's the new age of agelessness. The bikini, worn by all ages, is a familiar sight at the beach . . . little girl dresses, baby bonnets and Baby Jane shoes are new looks for girls from six to sixty this spring.



Skirts are the shortest in history.

History records that hemlines go up or down with the economy.

Can we stand any more prosperity?

SUBSWEATER with matching panties (left) in skintone tricot reflects belief that foundation garments should be used as a second skin . . . intended for those fashions that have wallpaper fit.

LOOK OF TOMORROW by Rudi Gernreich, who has an "in" for far-out fashions. Tunic and pants ensemble is of glistening vinyl in dynamic stratospheric colors.

PROPOSED IS a five-level state-wide library structure.

On the community level would be the local library stocked and staffed to serve the more frequent needs of the reading public.

Minimum standards for the community library would include a collection of 50,000 volumes, to which 2,500 new titles would be added each year. The library should subscribe to 200 periodicals and should be staffed by one trained librarian for each 2,000 people in the area.

Also each community library should have one qualified juvenile librarian for each 10,000 children aged five to 13 living in the area.

These libraries would be linked to Reader Subject Centers providing resources and services for the more advanced and specialized reader.

Such centers should be located no more than a half-hour's driving time from metropolitan areas and one hour from all other areas, the report suggests.

To meet demand, 40 would be established using existing facilities wherever possible. Among Southland communities recommended for a center are Long Beach, Anaheim, Santa Ana and Hawthorne.

* * * *

SUPER LIBRARIES in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Sacramento would cap the pyramidical system. Each of the three super libraries would stock at least 1,000,000 titles, subscribe to at least 8,000 periodicals, and catalogue 2,000 educational films.

Materials at the super libraries would be available to a patron anywhere in the state on a loan basis.

The Martin-Bowler report makes reference to a similar survey of current library facilities in the Greater Los Angeles Region —Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, and San Bernardino counties.

Recommended by both reports is the establishment of a cooperative library system within the four counties with reciprocal loan privileges and a rapid delivery service for shuttle of books, films, recordings between the cooperating branches.

The Martin-Bowler report recommends its sponsor, the State Library Department, administer the state-wide system.

Authors of the state's survey claim there is a flaw in the educational structure in California — a "library lag."

"California is approximately half way to the kind of public library program that its own policy proclaims and that its people need," the report says.

The report claims the state-wide system of community libraries, Reader Subject Centers, and super-libraries could be in operation within five years.

* * * *

TO FINANCE the program would cost approximately $5 per capita as compared to a present $3.22 per capita spent on library facilities.

The authors charge the state is ". . . particularly derelict in not carrying its share of this part of the educational program."

In fact, at one point the report alleges the federal government actually provides more money for public-library service within California than does the state itself.

Growth of Disneyland Expected to Continue

"Disneyland will continue to grow, to add new things as long as there is imagination left in the world."

So said Walt Disney when the world famous amusement park opened in 1955.

Disneyland has been growing ever since.

Since the facility opened in Anaheim 11 years ago, it has doubled its number of attractions and drawn more than 50 million visitors.

When it opened, Disneyland, represented an investment of $17 million. Today the figure is $54 million. It has been estimated that another $45 million will be expended during the next five years.

Under construction now are a New Orleans Square, Pirates of the Caribbean bayou ride under the square and It's a Small World—the same display that was shown at the World's Fair in New York.

Also in the works is another diaorama — this one a prehistoric display — next to the Grand Canyon diaorama on the Disneyland railroad.

Future plans, Disney says, call for the construction of a moon ride, designed with the aid of rocket expert Wernher von Braun, and a Liberty Street.

As Disneyland has grown, so has the city of Anaheim, once a sleepy agricultural community.

The city which has expanded around the 65-acre Disneyland park has grown from 22,158 persons in 1955 to more than 150,000 today.

City officials credit Disneyland with attracting hundreds of new industries and millions of free spending tourists to Anaheim.

JULY 4TH FUN

When Disneyland first opened, there were only a few motels in Anaheim. Today there are more than 100 motels and hotels.

During the summer months, Disneyland employs a peak number of 5,000 employes and has an annual payroll of $7 million. Taxes from the park add more than $4 million to the Anaheim city coffers.

And, a report last year by Economic Research Associates disclosed that the amusement park has attracted more than $560 million to the area.

More than $61 million is spent in the community each year as a result of Disneyland, the report said.

SERVING CALIFORNIA FOR OVER 46 YEARS

Since 1919 McMahan's have been serving the people of California. From a small store started over 46 years ago, McMahan's have grown to be the largest group of independently owned furniture stores in the world. Over 120 stores now display nationally advertised, name brand furniture, carpet and appliances at budget prices. From the early beginning, McMahan's have carried their own accounts . . . No bank or finance company is ever involved and customers deal only with McMahan's from start to finish. The huge carload buying power means quality merchandise, at lower prices, and terms to fit any budget. McMahan's have merchandise buyers who are constantly searching the markets at New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco, High Point and Dallas for new items that will measure up to the rigid specifications required to guarantee satisfaction, quality and service . . . At McMahan's, a satisfied customer is our most important asset.

Four of McMahan's finest stores are in Long Beach and adjacent communities. Prices, merchandise and policy are the same at all four. We invite you to patronize the one nearest to you.

School District Faces 'Revolution'

By BOB WILCOX
Education Editor

An unusual sight greeted the Long Beach superintendent of schools when he stepped ashore on Catalina Island recently to inspect the most far-flung of his 77 seats of learning.

"I noted," recalls W. Odie Wright, "that some areas of the newly grassed baseball field at Avalon School appeared to have been deliberately dug up.

"I was told that during the dry spring wild hogs from the mountains dig their way under the fence to eat the grass—roots and all.

"I'm sure that other large school districts have plenty of problems—but I doubt that New York City, Philadelphia or Minneapolis have an island where wild hogs come out of the hills at night and chew up athletic fields."

* * * *

BUT WRIGHT has seen nothing like the problems that face his 100,000-student Long Beach Unified School District in the next half decade.

It's not new that education funds will continue to lag behind the explosion of knowledge. Or that good teachers will remain in critically short supply.

Or that more learning—and academic pressures—will continue to be crammed into the short school day.

But facing one of Long Beach's largest industries—with more than $50 million in expenses each year—is a revolutionary concept that would have startled even John Dewey.

The public schools figuratively are going straight into the homes to take over jobs that parents fail to do. The prospect is staggering.

"The public school," says Wright, "is being asked to accept responsibility for all phases of child development—not the intellectual alone.

"We can no longer teach or supervise or counsel or administer in the old secure ways we have followed for decades. (We) are assuming many responsibilities formerly discharged by the home.

* * * *

"THIS MEANS knowing the inside of the poorest home in the community. It means that a principal and the staff of the school must not only know their school but they must know how the people of their district live.

"If a pupil comes to school hungry and in no condition to learn, society will expect more from the school than the simple statement: 'It's not our responsibility if these parents don't feed their children.'"

The school district plunged eagerly—but with some early misgivings—into the federal Head Start program designed to prepare underprivileged preschoolers mentally and physically for kindergarten.

But after next month the Long Beach public schools will never be quite the same.

Bolstered by $2 million in federal funds, the schools will say simply:

"If you're from a low-income area of town and between the ages of 4 and 18, we'll give you special classes all the way through high school if you need them. In addition, we'll spend all the time necessary to counsel you. As a final touch, we'll help you with your health problems.

* * * *

THROW THIS revolutionary job on top of meeting the "knowledge explosion," automation and the college "war baby" boom. Only then some glimmer emerges of the seemingly impossible task facing the public schools.

W. ODIE WRIGHT

Teaching, itself, is undergoing painful changes. The teacher, a traditional loner, is being increasingly surrounded by specialists—counselors, psychologists, social workers. Then team instruction is on the horizon.

The teacher is being urged to experiment—but fruitfully. "We will be looking," says Wright, "for people with unusual capability for dreaming dreams while keeping their feet on the ground."

The schools themselves, once fairly aloof in their special preserve, are being drawn more and more into the important but time-consuming job of actively cooperating with all community agencies dealing with children and youth.

But vocational education—a highfalutin term for job preparation—would by itself be enough to keep the schools busy into the indefinite future.

With automation here, Wright says that the schools—particularly junior colleges and high schools—are being asked "to concern themselves more with the demands of the world our students will be entering."

* * * *

VERNON A. HINZE, assistant superintendent who heads the high schools, predicts flatly that $5 to $10 million — partially federal money—will be spent here eventually on vocational education facilities.

"THE PUBLIC SCHOOL IS BEING ASKED TO ACCEPT ALL PHASES OF CHILD DEVELOPMENT . . ."

With this prospect ahead, Wiley D. Garner, president of Long Beach City College, emphasizes the need for knowledge beyond that of job training.

His college, he declares, will stress the close tie-in "between living and making a living."

In the next five years, Garner predicts:

"This college will extend the horizons of educational services beyond the campus to all people in this district who want to learn, to advance, to improve their skills or acquire new skills in a fast-changing world."

Reduction of class size concerns George L. Geiger, assistant superintendent who heads the 55 Long Beach grade schools. However he sees another problem.

While he favors the many recent grade school innovations such as foreign language, he thinks the idea can be carried too far.

* * * *

"EXCESSIVE organization and academic pressures," he warns, "could cause the elementary school to lose its unique character and become a pale copy of the upper-level schools."

School financing, which caused Supt. Wright grave concern two years ago, is still a source of anxiety despite recent infusions of additional state help.

The superintendent is alarmed as the state blithely orders expensive new programs and tells the school districts to find the money somehow.

And Francis Laufenberg, assistant superintendent and school business manager, warns that the future financial picture is "blurred by a foreground haze of local, state and national politics."

Douglas Aircraft, a vital source of school revenue, is affected by the ups and downs of the aerospace industry. However, says Laufenberg, the trend is currently on the upgrade because of recent large aircraft orders.

But three main threats loom: the proposed elimination of business inventories as a property tax source, a trend toward reduction of public utility assessments; and, the possible loss of federal funds given the Long Beach schools because of the area's tax-exempt military installations.

But with new construction constantly creating a larger tax base and the prospect of enrollment remaining steady, Laufenberg feels that the school district can continue to maintain a low tax rate in comparison with other large school districts.

Supt. Wright says there are two things certain about the future—Catalina wild hogs notwithstanding. It will be more difficult than the past—and change will come swiftly.

Recently, the superintendent warned the Long Beach teaching staff:

"A teacher who goes to sleep today can wake up 10 years from now as startled at the schools of 1975 as Rip Van Winkle was with the political changes of the Revolutionary days."

Westminster

R. A. CASSIDY
City Administrator

In the 1960 census Westminster population stood at 25,750.

Since 1960 our population has doubled, standing now at 50,500.

Growth will come much slower in the next half-decade, with a population of 66,600 projected for 1970.

But the next half-decade will see the city advancing in many areas. In this period Westminster expects to build a $4 million city-county civic center on a 20-acre site acquired last year for this purpose on Westminster Avenue just east of Beach Boulevard.

Hawaiian Gardens

By C. ROBERT LEE
Mayor of Hawaiian Gardens

Hawaiian Gardens, the Southwest area's newest and smallest community, looks forward to substantial population growth in the next five years.

In April of 1965 a State Department of Finance census determined we had 7,975 residents in thhe .87 of a square mile area of the city.

Through zoning, requested by the people of the community, permitting multiple residential development on nearly all of the residential property in the city, our population could double, or even triple the current figures in the next five to ten years.

To backstop this population, the city has rezoned a large portion of the remaining land within the city, which formerly was agricultural, for heavy commercial development.

By July 1, streets lights will be provided throughout the city. At present, the business district is covered by adequate street lighting.

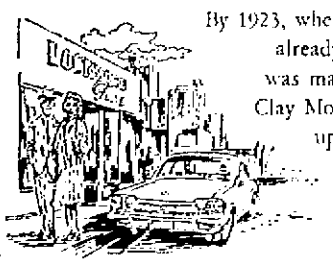
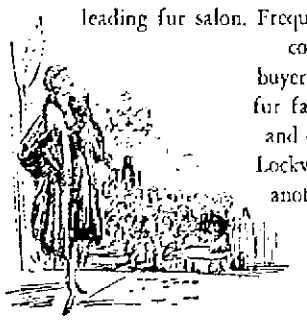
LLOYD'S OF LONG BEACH ATLANTIC AT CARSON



Almost Half A Century and Still Growing...

Yes, it was 1917 — just before World War I — when J. L. Lockwood opened his fur and taxidermy shop on Pine Avenue, across the street from the present location of the Independent, Press-Telegram. The shop was small, but it almost immediately established a reputation for fine quality and skilled, careful workmanship.



Fur Specialists in Downtown Long Beach...

By 1923, when Clay Morrow joined the firm, Lockwood's was already outgrowing its quarters. In 1928, the move was made to its present location at 711 Pine Avenue. Clay Morrow became sole owner of Lockwood's in 1936, upon the retirement of J. L. Lockwood. In 1946 when Keith Morrow, Clay's son, joined the firm, the facilities were again expanded, doubling its size and adding a 10,000-coat cold storage vault on the premises.

Ever Setting the Pace in Fur Styles...

Under the supervision and present ownership of Keith Morrow, the firm has continued to maintain and expand its position as Long Beach's leading fur salon. Frequent trips to New York's leading fur stylists and constant communication with its own resident buyer have kept Lockwood's abreast of the latest in fur fashions, assuring its clientele the finest in styling and quality. The same original aims and concepts of Lockwood's integrity and growth will be maintained another half century the same as this past 50 years.

Battle Cry Sounds for Fashion '70

WHITE boots of Courreges fame have taken a definite step forward in the fashion world for those above-the-knee styles.

By Mary Ellis Carlton

If you think the world is moving too fast, take a look at fashion. It's going like '60!

Never has a decade wrought so many changes in the female wardrobe. Never has the American woman had so much freedom in dress . . . and, certainly, never so much exposure.

Trade papers, fashion magazines and the garment industry are calling it the great Fashion Revolution.

Who started it?

Many say it was the British—with their Mods, Rockers, Beatles (especially!), Knacks and Darlings. Others say it was Paris with its Discotheque and Courreges, who shook the fashion world with his welded, architectural shapes and short-short skirts. He also is the one who started that stampede of white boot around the world.

But many believe the revolution REALLY got going with liberation of the bosom by California's Rudi Gernreich, whose topless swimsuits and no-bra bra unfettered a new Natural Woman.

On the beach it went from bare to barest. The see-through look moved into separates with sheer skirts and peek-a-boo crochet "coverups" worn over a body stocking or absolutely nothing.

YOUTH kick is still one . . . skirts above the knees, flurry of frills and ruffles in Baby Doll style for today's New Generation.

BAREST of bare for the beach . . . two-piece bikini with fitting bias bound soft bra and pleated trunk and pert bow at the back will give Girl Watchers a special treat.

SUBSWEATER with matching panties (left) in skintone tricot reflects belief that foundation garments should be used as a second skin . . . intended for those fashions that have wallpaper fit.

LOOK OF TOMORROW by Rudi Gernreich, who has an "in" for far-out fashions. Tunic and pants ensemble is of glistening vinyl in dynamic stratospheric colors.

Youth, the youth kick, the youth quake . . . all are battle cries in today's going army of fashion reactionaries.

Skirts for spring '66 have climbed well above the knee, many waistlines have dropped to hip level. Sexy long legs demand new stocking lengths . . . demand more feminine shoes that walk on the lowest heels since Baby Jane.

But the American woman was—and is—ready to demonstrate her fashion independence.

She has revolted against the gussied, stereotyped clothes of just a few years ago . . . maybe because they seemed more an expression of the designer in his ivory tower than of the woman herself.

Besides, yesterday's clothes with their wallpaper fit weren't free and young enough for today's New Generation and jet paced space age.

Comfort, freedom and individuality are the undercurrents of today's changing world of fashion.

It's the new age of agelessness. The bikini, worn by all ages, is a familiar sight at the beach . . . little girl dresses, baby bonnets and Baby Jane shoes are new looks for girls from six to sixty this spring.

Skirts are the shortest in history.

History records that hemlines go up or down with the economy.

Can we stand any more prosperity?

Scientists Planning to Predict Earthquakes

TOPOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF CALIFORNIA SHOWING MAJOR FAULT LINES

By FRANK PRESS, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; HUGO BENIOFF, California Institute of Technology (Caltech), retired; ROBERT A. FROSCH, Advanced Research Projects Agency; DAVID T. GRIGGS, University of California (UC), Los Angeles; JOHN HANDIN, Shell Development Co.; ROY E. HANSON, National Science Foundation; HARRY H. HESS, Princeton; GEORGE W. HOUSENER, Caltech; WALTER H. MUNK, (UC) San Diego; EGON OROWAN, MIT; LOUIS C. PAKISER, JR. U.S. Geological Survey; GEORGE SUTTON, Columbia University; and DON TOCHER, U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

We may expect a great earthquake, one with magnitude exceeding 8, about once a year. In a thickly populated area the destructiveness of such an event may be measured by the loss of thousands, if not tens of thousands, of lives and by damage which can approach a billion dollars.

Unlike other natural catastrophes such as storms, floods, or volcanic eruptions, earthquakes occur without recognizable warnings.

On the other hand, earthquake belts are well-defined, and precautions in the form of special building codes can, in principle, be taken. Except for coast lines near the earthquake site, tidal-wave warnings can be issued in sufficient time to prevent major loss of life.

In recent years, earth scientists have been intrigued by the possibility that some measure of earthquake prediction can eventually be achieved.

This relatively optimistic view is due to progress of three kinds. First, instruments can now monitor microearthquakes, exceedingly small strains, tilts, and fluctuations in magnetic and gravitational fields. Second, laboratory studies of fracture and creep of rocks under pressures and temperatures corresponding to conditions in the earth's crust and outer mantle have revealed about three possible fracture mechanisms that may be significant for the earthquake problem. Finally, there is some evidence, as yet not fully substantiated, that unusual strain and tilt changes as well as changes of the frequency of occurrence of microearthquakes may have preceded destructive earthquakes by hours or days.

Recently a group of distinguished Japanese scientists proposed a 10-year program of research in earthquake prediction to their government. In view of the uncertainty about the origin of earthquake-generating stresses and the absence of a verified theory for the mechanism of earthquakes, the Japanese chose a semi-empirical approach involving extensive instrumentation of Japan with sensitive seismographs, tiltmeters, strain meters, magnetometers, and tide gages, together with extensive periodic triangulation and leveling.

What the Japanese hope to find is a correlation between the data obtained from these observations and the occurrence of earthquakes.

Following the great Alaskan earthquake of 1964, a panel was convened by Dr. Donald Hornig, Director of the Office of Science and Technology, for the purpose of studying the opportunities for research in earthquake prediction. This document represents the report of the panel.

A 10-year program of research is recommended which parallels the Japanese proposal to a certain extent, and goes beyond it in many ways.

* * * *

THE PROGRAM CALLS for the development of a new generation of instruments for monitoring earthquake faults and for the installation and operation of these instruments in California and Alaska. Extensive geological and geophysical surveys of fault zones are proposed. Laboratory and theoretical studies of mechanisms of fracture and creep of rocks under realistic pressures and temperatures are recommended. Research in prediction theory as applied to geophysical phenomena is proposed. A strong recommendation is made for augmented research in earthquake engineering. Progress in earthquake engineering can lead to significant reductions in casualties and economic loss from destructive earthquakes. . . .

The level of support required to implement this 10-year program is estimated at $137 million. . . .

* * * *

IT IS POSSIBLE that some degree of earthquake forecasting can be achieved with imperfect understanding of the physical mechanism (the prediction of weather, tides, and volcanic eruptions, are examples). For this reason a major program of "instrumenting" seismic belts is an essential feature of our recommended program. Absolute stress would be determined and regional and local strains, tilts, microseismicity (that is, the statistics of the numerous small earthquakes), and gravitational and magnetic fields would be monitored continuously at many locations in the seismic belt. Coherence between variations in these processes would be examined together with possible correlation with the occurrence of larger earthquakes. There is enough experience to indicate that one or more of these techniques could be significant in a prediction scheme. . . .

All major earthquakes of the past 100 years in the California-Nevada region — those with Richter magnitudes greater than 7—have occurred in a Y-shaped zone that extends southeast from San Francisco to the Mexican border, with a branch extending north from the Mojave Desert to near the northern border of Nevada (Figure 2).

This Y-shaped zone includes such major faults or fault zones as the San Andreas, Garlock, White Wolf, and Owens Valley in California, and Dixie Valley in Nevada. To gain a clearer insight into the present and possible future behavior of these and other important fault systems, it is necessary to obtain a more nearly complete understanding of the three-dimensional structure and past behavior of the major geologic features within the zone. To do this, an integrated geophysical and geological study of the Y-shaped zone of earthquake faults is pro-ET quake faults is proposed. . . .

* * * *

INSTRUMENTING earthquake fault zones . . . (would be) directed primarily at monitoring with the greatest achievable sensitivity all possible indicators foretelling the occurrence of earthquakes.

It represents an empirical approach in the absence of a confirmed theory for the mechanism of earthquakes. On the other hand, all phenomena reported (by reputable scientists) to have preceded earthquakes will be checked. The pre-earthquake activity predicted by the main theories of the earthquake mechanism will be examined.

The level of stress will be monitored in seismic zones against the eventuality that the stress history is pertinent to the occurrence of an

Editor's Note: Warning you of the precise day and hour that the earth underfoot is likely to tremble catastrophically intrigues not only mystics and star gazers.

Scientists who today don't even know for sure what causes earthquakes nonetheless think one day they may be able to predict them.

A report of 14 experts to the Federal Office of Science and Technology, reprinted here in condensed form, proposes a 10-year, $137-million effort to develop the knowledge and techniques to predict earthquakes..

Getting such an effort underway soon could be crucial. Noted seismologist Dr. Charles Richter indicates a major earthquake is overdue in Southern California. Great earthquakes tend to occur in this area every 100 years, he observes, and the last really big one was in 1857. Long Beach's 50-second shock in 1933, which killed 100 people and caused more than $50 million in damage to the city, may have been a disastrous tremblor but it doesn't count as a great one.

In the absence of such a scientific effort as proposed by the panel, crystal ball gazers have had a heyday playing on the public's hysteric fear of quakes. When two women—one of them the Mrs. Jean Dixon of Washington, D.C., who claims to have predicted President Kennedy's assassination—warned that an upheavel would level Santa Barbara last July, the county's civil defense director ordered his entire organization to alert status for two weeks.

How to get a doctor in an emergency

Who knows when sudden illness or an accident may strike and you need a doctor in a hurry?

Your best assurance of getting quick and adequate medical care in an emergency is to select a family doctor before you need him. Critical minutes may slip by if you don't know whom to call . . . where to call . . . when every moment counts.

A family doctor of your own can give you the kind of protective care you expect from a competent physician and a trusted friend. If he is not in his office, his telephone answering service knows where to reach him immediately; or, if he is out of the city, he arranges with another physician to serve his patients' needs in his absence. So keep your doctor's phone number where every member of your family can find it.

But if you are a stranger in the city and need immediate medical attention, you can contact a doctor quickly by calling — 432-3971 This is a public service message by:

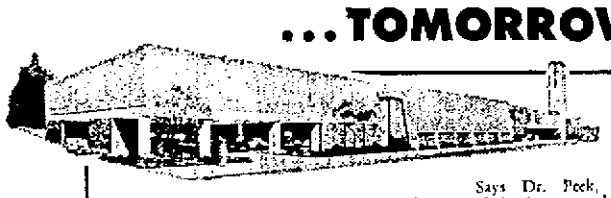
COMMEMORATING 50 YEARS IN LONG BEACH



We're proud of our achievements since 1916—but resting on our laurels has never been a Davis tradition. It's the next 50 years we're most interested in . . . and especially 1966.

We're going to make our Golden Year one to remember. One you'll remember too if you're looking for fine furniture at attractive prices. You'll shop from names like Henredon, Drexel, Heritage and Karastan . . . you'll have a wider variety to choose from and the assistance of competent decorators. We're planning a lot of pleasant surprises for 1966 . . . it's going to be a Big Year at Davis'.

1500 TODAY ? ...TOMORROW ?

Take a church with such a successful Sunday School program that regular weekly attendance is the largest in town, 1,500, and to accommodate that many the school has to overflow into three neighborhood garages offered by friends.

You might well imagine that such a church would dream of a tremendous new educational building, perhaps with as many as 67 more classrooms, all air conditioned —a beautiful edifice planned to flow from and complement the present church.

That is exactly what they started building this week at North Long Beach Brethren Church, which is located at 6095 Orange Ave.

The 52,609-square-foot addition will cost an estimated $435,000. In addition to the classrooms it will provide school assembly areas, a chapel seating 225, a fellowship hall seating 500, and adjoining kitchen.

North Long Beach Brethren was organized in 1926. When Dr. George O. Peek became pastor in 1948, membership was 150 and Sunday School averaged twice as many, 300.

Today, the church membership has grown to 1,400, just 100 short of the average Sunday School attendance.

"Our church has always emphasized the importance of the Sunday School," says Dr. Peek. "We have always seen a strong school program as a means of reaching the entire family."

At least 35% of the regular school attendees are adults, reflecting the wisdom of this approach.

Reasons for the outstanding success of the school program?

Says Dr. Peek, strong staff, closely graded classes, and above all, emphasis on the Bible.

"The Bible is the center and core of the curriculum. This comes from the belief of the church that the Bible is the divinely inspired word of God and is sufficient in itself to guide man in matters of faith and morals. This philosophy holds that the "Old Book" has the answers to all the problems of a new society."

Frank Coleman is school superintendent, with Miss Alberta Hanson director of Christian Education. They guide a staff of 150 teachers and department superintendents, more than some pretty good-sized towns can boast for education.

Given this emphasis on Sunday School as the undergirding of a church and source of its growth, there is nothing at all "lopsided" in the blueprint for an education structure which will physically dominate the total church plant.

Not that the "old" church building is small! Completed in 1958 as the first element in the master plan, it has a handsome sanctuary seating 1,100, plus 10 classrooms and administration offices.

Four buildings dating back to 1929, spread over a block and a half and used for education and social purposes, will be demolished and the space used for parking. The new unit will thus complete and pull together North Long Beach Brethren.

Architect is Arthur V. Hoyer, AIA, of Long Beach, a member of the church. Contractor is M. A. Baker of Downey. Estimated time for completion is eight months. There's apt to be quite a dedication in North Long Beach sometime in July, 1966.

School District Faces 'Revolution'

By BOB WILCOX
Education Editor

An unusual sight greeted the Long Beach superintendent of schools when he stepped ashore on Catalina Island recently to inspect the most far-flung of his 77 seats of learning.

"I noted," recalls W. Odie Wright, "that some areas of the newly grassed baseball field at Avalon School appeared to have been deliberately dug up.

"I was told that during the dry spring wild hogs from the mountains dig their way under the fence to eat the grass—roots and all.

"I'm sure that other large school districts have plenty of problems—but I doubt that New York City, Philadelphia or Minneapolis have an island where wild hogs come out of the hills at night and chew up athletic fields."

* * * *

BUT WRIGHT has seen nothing like the problems that face his 100,000-student Long Beach Unified School District in the next half decade.

It's not new that education funds will continue to lag behind the explosion of knowledge. Or that good teachers will remain in critically short supply.

Or that more learning—and academic pressures—will continue to be crammed into the short school day.

But facing one of Long Beach's largest industries—with more than $50 million in expenses each year—is a revolutionary concept that would have startled even John Dewey.

The public schools figuratively are going straight into the homes to take over jobs that parents fail to do. The prospect is staggering.

"The public school," says Wright, "is being asked to accept responsibility for all phases of child development—not the intellectual alone.

"We can no longer teach or supervise or counsel or administer in the old secure ways we have followed for decades. (We) are assuming many responsibilities formerly discharged by the home.

* * * *

'THIS MEANS knowing the inside of the poorest home in the community. It means that a principal and the staff of the school must not only know their school but they must know how the people of their district live.

"If a pupil comes to school hungry and in no condition to learn, society will expect more from the school than the simple statement: 'It's not our responsibility if these parents don't feed their children.'"

The school district plunged eagerly—but with some early misgivings—into the federal Head Start program designed to prepare underprivileged preschoolers mentally and physically for kindergarten.

But after next month the Long Beach public schools will never be quite the same.

Bolstered by $2 million in federal funds, the schools will say simply:

"If you're from a low-income area of town and between the ages of 4 and 18, we'll give you special classes all the way through high school if you need them. In addition, we'll spend all the time necessary to counsel you. As a final touch, we'll help you with your health problems.

* * * *

THROW THIS revolutionary job on top of meeting the "knowledge explosion," automation and the college "war baby" boom. Only then some glimmer emerges of the seemingly impossible task facing the public schools.

W. ODIE WRIGHT

Teaching, itself, is undergoing painful changes. The teacher, a traditional loner, is being increasingly surrounded by specialists—counselors, psychologists, social workers. Then team instruction is on the horizon.

The teacher is being urged to experiment—but fruitfully. "We will be looking," says Wright, "for people with unusual capability for dreaming dreams while keeping their feet on the ground."

The schools themselves, once fairly aloof in their special preserve, are being drawn more and more into the important but time-consuming job of actively cooperating with all community agencies dealing with children and youth.

But vocational education—a highfalutin term for job preparation—would by itself be enough to keep the schools busy into the indefinite future.

With automation here, Wright says that the schools—particularly junior colleges and high schools—are being asked "to concern themselves more with the demands of the world our students will be entering."

* * * *

VERNON A. HINZE, assistant superintendent who heads the high schools, predicts flatly that $5 to $10 million — partially federal money—will be spent here eventually on vocational education facilities.

"THE PUBLIC SCHOOL IS BEING ASKED TO ACCEPT ALL PHASES OF CHILD DEVELOPMENT . . ."

With this prospect ahead, Wiley D. Garner, president of Long Beach City College, emphasizes the need for knowledge beyond that of job training.

His college, he declares, will stress the close tie-in "between living and making a living."

In the next five years, Garner predicts:

"This college will extend the horizons of educational services beyond the campus to all people in this district who want to learn, to advance, to improve their skills or acquire new skills in a fast-changing world."

Reduction of class size concerns George L. Geiger, assistant superintendent who heads the 55 Long Beach grade schools. However he sees another problem.

While he favors the many recent grade school innovations such as foreign language, he thinks the idea can be carried too far.

* * * *

"EXCESSIVE organization and academic pressures," he warns, "could cause the elementary school to lose its unique character and become a pale copy of the upper-level schools."

School financing, which caused Supt. Wright grave concern two years ago, is still a source of anxiety despite recent infusions of additional state help.

The superintendent is alarmed as the state blithely orders expensive new programs and tells the school districts to find the money somehow.

And Francis Laufenberg, assistant superintendent and school business manager, warns that the future financial picture is "blurred by a foreground haze of local, state and national politics."

Douglas Aircraft, a vital source of school revenue, is affected by the ups and downs of the aerospace industry. However, says Laufenberg, the trend is currently on the upgrade because of recent large aircraft orders.

But three main threats loom: the proposed elimination of business inventories as a property tax source, a trend toward reduction of public utility assessments; and, the possible loss of federal funds given the Long Beach schools because of the area's tax-exempt military installations.

But with new construction constantly creating a larger tax base and the prospect of enrollment remaining steady, Laufenberg feels that the school district can continue to maintain a low tax rate in comparison with other large school districts.

Supt. Wright says there are two things certain about the future—Catalina wild hogs notwithstanding. It will be more difficult than the past—and change will come swiftly.

Recently, the superintendent warned the Long Beach teaching staff:

"A teacher who goes to sleep today can wake up 10 years from now as startled at the schools of 1975 as Rip Van Winkle was with the political changes of the Revolutionary days."

Westminster

R. A. CASSIDY
City Administrator

In the 1960 census Westminster population stood at 25,750.

Since 1960 our population has doubled, standing now at 50,500.

Growth will come much slower in the next half-decade, with a population of 66,600 projected for 1970.

But the next half-decade will see the city advancing in many areas. In this period Westminster expects to build a $4 million city-county civic center on a 20-acre site acquired last year for this purpose on Westminster Avenue just east of Beach Boulevard.

Hawaiian Gardens

By C. ROBERT LEE
Mayor of Hawaiian Gardens

Hawaiian Gardens, the Southwest area's newest and smallest community, looks forward to substantial population growth in the next five years.

In April of 1965 a State Department of Finance census determined we had 7,975 residents in thhe .87 of a square mile area of the city.

Through zoning, requested by the people of the community, permitting multiple residential development on nearly all of the residential property in the city, our population could double, or even triple the current figures in the next five to ten years.

To backstop this population, the city has rezoned a large portion of the remaining land within the city, which formerly was agricul-turally zoned, for heavy commercial development.

By July 1, streets lights will be provided throughout the city. At present, the business district is covered by adequate street lighting.

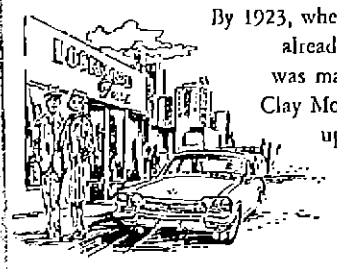
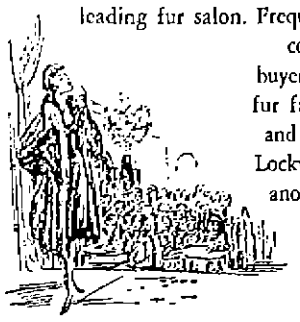
LLOYD'S OF LONG BEACH ATLANTIC AT CARSON



Almost Half A Century and Still Growing...

Yes, it was 1917 — just before World War I — when J. L. Lockwood opened his fur and taxidermy shop on Pine Avenue, across the street from the present location of the Independent, Press-Telegram. The shop was small, but it almost immediately established a reputation for fine quality and skilled, careful workmanship.



Fur Specialists in Downtown Long Beach...

By 1923, when Clay Morrow joined the firm, Lockwood's was already outgrowing its quarters. In 1928, the move was made to its present location at 711 Pine Avenue. Clay Morrow became sole owner of Lockwood's in 1936, upon the retirement of J. L. Lockwood. In 1946 when Keith Morrow, Clay's son, joined the firm, the facilities were again expanded, doubling its size and adding a 10,000-coat cold storage vault on the premises.

Ever Setting the Pace in Fur Styles...

Under the supervision and present ownership of Keith Morrow, the firm has continued to maintain and expand its position as Long Beach's leading fur salon. Frequent trips to New York's leading fur stylists and constant communication with its own resident buyer have kept Lockwood's abreast of the latest in fur fashions, assuring its clientele the finest in styling and quality. The same original aims and concepts of Lockwood's integrity and growth will be maintained another half century the same as this past 50 years.

Scientists Planning to Predict Earthquakes

TOPOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF CALIFORNIA SHOWING MAJOR FAULT LINES

By FRANK PRESS, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; HUGO BENIOFF, California Institute of Technology (Caltech), retired; ROBERT A. FROSCH, Advanced Research Projects Agency; DAVID T. GRIGGS, University of California (UC), Los Angeles; JOHN HANDIN, Shell Development Co.; ROY E. HANSON, National Science Foundation; HARRY H. HESS, Princeton; GEORGE W. HOUSENER, Caltech; WALTER H. MUNK, (UC) San Diego; EGON OROWAN, MIT; LOUIS C. PAKISER, JR. U.S. Geological Survey; GEORGE SUTTON, Columbia University; and DON TOCHER, U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

We may expect a great earthquake, one with magnitude exceeding 8, about once a year. In a thickly populated area the destructiveness of such an event may be measured by the loss of thousands, if not tens of thousands, of lives and by damage which can approach a billion dollars.

Unlike other natural catastrophes such as storms, floods, or volcanic eruptions, earthquakes occur without recognizable warnings.

On the other hand, earthquake belts are well-defined, and precautions in the form of special building codes can, in principle, be taken. Except for coast lines near the earthquake site, tidal-wave warnings can be issued in sufficient time to prevent major loss of life.

In recent years, earth scientists have been intrigued by the possibility that some measure of earthquake prediction can eventually be achieved.

This relatively optimistic view is due to progress of three kinds. First, instruments can now monitor microearthquakes, exceedingly small strains, tilts, and fluctuations in magnetic and gravitational fields. Second, laboratory studies of fracture and creep of rocks under pressures and temperatures corresponding to conditions in the earth's crust and outer mantle have revealed about three possible fracture mechanisms that may be significant for the earthquake problem. Finally, there is some evidence, as yet not fully substantiated, that unusual strain and tilt changes as well as changes of the frequency of occurrence of microearthquakes may have preceded destructive earthquakes by hours or days.

Recently a group of distinguished Japanese scientists proposed a 10-year program of research in earthquake prediction to their government. In view of the uncertainty about the origin of earthquake-generating stresses and the absence of a verified theory for the mechanism of earthquakes, the Japanese chose a semi-empirical approach involving extensive instrumentation of Japan with sensitive seismographs, tiltmeters, strain meters, magnetometers, and tide gages, together with extensive periodic triangulation and leveling.

What the Japanese hope to find is a correlation between the data obtained from these observations and the occurrence of earthquakes.

Following the great Alaskan earthquake of 1964, a panel was convened by Dr. Donald Hornig, Director of the Office of Science and Technology, for the purpose of studying the opportunities for research in earthquake prediction. This document represents the report of the panel.

A 10-year program of research is recommended which parallels the Japanese proposal to a certain extent, and goes beyond it in many ways.

* * * *

THE PROGRAM CALLS for the development of a new generation of instruments for monitoring earthquake faults and for the installation and operation of these instruments in California and Alaska. Extensive geological and geophysical surveys of fault zones are proposed. Laboratory and theoretical studies of mechanisms of fracture and creep of rocks under realistic pressures and temperatures are recommended. Research in prediction theory as applied to geophysical phenomena is proposed. A strong recommendation is made for augmented research in earthquake engineering. Progress in earthquake engineering can lead to significant reductions in casualties and economic loss from destructive earthquakes. . . .

The level of support required to implement this 10-year program is estimated at $137 million. . . .

* * * *

IT IS POSSIBLE that some degree of earthquake forecasting can be achieved with imperfect understanding of the physical mechanism (the prediction of weather, tides, and volcanic eruptions, are examples). For this reason a major program of "instrumenting" seismic belts is an essential feature of our recommended program. Absolute stress would be determined and regional and local strains, tilts, microseismicity (that is, the statistics of the numerous small earthquakes), and gravitational and magnetic fields would be monitored continuously at many locations in the seismic belt. Coherence between variations in these processes would be examined together with possible correlation with the occurrence of larger earthquakes. There is enough experience to indicate that one or more of these techniques could be significant in a prediction scheme. . . .

All major earthquakes of the past 100 years in the California-Nevada region — those with Richter magnitudes greater than 7—have occurred in a Y-shaped zone that extends southeast from San Francisco to the Mexican border, with a branch extending north from the Mojave Desert to near the northern border of Nevada (Figure 2).

This Y-shaped zone includes such major faults or fault zones as the San Andreas, Garlock, White Wolf, and Owens Valley in California, and Dixie Valley in Nevada. To gain a clearer insight into the present and possible future behavior of these and other important fault systems, it is necessary to obtain a more nearly complete understanding of the three-dimensional structure and past behavior of the major geologic features within the zone. To do this, an integrated geophysical and geological study of the Y-shaped zone of earthquake faults is pro-ET quake faults is proposed. . . .

* * * *

INSTRUMENTING earthquake fault zones . . . (would be) directed primarily at monitoring with the greatest achievable sensitivity all possible indicators foretelling the occurrence of earthquakes.

It represents an empirical approach in the absence of a confirmed theory for the mechanism of earthquakes. On the other hand, all phenomena reported (by reputable scientists) to have preceded earthquakes will be checked. The pre-earthquake activity predicted by the main theories of the earthquake mechanism will be examined.

The level of stress will be monitored in seismic zones against the eventuality that the stress history is pertinent to the occurrence of an

Editor's Note: Warning you of the precise day and hour that the earth underfoot is likely to tremble catastrophically intrigues not only mystics and star gazers. tics and star gazers.

Scientists who today don't even know for sure what causes earthquakes nonetheless think one day they may be able to predict them.

A report of 14 experts to the Federal Office of Science and Technology, reprinted here in condensed form, proposes a 10-year, $137-million effort to develop the knowledge and techniques to predict earthquakes.

Getting such an effort underway soon could be crucial. Noted seismologist Dr. Charles Richter indicates a major earthquake is overdue in Southern California. Great earthquakes tend to occur in this area every 100 years, he observes, and the last really big one was in 1857. Long Beach's 50-second shock in 1933, which killed 100 people and caused more than $50 million in damage to the city, may have been a disastrous tremblor but it doesn't count as a great one.

In the absence of such a scientific effort as proposed by the panel, crystal ball gazers have had a heyday playing on the public's hysteric fear of quakes. When two women—one of them Mrs. Jean Dixon of Washington, D.C., who claims to have predicted President Kennedy's assassination—warned that an upheavel would level Santa Barbara last July, the county's civil defense director ordered his entire organization to alert status for two weeks.

1500 TODAY ? ...TOMORROW ?

Take a church with such a successful Sunday School program that regular weekly attendance is the largest in town, 1,500, and to accommodate that many the school has to overflow into three neighborhood garages offered by friends.

You might well imagine that such a church would dream of a tremendous new educational building, perhaps with as many as 67 more classrooms, all air conditioned —a beautiful edifice planned to flow from and complement the present church.

That is exactly what they started building this week at North Long Beach Brethren Church, which is located at 6095 Orange Ave.

The 52,000-square-foot addition will cost an estimated $435,000. In addition to the classrooms it will provide school assembly areas, a chapel seating 225, a fellowship hall seating 500, and adjoining kitchen.

North Long Beach Brethren was organized in 1926. When Dr. George O. Peek became pastor in 1948, membership was 150 and Sunday School averaged twice as many, 300.

Today, the church membership has grown to 1,400, just 100 short of the average Sunday School attendance.

"Our church has always emphasized the importance of the Sunday School," says Dr. Peek. "We have always seen a strong school program as a means of reaching the entire family."

At least 35% of the regular school attendees are adults, reflecting the wisdom of this approach.

Reasons for the outstanding success of the school program?

Says Dr. Peek, strong staff, closely graded classes, and above all, emphasis on the Bible.

"The Bible is the center and core of the curriculum. This comes from the belief of the church that the Bible is the divinely inspired word of God and is sufficient in itself to guide man in matters of faith and morals. This philosophy holds that the "Old Book" has the answers to all the problems of a new society."

Frank Coleman is school superintendent, with Miss Alberta Hanson director of Christian Education. They guide a staff of 150 teachers and department superintendents, more than some pretty good-sized towns can boast for education.

Given this emphasis on Sunday School as the undergirding of a church and source of its growth, there is nothing at all "lopsided" in the blueprint for an education structure which will physically dominate the total church plant.

Not that the "old" church building is small! Completed in 1958 as the first element in the master plan, it has a handsome sanctuary seating 1,100, plus 10 classrooms and administration offices.

Four buildings dating back to 1929, spread over a block and a half and used for education and social purposes, will be demolished and the space used for parking. The new unit will thus complete and pull together North Long Beach Brethren.

Architect is Arthur V. Hoper, AIA, of Long Beach, a member of the church. Contractor is M. A. Baker of Downey. Estimated time for completion is eight months. There's apt to be quite a dedication in North Long Beach sometime in July, 1966.

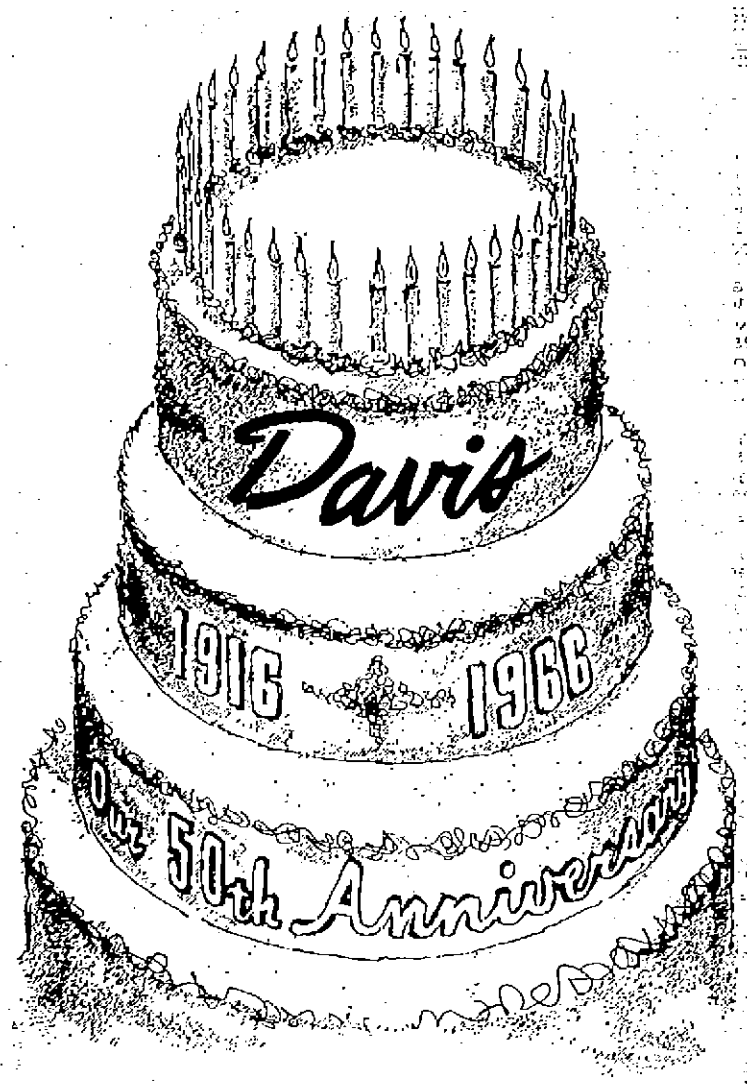
YOUR DOCTOR AND YOU

How to get a doctor in an emergency



Who knows when sudden illness or an accident may strike and you need a doctor in a hurry?

Your best assurance of getting quick and adequate medical care in an emergency is to select a family doctor before you need him. Critical minutes may slip by if you don't know whom to call . . . where to call . . . when every moment counts.

A family doctor of your own can give you the kind of protective care you expect from a competent physician and a trusted friend. If he is not in his office, his telephone answering service knows where to reach him immediately; or, if he is out of the city, he arranges with another physician to serve his patients' needs in his absence. So keep your doctor's phone number where every member of your family can find it.

But if you are a stranger in the city and need immediate medical attention, you can contact a doctor quickly by calling — 432-3971 This is a public service message by:

a big year at Davis'

COMMEMORATING 50 YEARS IN LONG BEACH

We're proud of our achievements since 1916—but resting on our laurels has never been a Davis tradition. It's the next 50 years we're most interested in . . . and especially 1966.

We're going to make our Golden Year one to remember. One you'll remember too if you're looking for fine furniture at attractive prices. You'll shop from names like Henredon, Drexel, Heritage and Karastan . . . you'll have a wider variety to choose from and the assistance of competent decorators. We're planning a lot of pleasant surprises for 1966 . . . it's going to be a Big Year at Davis'.

For IBC: World-Wide Color Telecasts

Long Beach's annual late-summer beauty pageant already is both national in scope and flavor.

And in five years, predicts its executive producer, the International Beauty Congress will be even more so.

The 1970 pageant, says veteran showman Wayne Wayne Dallard, will:

—Be seen in every quarter of the world, via extended color television coverage.

—Present on nationwide color TV the Miss United States judging, which selects the girl who represents this country.

—Offer what Dallard terms "top-flight spectacular entertainment" for "live" audiences and those watching at home.

Last year, he points out, 10 Latin American nations viewed the pageant on television, and "I'm confident we'll be in Europe and the Near East within three years."

The Orient and other untapped areas will follow, he believes.

Girls from 46 of the 50 states participated in last year's Miss United States judging, and, says Dallard, "The TV rating received was one of the highest of any summer show in recent years."

He expects to improve upon that record and add girls from those states currently not represented—Vermont, New Hampshire, Montana and Alaska.

Modern beauty pageantry, Dallard believes, is an offshoot of both the arts and of sports, combining features of both. "There are elements of music, the theater, ballet — and also the competitive spirit of basketball."

By 1970, thhe IBC — "and other such shows" — will have become a "true theatrical form in their own right," says Dallard. He foresees a "strong, powerful entertainment bridging the sometimes monotonous preliminaries with the dramatic climax as a new winner is chosen."

Central in Dallard's thinking is his show's "image," its "integrity," the "quality of the girls entered."

To maintain these standards Dallard seeks even tighter control over local shows in which contestants are selected. "Grassroots control insures better, higher quality shows here—with all that implies in improving our image," he says.

Dallard, whose show business career spans such diverse activities as producing "The Kansas Story," an historical pageant, and fashion shows, joins other local critics of today's auditorium facilities in Long Beach.

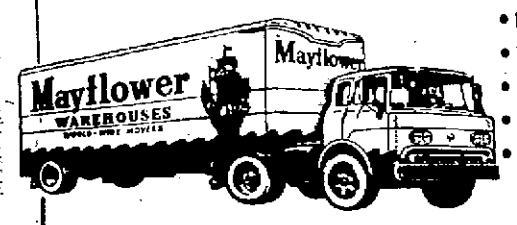
"The Arena," he notes, "is structurally in good shape . . . and is one of the finest multi-purpose buildings in the U.S. for sports events, trade shows, ice reviews."

Modifying it for IBC—and other cultural activities — would require $2½ million—"and that's a firm estimate." Included would be complete air conditioning, new seating, modern lighting equipment and a backstage loading dock.

Dallard suggests the Arena be maintained for "the type of activities it was designed for" and that a new cultural complex be erected on nearby Rainbow Pier.

A 2,500-seat auditorium for legitimate theater, a 1,200-seat "little theater" and art museum facilities would comprise the complex he envisions.

Why should Long Beach make the effort?



"Nothing we do brings so much valuable publicity for the city around the world," he replies. "We're tops in the beauty pageant field with our sophisticated approach.

"But — we can, we must, become even better!"

NEW "PALLETIZED" STORAGE WAREHOUSE GIVES MORE PROTECTION AT LOWER COST! Now your possessions get better, safer storage — at less cost! With our new "palletized" storage system. All your possessions are loaded together in their own dustproof, sealed container at your home, fully protected against accidental loss or handling damage. This new system also means savings to you; your household goods are only touched once when loading. No more rehandling when unloading and reloading for delivery. Hodges-Mayflower offers the very finest service in local Moving and Storage — at the LOWEST rates in town.

WHY

HAS KERR FLOORS
BECOME A MAJOR SUPPLIER OF RETAIL CARPET
IN JUST A LITTLE MORE THAN A YEAR?

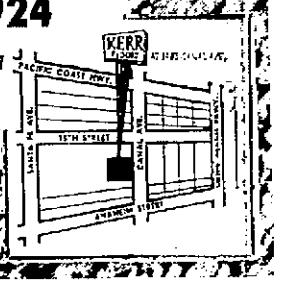
HERE'S WHY!

After 28 years in contract work for carpet, linoleum, floor tile and hardwood flooring, Kerr Floors extended their operation to include the retail business. That was a little over a year ago. The results have been fantastic.
One person has told another what a good buy they got at Kerr's and our business has grown by leaps and bounds. As the largest wholesale carpet contractor in Long Beach, our tremendous buying power has meant huge savings for the customer. Our highly trained personnel have assured the customer of exceptional workmanship. Our location has kept overhead to a minimum and our policy of customer satisfaction has instilled the type of confidence where our products and services are unhesitatingly recommended. If you need carpet, why not find out why more and more smart buyers are coming to Kerr Floors. Visit our showrooms or we will bring samples to your home.

REMEMBER:



★ Kerr Floors is the oldest all-around floor covering business in the City of Long Beach.
★ Kerr Floors is the only Long Beach carpet firm to have their own employes as installers.
★ Kerr Floors is the only COMPLETE floor covering firm in Long Beach installing hardwood, resilient (vinyl and linoleum) and carpet.

"For the Times, They Are a 'Changin'."

Youth Asks, Demands A Voice—A Role

By ART VINSEL

"Come, mothers and fathers/throughout the land
And don't criticize/what ya can't understand
Your sons and your daughter/are beyond your command
. . . for the times, they are a-changin'."

This partial verse from poet and folksinger Bob Dylan's popular "The Times They are a-Changin'" is a succinct comment on young America today and a prophecy of young America tomorrow.

Angered by issues of the day—civil rights inequalities, on-campus political censorship, the war in Viet Nam, the arms race—and torn by the uncertainty of the nuclear age, youth demands a voice and a role.

But psychologists and educators note a marked difference between the intense, involved individual who believes in something worth working toward and the scruffy, emotionally disturbed teen who believes in nothing.

The former may be found helping register voters in Selma, Ala.; the latter may be found throwing sand at police officers on California beaches.

In any case, authorities say, the next five years will produce an ever-increasing number of both and they will be newsmakers often.

What are the motives of this new breed of youth?

Interviews with psychologists, educators and youths themselves indicate the young demonstrator, who may or may not be a college student, is usually motivated by a deepening concern for the world about him and a strong desire to improve it.

THE DELINQUENT rioter, however, is driven only by his own neurotic personal conflicts and a rising psychological phenomenon called "alienation," which makes him want to wreck instead of rectify.

The experts says the rioter is usually in his mid-teens, younger than the demonstrator, and probably does not get along well in school or at home. He is irritable, has no definite aims for his life, and may even have had a brush or two with the law before.

Both types of youths—still at that age when group feelings are strong and may easily weld individuals together toward a common goal—will outgrow the general population over the next five years. Census figures predict a 110% leap in the 14-to-29 population group compared to only 60% for the rest of the population.

The task which lies ahead, many feel is to hear and laud the constructive demonstrator and guide and prod the destructive and immature to more useful pursuits.

Reaction to the sudden tide of action by today's youth is varied. How one looks at it depends on whether one is an educator, a psychologist—or a youth himself.

DR. GEORGE DEMOS, dean of students at Long Beach State College, sees the current upsurge of activity as only the beginning of a new trend in intellectual and emotional climate.

"I think it is a healthy thing," says Demos, explaining that five years ago, educators worried over the apathy of the student community and its reluctance to be committed to an idea or an issue.

"Demonstrations per se are not necessarily bad," says Demos, "and we're going to see more and more of them."

Many young people, he points out, have traveled abroad and are well aware of the potent and effective role played by foreign students in their own political and academic worlds.

Modern educational methods and mass communication are resulting in a generation which is more "aware" than any in the past too, he notes.

Pierce Ommaney, M. A., educational director of the Psychological Guidance Center, an Anaheim clinic affiliated with the Walden School for emotionally disturbed children, probes more deeply into the equation: demonstrator vs. delinquent.

"Current and timely issues give students a personal outlet for their vehemence," the psychologist explains.

A As for the beach-rioting type, they often suffer from a poor adjustment to family and personal relationships. Instead of striking out at "father," they defy the highest, impersonal authority they can find—usually the local police, often by such abuse as throwing paper cupsful of sand when officers are not looking.

Ommaney says much individual rebellion will subside in the next five years—but then there will be another group to pick up the placards or sand-filled paper cups their predecessors have laid down.

Although many adult citizens have reacted violently to student demonstrations, most "non-participating" students themselves seem able to accept them philosophically.

"I CONDONE THEM from a legal viewpoint," says David A. Lejonhud, 24, a former Army Special Forces sergeant now at Fullerton State College preparing to study medicine.

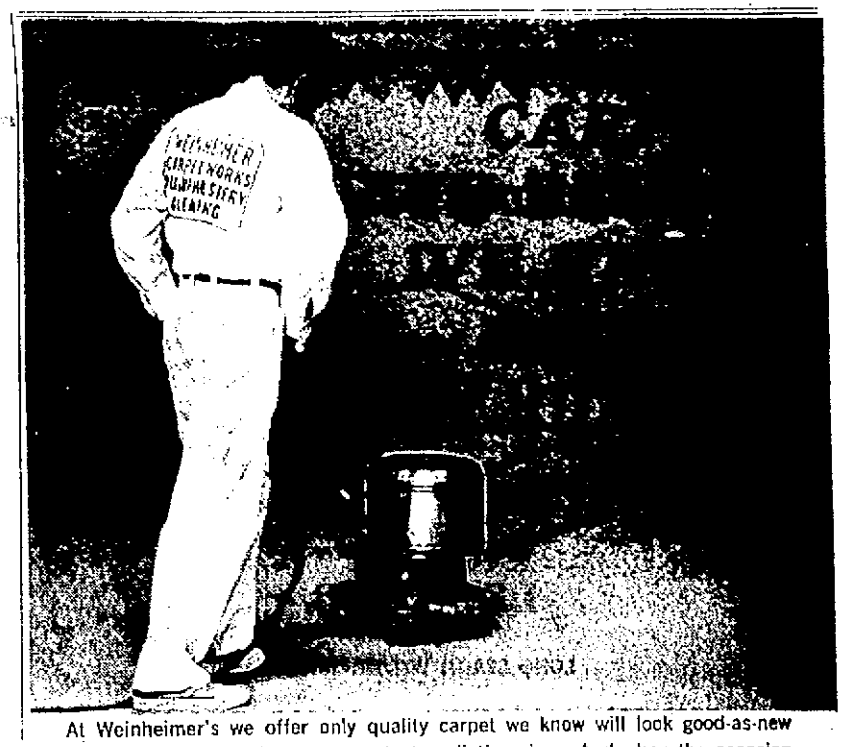
"To not allow dissent in a democracy is to be unfit for self-government," says Lejonhud, adding, "there will be more demonstrations because as tensions mount, people become more militant."

What does a young demonstrator himself have to say of the reasons for his activity?

"The very fact that things are wrong and demonstrations have brought the beginnings of correction makes further demonstrations morally necessary for continued improvement," says David G. Taylor, 24, a graduate student at Long Beach State College.

Taylor, who has a B. A. degree in history from UCLA, participated in a hunger strike in Los Angeles County School District offices in September of 1963. The issue was "de facto" segregation of some county schools.



The district subsequently inaugurated an experimental project of bussing Negro students to out-of-area white schools as a method of eliminating such geographical school segregation.

What of the juveniles who participate in unlawful mob disturbances when enough of them gather to bolster each others' neurotic courage?

One of them gave newsmen an answer after a yelling crowd had gathered at Huntington Police Department last summer to taunt officers.

"Ha," he snorted, "they thought they had a riot yesterday (it was the third hectic day of beach disturbances). If they don't stop bugging us, we'll show them what we can really do!"

What he really couldn't do was explain how the police were "bugging" his crowd.

is an Exquisite SETH THOMAS Timepiece

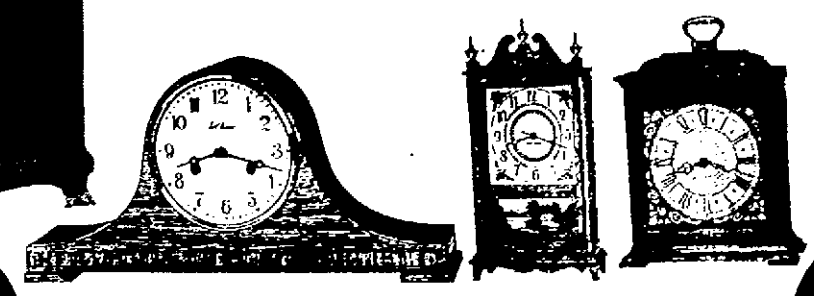
In the next five years, California Time Service will be handling all of the newest, revolutionary timepieces, such as battery-operated, tuning fork-controlled timepieces.



Our staff of qualified craftsmen are capable of repairing everything from the simplest wrist watch to the finest old timepieces . . . some over 200 years old. They utilize the finest modern repairing equipment available.

To accommodate the growing population of Orange County, California Time Service opened a brand new store in Santa Ana last year, where massive wall-size clock displays were experimented with, with an amazing degree of success. As a result of this experiment, California Time Service completely remodeled its Long Beach store last Fall, so that it now offers the largest assortment of clocks of all kinds available anywhere in Southern California.

SETH THOMAS

As an example, the exquisite Floor Clock at left, in Traditional styling that reflects all of the truly fine traditions of the Clockmaker's art, is excellent, not only for its weight-driven timekeeping and mellow Westminster Chime, but also as a treasure for future generations. The case comes in Walnut or Mahogany, with a beautiful glass door.

SETH THOMAS also specializes in fine mantel clocks, like those below. (Left) The Woodbury, designed to blend with traditional or modern decor, has a ¼-hour Westminster Chime, mahogany case and solid brass sash. (Right) The Legacy, of classic world-famous design in rich mahogany, or walnut, has a ¼-hour chime, antique brass dial, brass corner decorations and silver dial ring. (Center) The Tradition, an exact reproduction of the early 18th Century Eli Terrey timepiece, has a ½-hour strike and is also available in rich mahogany to fit any room decor.

For IBC: World-Wide Color Telecasts

Long Beach's annual late-summer beauty pageant already is both national in scope and flavor.

And in five years, predicts its executive producer, the International Beauty Congress will be even more so.

The 1970 pageant, says veteran showman Wayne Wayne Dallard, will:

—Be seen in every quarter of the world, via extended color television coverage.

—Present on nationwide color TV the Miss United States judging, which selects the girl who represents this country.

—Offer what Dallard terms "top-flight spectacular entertainment" for "live" audiences and those watching at home.

Last year, he points out, 10 Latin American nations viewed the pageant on television, and "I'm confident we'll be in Europe and the Near East within three years."

The Orient and other untapped areas will follow, he believes.

Girls from 46 of the 50 states participated in last year's Miss United States judging, and, says Dallard, "The TV rating received was one of the highest of any summer show in recent years."

He expects to improve upon that record and add girls from those states currently not represented—Vermont, New Hampshire, Montana and Alaska.

Modern beauty pageantry, Dallard believes, is an offshoot of both the arts and of sports, combining features of both. "There are elements of music, the theater, ballet — and also the competitive spirit of basketball."

By 1970, thhe IBC — "and other such shows" — will have become a "true theatrical form in their own right," says Dallard. He foresees a "strong, powerful entertainment bridging the sometimes monotonous preliminaries with the dramatic climax as a new winner is chosen."

Central in Dallard's thinking is his show's "image," its "integrity," the "quality of the girls entered."

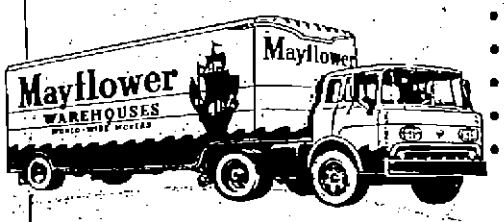
To maintain these standards Dallard seeks even tighter control over local shows in which contestants are selected. "Grassroots control insures better, higher quality shows here—with all that implies in improving our image," he says.

Dallard, whose show business career spans such diverse activities as producing "The Kansas Story," an historical pageant, and fashion shows, joins other local critics of today's auditorium facilities in Long Beach.

"The Arena," he notes, "is structurally in good shape . . . and is one of the finest multi-purpose buildings in the U.S. for sports events, trade shows, ice reviews."

Modifying it for IBC—and other cultural activities — would require $2½ million—"and that's a firm estimate." Included would be complete air conditioning, new seating, modern lighting equipment and a backstage loading dock.

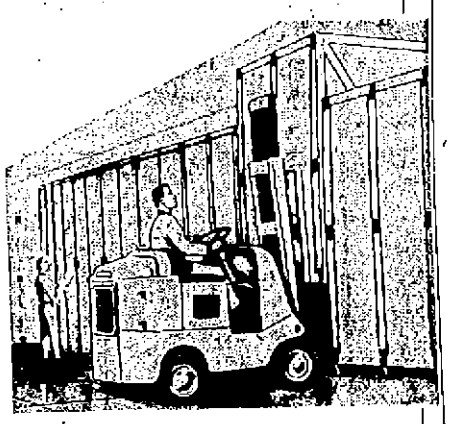
Dallard suggests the Arena be maintained for "the type of activities it was designed for" and that a new cultural complex be erected on nearby Rainbow Pier.



A 2,500-seat auditorium for legitimate theater, a 1,200-seat "little theater" and art museum facilities would comprise the complex he envisions.

Why should Long Beach make the effort?

"Nothing we do brings so much valuable publicity for the city around the world," he replies. "We're tops in the beauty pageant field with our sophisticated approach.



"But—we can, we must, become even better!"

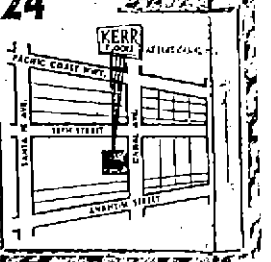
HERE'S WHY!

After 28 years in contract work for carpet, linoleum, floor tile and hardwood flooring, Kerr Floors extended their operation to include the retail business. That was a little over a year ago. The results have been fantastic.
One person has told another what a good buy they got at Kerr's and our business has grown by leaps and bounds. As the largest wholesale carpet contractor in Long Beach, our tremendous buying power has meant huge savings for the customer. Our highly trained personnel have assured the customer of exceptional workmanship. Our location has kept overhead to a minimum and our policy of customer satisfaction has instilled the type of confidence where our products and services are unhesitatingly recommended. If you need carpet, why not find out why more and more smart buyers are coming to Kerr Floors. Visit our showrooms or we will bring samples to your home.



REMEMBER:

★ Kerr Floors is the oldest all-around floor covering business in the City of Long Beach.
★ Kerr Floors is the only Long Beach carpet firm to have their own employes as installers.
★ Kerr Floors is the only COMPLETE floor covering firm in Long Beach installing hardwood, resilient (vinyl and linoleum) and carpet.

By CHESTER R. CRAIN
Mayor of Compton

Compton

A population increase of nearly 7,000 residents is projected for the City of Compton in the next half decade without consideration of any possible annexations which could up that figure substantially.

Current population of the city is 77,170.

Major city projects visualized that would fit into the city's general plan include construction of a new city hall, new municipal library, grade separation and realignment of Compton Boulevard and grade separation and extention of Palmer Avenue from north to south to assist in the revitalization of the city's central business district.

The city's projected street widening program calls for the widening of Wilmington Avenue and Alondra Boulevard to 100 feet.

For improved recreation we have hopes of acquiring land for a park in the north central section of the city and the improvement of 17 acres on west Alondra Boulevard. Community center buildings are anticipated for both areas.

Cal State L.B. Expecting 29,448 Students by 1970

By CARL W. McINTOSH
President, California State College at Long Beach

California State College at Long Beach, founded in 1949, has grown rapidly. This is not news. We have become accustomed to growth and expect it as a normal condition of life. But the rate of growth is a phenomenon in itself.

Qualitative measures are more easily recognized than described and more easily described than applied, but quantitative measures are ones which all can identify and verify. By the time registration was completed in September 1965, over 19,000 students had registered at California State College at Long Beach, and current projections would indicate the enrollment would reach 29,448 by 1970.

At this time 35 permanent buildings have been constructed on the campus. Three are currently under construction and seven are planned for construction between now and 1970. If the support needed is available for the task ahead, by 1970 there will be 42 buildings on the campus representing a total investment of approximately 50 million dollars.

At this time the College has 1,023 faculty members. Six hundred and eighty-nine are full-time members of the teaching faculty; 334 part-time faculty members and graduate students add to this resource to provide the full-time equivalent of 789 teaching faculty. When librarians, counselors, business staff and administrators are added, the total professional staff of the College at this time numbers 1,115. Together with the supporting personnel which also includes clerical, secretarial and technical staff as well as buildings and grounds personnel and student assistants, the total personnel contributing to the College at this time numbers 2,437 individuals.

* * * *

IN ADDITION, three separate organizations contribute essential programs and services. The Forty-Niner Shops under which the bookstore and all food services are managed and operated represent an enterprise having gross sales of over $2 million a year and employing 98 people full-time and 126 people part-time.

The Long Beach California State College Foundation which undertakes and administers special research projects and other non-State supported activities has, over the period of the past nine years, received $1,285,555 and has, at the present time, awarded 161 research grants to members of the faculty resulting in publications and other creative contributions.

The Student Body represents a third entity which employs eight full-time and 81 part-time people and administers a separate budget of over $360,000 per year. If the present rate of growth continues, by 1970 the total operation of the College will represent in all of these various categories a combined budget of approximately 29 million dollars per year.

At this time 45 undergraduate majors are offered leading to the bachelor's degree, and 23 majors leading to the master's degree are offered at the graduate level. At the present time a total of 13,131 students have received bachelor's degrees and 3,293 students have received master's degrees from California State College-Long Beach.

If the student body continues to increase at the projected rate, by 1970 approximately 30,940 citizens living not only in California but in all parts of the world will hold bachelor's degrees from California State College at Long Beach, and 5,780 will have received master's degrees.

* * * *

PUBLICLY SUPPORTED colleges and universities are essential. They serve the best interests of society. They perform this task by bringing high quality educational opportunities to individuals who, though the most direct recipients of such benefits, are really the means by which this better life can be made available to all segments of society, and it is this transmission of benefits which justifies the publicly supported colleges and universities of this nation.

At the present time, the tuition-free principle is being seriously questioned by those who look upon the student as the favored recipient of the State's expenditure. There is no way to predict whether by 1970 we will have abandoned the original principle which has been largely responsible for the greatness of California's educational opportunities and the strength of this society in favor of a more limited philosophy, or whether we will have recognized that students do repay many times the cost of their education as they become productive and creative members of our society.

For Prediction of Earthquakes

earthquake. Strain and tilt fields will be observed in a continuous fashion in case creep acceleration prior to fracture is significant. Changes in the local magnetic, electric, and gravitational fields may be related to changes in the stress or the physical state of rock, both of which may precede a major shock. The statistics of strain release by extremely small shocks (energy release corresponding to a few pounds of TNT) may also indicate changes in physical state.

Experiments in mines and laboratories which also suggest changes in the occurrence of microearthquakes prior to fracture will be expanded to explore their pertinence to actual earthquakes.

The program is designed to maximize the possibility that the zones being monitored are also the zones within which earthquakes will occur. . . .

* * * *

THE PROGRAM is organized primarily around permanently-installed instrumental "clusters" or "super-clusters" augmented by special surveying devices. The clusters primarily monitor local deformation and microseismicity, which according to laboratory data, some field results, and some theories could provide premonitory indications on earthquakes.

In addition gravitational, electric, and magnetic fields will be observed. The gravimeters would detect small vertical displacements or near movements or changes in response to the tides. The electric and magnetic observations could provide indirect indications on changes in stress, temperature, and physical state. The special surveying devices (permanently installed lazer strainmeters) extend the point observations of the cluster elements and also tie the clusters together by monitoring regional deformation. . . .

It is proposed to distribute 12 standard clusters, spaced at intervals of 50-100 km, along the San Andreas fault system and other faults of California. . . .

Three clusters would be deployed on other major faults in the California-Nevada region, for example, the Sierra Nevada fault of Owens Valley. Three super-clusters would be placed in locations considered to have the highest probability for the occurrence of major earthquakes. The clusters would be linked to the extent feasible by open-wire digital telephone circuitry to a central computing and analysis facility. . . .

It cannot be emphasized enough that the results of a research program such as this one cannot be anticipated. The problem of earthquake prediction is a particularly difficult one.

Earth scientists are anxious to begin an attack on the problem and feel that significant contributions can be made—enough to justify the program. However, they are not unmindful of the possibility that no practical method of specific prediction may emerge. Against this eventuality the program is organized so as to insure an increase of our understanding of earthquakes and fault tectonics. Even if we find that earthquakes are unpredictable, our ability to respond to the earthquake problem will be much improved in the engineering sense so as greatly to reduce casualties and property damage. . . .

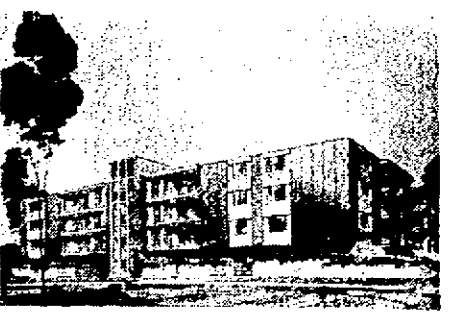
"THE QUALITY BUILDER"



Paul F. McKenzie, Jr., contractor and builder in Long Beach since 1946, incorporated in 1963 into the firm name of Paul F. McKenzie, Inc. Builder of custom homes, rental properties and own-your-own apartments, McKenzie is an active civic worker and leader in the construction industry for betterment of standards of work and legislative affairs.

THE TIARA IMPERIAL

latest in the McKenzie-built series of Imperial Quality own-your-own apartment buildings, is being constructed at 2662 E. Second St. The building is 30 units with the latest in features including Gold Medallion wiring, electric kitchens, electric heating, finest sound-proofing, decorator colors and wall coverings, elevator, large central patio. Completion is scheduled for late summer.

THE CARLTON IMPERIAL

at 2772 E. 2nd St., most recent completion of the own-your-owns by McKenzie, established a record for the firm in speed-of-sales record, bringing to the year's total, 50 units selling for more than a million dollars in 1965. Rated by many as the most strikingly attractive building completed by the firm in the 17 years of building own-your-owns, The Carlton was McKenzie's first own-your-own with Condominium titles.

THE PALOMA IMPERIAL

at 3101 E. Second St., occupying an entire block of ground is another McKenzie own-your-own; completed in 1965, it represented a departure to a rich contemporary design from a long line of apartment buildings having the Oriental accent in appearance.

"For the Times, They Are a 'Changin'."

Youth Asks, Demands A Voice—A Role

By ART VINSEL

"Come, mothers and fathers/throughout the land
And don't criticize/what ya can't understand
Your sons and your daughter/are beyond your command
. . . for the times, they are a-changin'."

This partial verse from poet and folksinger Bob Dylan's popular "The Times They are a-Changin'" is a succinct comment on young America today and a prophecy of young America tomorrow.

Angered by issues of the day—civil rights inequalities, on-campus political censorship, the war in Viet Nam, the arms race—and torn by the uncertainty of the nuclear age, youth demands a voice and a role.

But psychologists and educators note a marked difference between the intense, involved individual who believes in something worth working toward and the scruffy, emotionally disturbed teen who believes in nothing.

The former may be found helping register voters in Selma, Ala.; the latter may be found throwing sand at police officers on California beaches.

In any case, authorities say, the next five years will produce an ever-increasing number of both and they will be newsmakers often.

What are the motives of this new breed of youth?

Interviews with psychologists, educators and youths themselves indicate the young demonstrator, who may or may not be a college student, is usually motivated by a deepening concern for the world about him and a strong desire to improve it.

THE DELINQUENT rioter, however, is driven only by his own neurotic personal conflicts and a rising psychological phenomenon called "alienation," which makes him want to wreck instead of rectify.

The experts says the rioter is usually in his mid-teens, younger than the demonstrator, and probably does not get along well in school or at home. He is irritable, has no definite aims for his life, and may even have had a brush or two with the law before.

Both types of youths—still at that age when group feelings are strong and may easily weld individuals together toward a common goal—will outgrow the general population over the next five years. Census figures predict a 110% leap in the 14-to-29 population group compared to only 60% for the rest of the population.

The task which lies ahead, many feel is to hear and laud the constructive demonstrator and guide and prod the destructive and immature to more useful pursuits.

Reaction to the sudden tide of action by today's youth is varied. How one looks at it depends on whether one is an educator, a psychologist—or a youth himself.

DR. GEORGE DEMOS, dean of students at Long Beach State College, sees the current upsurge of activity as only the beginning of a new trend in intellectual and emotional climate.

"I think it is a healthy thing," says Demos, explaining that five years ago, educators worried over the apathy of the student community and its reluctance to be committed to an idea or an issue.

"Demonstrations per se are not necessarily bad," says Demos, "and we're going to see more and more of them."

Many young people, he points out, have traveled abroad and are well aware of the potent and effective role played by foreign students in their own political and academic worlds.

Modern educational methods and mass communication are resulting in a generation which is more "aware" than any in the past too, he notes.

Pierce Ommaney, M. A., educational director of the Psychological Guidance Center, an Anaheim clinic affiliated with the Walden School for emotionally disturbed children, probes more deeply into the equation: demonstrator vs. delinquent.

"Current and timely issues give students a personal outlet for their vehemence,"" the psychologist explains.

A As for the beach-rioting type, they often suffer from a poor adjustment to family and personal relationships. Instead of striking out at "father," they defy the highest, impersonal authority they can find—usually the local police, often by such abuse as throwing paper cupsful of sand when officers are not looking.

Ommaney says much individual rebellion will subside in the next five years—but then there will be another group to pick up the placards or sand-filled paper cups their predecessors have laid down.

Although many adult citizens have reacted violently to student demonstrations, most "non-participating" students themselves seem able to accept them philosophically.

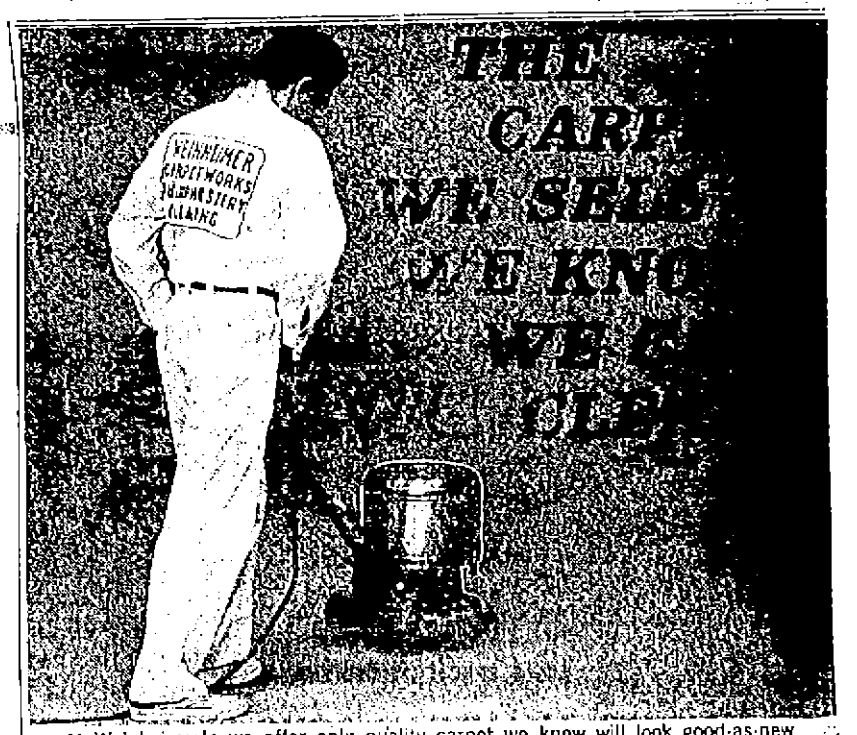
"I CONDONE THEM from a legal viewpoint," says David A. Lejonhud, 24, a former Army Special Forces sergeant now at Fullerton State College preparing to study medicine.

"To not allow dissent in a democracy is to be unfit for self-government," says Lejonhud, adding, "there will be more demonstrations because as tensions mount, people become more militant."

What does a young demonstrator himself have to say of the reasons for his activity?

"The very fact that things are wrong and demonstrations have brought the beginnings of correction makes further demonstrations morally necessary for continued improvement," says David G. Taylor, 24, a graduate student at Long Beach State College.

Taylor, who has a B. A. degree in history from UCLA, participated in a hunger strike in Los Angeles County School District offices in September of 1963. The issue was "de facto" segregation of some county schools.



The district subsequently inaugurated an experimental project of bussing Negro students to out-of-area white schools as a method of eliminating such geographical school segregation.

What of the juveniles who participate in unlawful mob disturbances when enough of them gather to bolster each others' neurotic courage?

One of them gave newsmen an answer after a yelling crowd had gathered at Huntington Police Department last summer to taunt officers.

"Ha," he snorted, "they thought they had a riot yesterday (it was the third hectic day of 'beach disturbances). If they don't stop bugging us, we'll show them what we can really do!"

What he really couldn't do was explain how the police were "bugging" his crowd.

is an Exquisite SETH THOMAS Timepiece

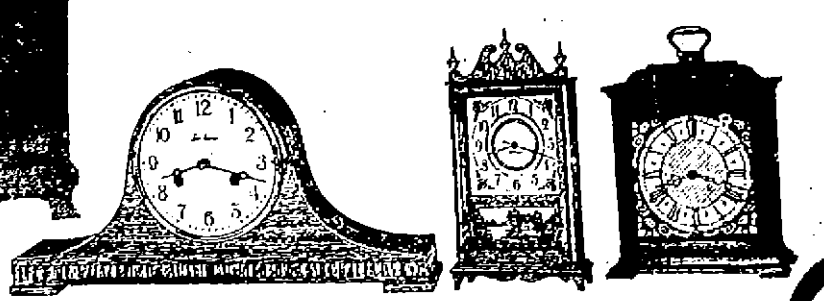
In the next five years, California Time Service will be handling all of the newest, revolutionary timepieces, such as battery-operated, tuning fork-controlled timepieces.



Our staff of qualified craftsmen are capable of repairing everything from the simplest wrist watch to the finest old timepieces . . . some over 200 years old. They utilize the finest modern repairing equipment available.

To accommodate the growing population of Orange County, California Time Service opened a brand new store in Santa Ana last year, where massive wall-size clock displays were experimented with, with an amazing degree of success. As a result of this experiment, California Time Service completely remodeled its Long Beach store last Fall, so that it now offers the largest assortment of clocks of all kinds available anywhere in Southern California.

SETH THOMAS

As an example, the exquisite Floor Clock at left, in Traditional styling that reflects all of the truly fine traditions of the Clockmaker's art, is excellent, not only for its weight-driven timekeeping and mellow Westminster Chime, but also as a treasure for future generations. The case comes in Walnut or Mahogany, with a beautiful glass door.

SETH THOMAS also specializes in fine mantel clocks, like those below. (Left) The Woodbury, designed to blend with traditional or modern decor, has a ¼-hour Westminster Chime, mahogany case and solid brass sash. (Right) The Legacy, of classic world-famous design in rich mahogany, or walnut, has a ¼-hour chime, antique brass dial, brass corner decorations and silver dial ring. (Center) The Tradition, an exact reproduction of the early 18th Century Eli Terrey timepiece, has a ½-hour strike and is also available in rich mahogany to fit any room decor.

New Covenant Presbyterian Church Under Construction in Long Beach

DR. HANGEN

THOUGH SOME HOLD TO TRADITION

New Winds Blow Through Christiandom

By LES RODNEY
Religious News Editor

A dramatic increase in interdenominational cooperation. New forms of reaching the unchurched. Fewer but more deeply committed church members. A great revival of traditional faith.

These are some coming developments in Long Beach religious life foreseen by area pastors.

Their predictions reflect the new winds blowing through Christendom and some of the large theological issues being debated nationally.

There is general agreement on one key point. While this area compares favorably with others in number of churches and quality of church life, business-as-usual methods might just not be good enough to meet the challenge of accelerating population growth.

"Projections of a vastly expanded city, with high rise and a transformed waterfront, have to say something to our churches about developing a ministry on its toes to reach all these people," commented Dr. Hugh David Burcham, of Covenant Presbyterian, a church which is registering its confidence in the future of downtown Long Beach by building a magnificent new structure at Atlantic Avenue and Third Street.

"We should find ways of working together to reach the growing number of people in apartments, where there is so much anonymity," Dr. Burcham added.

* * * *

DR. EMERSON G. Hangen, pastor for 15 years at another familiar downtown church, First Congregational, pointed up the need for support of the Long Beach Council of Churches so that our churches can be helped to move into the new era just ahead with a greater degree of unity and more effective Christian witness.

"While our traditional ways of doing things cannot and need not be discarded, we must be ready to change our procedures and to engage in new types of ministries," Dr. Hangen said. "The church is always at its best when it does things together, across denominational lines that usually separate us."

Stressing the fact that the ecumenical movement toward unity, "formerly the exclusive concern of Anglicans, Protestants and Orthodox," takes on new dimensions following the Vatican Council, Rev. James E. Carroll of All Saints' Episcopal predicted that "the prospects for Christian unity will be much more tangible in 1970 than 1960. The liturgical movement, which is bringing together Catholic and evangelical elements in worship, and also restoring the Christian layman to his rightful place in church life, will continue to work a quiet and steady renewal of Christendom."

REV. KIRKPATRICK

REV. CARROLL

Father Carroll noted "the unmistakable fact that the church has been dethroned in most cultures," and saw this as meaning that "the number of converts coming into the church will likely decrease, but the people who do come in will be stronger and more reliable converts.

* * * *

"THIS IS OKAY with me," he said, "for in the long run the church will benefit, the quality of its interior life will be better."

The need to retain Christianity's timeless message was emphasized by Rev. Harold S. Carlson of First Baptist of Lakewood, who looks to more changes in the next five years in some areas of life than in the preceding fifty.

"Christianity in its days of greatest influence surged forward under revolutionaries who were dissatisfied with old ruts of tradition and who dared to reach their generation in new ways," he said. "If the Christian church will rise above provincialism, prejudice and tradition, it will continue to be a moving force in our society. I see a real surge forward in spiritual interest because as this world becomes more complex, man's need becomes more desperate."

James McKowen, pastor since last April at First Christian, a large downtown landmark, looked confidently to the defeat of "those who tell us that God is dead, that Jesus of Nazareth is only a Jewish teacher who has long been outdated, that there is nothing absolutely wrong, or absolutely right . . . that the need for the church has been replaced in our scientific, educated age.

"This is not the first time we have heard these dire predictions for the church," he said. "The 'new' morality is just a page torn from the archaic past. In every age it has been tried it has brought anarchy and despair . . . an emptiness and insecurity that did not satisfy.

"Of this we are certain," he continued, "the current trend of infidelity will also run its course. The alternatives to Christian faith are just too despairing for intelligent men to accept. We believe we are standing on the doorstep of another great revival. And with such strong and strategically located churches as we have in Long Beach there should be no doubt that the church will continue to grow and extend its beneficient influence."

Rev. N. J. Kirkpatrick, veteran pastor of New Hope Baptist, pointed to one potential bottleneck for the physical growth of churches —a crisis in parking space, something he believes needs immediate attention.

But Rev. Irvin R. Moline of Immanuel Lutheran, president of the Long Beach Area Lutheran Ministers Association, warned that church attendance "here as elsewhere has not equaled figures of a few years ago, and the five years ahead are likely to continue hazardous to a watered-down religion seeking easy answers."

An increase in lawlessness and moral decay was predicted by Dr. Ernest R. Johnson of Wrigley Heights Baptist, who said this underscores the need for the church to re-evalute its methods in order to reach the youth.

* * * *

"YOUNG PEOPLE," he said, "are looking for a cause, a rallying point. Well, the Christian cause is the highest—but it must be effectively taken to them."

Great changes in the very forms of church life are anticipated by Rev. Stanley C. Brown of Grace Methodist, president of the Long Beach Ministerial Union in response to "a vast wave of unrest among clergy and laity alike."

He sees the pressure for renewal and deepening resulting in a "great coming together . . . a Federal Union of denominations and congregations not unlike that of the states of our nation, each one keeping its unique heritage, form and sovereignty, yet all one in purpose, effort and exchange."

He also sees possible harassment of the renewed church as it "insists on following the Gospel of love in economic and political and social matters."

Straws in the wind are also seen by the Rev. Mr. Brown, such as:

Less cautious guarding of vested church interests — "Already the conscience of pastors is screaming to put these things out of the way and get on with the true business of Jesus Christ."

Reversal of the trend to larger paid staffs—"We are going to quit shanghaiing people to serve a cumbersome institution, and instead send them out to serve their families and the world."

Willingness to experiment with new forms, such as worship at odd times of the

At least once in your life, you'll purchase a diamond ring—because a diamond is the symbol of life's supreme moments. You may invest a hundred dollars or more than a thousand—but you're most naturally concerned about getting your money's worth.

HERE ARE SOME HELPFUL HINTS:

1. Beware of "sale-price" diamonds. Values are pretty constant in diamond rings. If it's "marked down" today—the chances are that it never was worth the original price.

2. Catch-all phrases such as "Blue White" and "Perfect" are used many times to deceive the unsuspecting. For instance, a "Perfect" diamond can be a very poor stone as the term only covers internal flaws and not bad cutting or poor color. A "Blue White" diamond is not necessarily one of fine color.

3. MOST IMPORTANT—
Go to a jeweler you can trust implicitly. To judge the color, cutting and clarity of a gem is the work of an expert. Ours has been a business of expert, personal service for over 40 years. We know the names of our customers. We have seen the diamonds we have sold become treasured family possessions to be handed down from one generation to another.

4. Since 1925 the name of Rothbart's has been associated with Long Beach in its hopes, dreams and progress. Today we too enjoy the prestige of fine establishments that adhere to the tradition of neighborliness and fair dealing.

A population increase of nearly 7,000 residents is projected for the City of Compton in the next half decade without consideration of any possible annexations which could up that figure substantially.

Current population of the city is 77,170.

Major city projects visualized that would fit into the city's general plan include construction of a new city hall, new municipal library, grade separation and realignment of Compton Boulevard and grade separation and extention of Palmer Avenue from north to south to assist in the revitalization of the city's central business district.

The city's projected street widening program calls for the widening of Wilmington Avenue and Alondra Boulevard to 100 feet.

For improved recreation we have hopes of acquiring land for a park in the north central section of the city and the improvement of 17 acres on west Alondra Boulevard. Community center buildings are anticipated for both areas.

Cal State L.B. Expecting 29,448 Students by 1970

By CARL W. McINTOSH
President, California State College at Long Beach

California State College at Long Beach, founded in 1949, has grown rapidly. This is not news. We have become accustomed to growth and expect it as a normal condition of life. But the rate of growth is a phenomenon in itself.

Qualitative measures are more easily recognized than described and more easily described than applied, but quantitative measures are ones which all can identify and verify. By the time registration was completed in September 1965, over 19,000 students had registered at California State College at Long Beach, and current projections would indicate the enrollment would reach 29,448 by 1970.

At this time 35 permanent buildings have been constructed on the campus. Three are currently under construction and seven are planned for construction between now and 1970. If the support needed is available for the task ahead, by 1970 there will be 42 buildings on the campus representing a total investment of approximately 50 million dollars.

At this time the College has 1,023 faculty members. Six hundred and eighty-nine are full-time members of the teaching faculty; 334 part-time faculty members and graduate students add to this resource to provide the full-time equivalent of 789 teaching faculty. When librarians, counselors, business staff and administrators are added, the total professional staff of the College at this time numbers 1,115. Together with the supporting personnel which also includes clerical, secretarial and technical staff as well as buildings and grounds personnel and student assistants, the total personnel contributing to the College at this time numbers 2,437 individuals.

* * * *

IN ADDITION, three separate organizations contribute essential programs and services. The Forty-Niner Shops under which the bookstore and all food services are managed and operated represent an enterprise having gross sales of over $2 million a year and employing 98 people full-time and 126 people part-time.

The Long Beach California State College Foundation which undertakes and administers special research projects and other non-State supported activities has, over the period of the past nine years, received $1,285,555 and has, at the present time, awarded 161 research grants to members of the faculty resulting in publications and other creative contributions.

The Student Body represents a third entity which employs eight full-time and 81 part-time people and administers a separate budget of over $360,000 per year. If the present rate of growth continues, by 1970 the total operation of the College will represent in all of these various categories a combined budget of approximately 29 million dollars per year.

At this time 45 undergraduate majors are offered leading to the bachelor's degree, and 23 majors leading to the master's degree are offered at the graduate level. At the present time a total of 13,131 students have received bachelor's degrees and 3,293 students have received master's degrees from California State College-Long Beach.

If the student body continues to increase at the projected rate, by 1970 approximately 30,940 citizens living not only in California but in all parts of the world will hold bachelor's degrees from California State College at Long Beach, and 5,780 will have received master's degrees.

* * * *

PUBLICLY SUPPORTED colleges and universities are essential. They serve the best interests of society. They perform this task by bringing high quality educational opportunities to individuals who, though the most direct recipients of such benefits, are really the means by which this better life can be made available to all segments of society, and it is this transmission of benefits which justifies the publicly supported colleges and universities of this nation.

At the present time, the tuition-free principle is being seriously questioned by those who look upon the student as the favored recipient of the State's expenditure. There is no way to predict whether by 1970 we will have abandoned the original principle which has been largely responsible for the greatness of California's educational opportunities and the strength of this society in favor of a more limited philosophy, or whether we will have recognized that students do repay many times the cost of their education as they become productive and creative members of our society.

earthquake. Strain and tilt fields will be observed in a continuous fashion in case creep acceleration prior to fracture is significant. Changes in the local magnetic, electric, and gravitational fields may be related to changes in the stress or the physical state of rock, both of which may precede a major shock. The statistics of strain release by extremely small shocks (energy release corresponding to a few pounds of TNT) may also indicate changes in physical state.

Experiments in mines and laboratories which also suggest changes in the occurrence of microearthquakes prior to fracture will be expanded to explore their pertinence to actual earthquakes.

The program is designed to maximize the possibility that the zones being monitored are also the zones within which earthquakes will occur. . . .

* * * *

THE PROGRAM is organized primarily around permanently-installed instrumental "clusters" or "superclusters" augmented by special surveying devices. The clusters primarily monitor local deformation and microseismicity, which according to laboratory data, some field results, and some theories could provide premonitory indications on earthquakes.

In addition gravitational, electric, and magnetic fields will be observed. The gravimeters would detect small vertical displacements or near movements or changes in response to the tides. The electric and magnetic observations could provide indirect indications on changes in stress, temperature, and physical state. The special surveying devices (permanently installed lazer strainmeters) extend the point observations of the cluster elements and also tie the clusters together by monitoring regional deformation. . . .

It is proposed to distribute 12 standard clusters, spaced at intervals of 50-100 km, along the San Andreas fault system and other faults of California. . . .

Three clusters would be deployed on other major faults in the California-Nevada region, for example, the Sierra Nevada fault of Owens Valley. Three superclusters would be placed in locations considered to have the highest probability for the occurrence of major earthquakes. The clusters would be linked to the extent feasible by open-wire digital telephone circuitry to a central computing and analysis facility. . . .

It cannot be emphasized enough that the results of a research program such as this one cannot be anticipated: The problem of earthquake prediction is a particularly difficult one.

Earth scientists are anxious to begin an attack on the problem and feel that significant contributions can be made—enough to justify the program. However, they are not unmindful of the possibility that no practical method of specific prediction may emerge. Against this eventuality the program is organized so as to insure an increase of our understanding of earthquakes and fault tectonics. Even if we find that earthquakes are unpredictable, our ability to respond to the earthquake problem will be much improved in the engineering sense so as greatly to reduce casualties and property damage. . . .

Dairy Valley

By J. N. ALBERS
Mayor of Dairy Valley

Dairy Valley — the name brings to mind a quiet, peaceful, rural community largely dependent on the production of milk and truck farming. The size of the community in terms of people—3,500—in the midst of the urbanized Los Angeles County area also brings country-type living to mind.

A 107-unit high rise apartment will be built on the ocean front at Sixth Street; the Huntington Beach Company's 700-acre "west side" property will be put under development, after extensive relocation of oil wells, lines and other facilities. It will grow around a golf course.

Evidences of growth will be everywhere—and not the least will be in education. The district's Fountain Valley High School will open this fall, and so will Golden West College.

THOUGH SOME HOLD TO TRADITION

New Winds Blow Through Christiandom

By LES RODNEY
Religious News Editor

A dramatic increase in interdenominational cooperation. New forms of reaching the unchurched. Fewer but more deeply committed church members. A great revival of traditional faith.

These are some coming developments in Long Beach religious life foreseen by area pastors.

Their predictions reflect the new winds blowing through Christendom and some of the large theological issues being debated nationally.

There is general agreement on one key point. While this area compares favorably with others in number of churches and quality of church life, business-as-usual methods might just not be good enough to meet the challenge of accelerating population growth.

"Projections of a vastly expanded city, with high rise and a transformed waterfront, have to say something to our churches about developing a ministry on its toes to reach all these people," commented Dr. Hugh David Burcham, of Covenant Presbyterian, a church which is registering its confidence in the future of downtown Long Beach by building a magnificent new structure at Atlantic Avenue and Third Street.

"We should find ways of working together to reach the growing number of people in apartments, where there is so much anonymity," Dr. Burcham added.

* * * *

DR. EMERSON G. Hangen, pastor for 15 years at another familiar downtown church, First Congregational, pointed up the need for support of the Long Beach Council of Churches so that our churches can be helped to move into the new era just ahead with a greater degree of unity and more effective Christian witness.

"While our traditional ways of doing things cannot and need not be discarded, we must be ready to change our procedures and to engage in new types of ministries," Dr. Hangen said. "The church is always at its best when it does things together, across denominational lines that usually separate us."

Stressing the fact that the ecumenical movement toward unity, "formerly the exclusive concern of Angelicans, Protestants and Orthodox," takes on new dimensions following the Vatican Council, Rev. James E. Carroll of All Saints' Episcopal predicted that "the prospects for Christian unity will be much more tangible in 1970 than 1960. The liturgical movement, which is bringing together Catholic and evangelical elements in worship, and also restoring the Christian layman to his rightful place in church life, will continue to work a quiet and steady renewal of Christendom."

REV. CARROLL

Father Carroll noted "the unmistakable fact that the church has been dethroned in most cultures," and saw this as meaning that "the number of converts coming into the church will likely decrease, but the people who do come in will be stronger and more reliable converts.

* * * *

"THIS IS OKAY with me," he said, "for in the long run the church will benefit, the quality of its interior life will be better."

The need to retain Christianity's timeless message was emphasized by Rev. Harold S. Carlson of First Baptist of Lakewood, who looks to more changes in the next five years in some areas of life than in the preceding fifty.

"Christianity in its days of greatest influence surged forward under revolutionaries who were dissatisfied with old ruts of tradition and who dared to reach their generation in new ways," he said. "If the Christian church will rise above provincialism, prejudice and tradition, it will continue to be a moving force in our society. I see a real surge forward in spiritual interest because as this world becomes more complex, man's need becomes more desperate."

James McKowen, pastor since last April at First Christian, a large downtown landmark, looked confidently to the defeat of "those who tell us that God is dead, that Jesus of Nazareth is only a Jewish teacher who has long been outdated, that there is nothing absolutely wrong, or absolutely right . . . that the need for the church has been replaced in our scientific, educated age.

"This is not the first time we have heard these dire predictions for the church," he said. "The 'new' morality is just a page torn from the archaic past. In every age it has been tried it has brought anarchy and despair . . . an emptiness and insecurity that did not satisfy.

"Of this we are certain," he continued, "the current trend of infidelity will also run its course. The alternatives to Christian faith are just too despairing for intelligent men to accept. We believe we are standing on the doorstep of another great revival. And with such strong and strategically located churches as we have in Long Beach there should be no doubt that the church will continue to grow and extend its beneficient influence."

Rev. N. J. Kirkpatrick, veteran pastor of New Hope Baptist, pointed to one potential bottleneck for the physical growth of churches —a crisis in parking space, something he believes needs immediate attention.

But Rev. Irvin R. Moline of Immanuel Lutheran, president of the Long Beach Area Lutheran Ministers Association, warned that church attendance "here as elsewhere has not equaled figures of a few years ago, and the five years ahead are likely to continue hazardous to a watered-down religion seeking easy answers."

An increase in lawlessness and moral decay was predicted by Dr. Ernest R. Johnson of Wrigley Heights Baptist, who said this underscores the need for the church to re-evalute its methods in order to reach the youth.

* * * *

"YOUNG PEOPLE," he said, "are looking for a cause, a rallying point. Well, the Christian cause is the highest—but it must be effectively taken to them."

Great changes in the very forms of church life are anticipated by Rev. Stanley C. Brown of Grace Methodist, president of the Long Beach Ministerial Union in response to "a vast wave of unrest among clergy and laity alike."

He sees the pressure for renewal and deepening resulting in a "great coming together . . . a Federal Union of denominations and congregations not unlike that of the states of our nation, each one keeping its unique heritage, form and sovereignty, yet all one in purpose, effort and exchange."

He also sees possible harassment of the renewed church as it "insists on following the Gospel of love in economic and political and social matters."

Straws in the wind are also seen by the Rev. Mr. Brown, such as:

Less cautious guarding of vested church interests — "Already the conscience of pastors is screaming to put these things out of the way and get on with the true business of Jesus Christ."

Reversal of the trend to larger paid staffs—"We are going to quit shanghaiing people to serve a cumbersome institution, and instead send them out to serve their families and the world."

Willingness to experiment with new forms, such as worship at odd times of the

has no price tag!

At least once in your life, you'll purchase a diamond ring—because a diamond is the symbol of life's supreme moments. You may invest a hundred dollars or more than a thousand—but you're most naturally concerned about getting your money's worth.

HERE ARE SOME HELPFUL HINTS:

1. Beware of "sale-price" diamonds. Values are pretty constant in diamond rings. If it's "marked down" today—the chances are that it never was worth the original price.

2. Catch-all phrases such as "Blue White" and "Perfect" are used many times to deceive the unsuspecting. For instance, a "Perfect" diamond can be a very poor stone as the term only covers internal flaws and not bad cutting or poor color. A "Blue White" diamond is not necessarily one of fine color.

3. MOST IMPORTANT—
Go to a jeweler you can trust implicitly. To judge the color, cutting and clarity of a gem is the work of an expert. Ours has been a business of expert, personal service for over 40 years. We know the names of our customers. We have seen the diamonds we have sold become treasured family possessions to be handed down from one generation to another.

Killingsworth, Gibbs, Lockett See Superblocks of Attached Housing, More High--Rise along the Beach

. . . a Killingsworth Interior

like in 1970.

The architects talk of using trees, roofs, painted fences and dead streets to lend a community feeling to residential neighborhoods. They call for the rehabilitation of older neighborhoods "with loving care."

And Lockett and Killingsworth, at least, see the coming shoreline developments as an important stimulus to downtown development, part of such a "renaissance you're not going to know this city in four years." Gibbs worries about the direction such development will take, due to city ordinances he contends permit the building of "instant slums."

THE IMPACT of zoning on architectural trends piques the expert.

They are particularly appreciative of the city's new R-5 zone which "is worded in such a way that it's unfeasible to build on a single lot," Gibbs explains. "With it you can create these row house possibilities or maybe get together larger pieces of ground for communities of superblocks."

The R-5 zone one also means, says Killingsworth, that coming high rise buildings "will be tall towers sitting within open spaces, which they should be."

Gibbs is offended, however, by zoning laws that permit "a lot of the apartment houses, two story ones that are still being legally built in areas just being transformed from single family residences, to create somewhat of an instant slum."

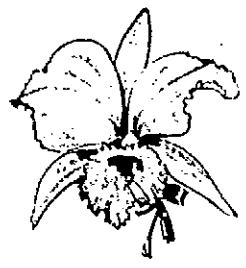
He contends, "From the moment they're put in they aren't very nice and they just keep going downhill. Yet the fact that the investment is there means you can't do anything better with the land until the thing is depreciated."

In the immediate future, the architects would like to see existing residential areas revitalized.

"Loving care . . . a carefully handled tree planting program and encouragement for cleaning the whole area up" is important for areas like Los Cerritos, Cal Heights, Bixby Knolls and Belmont Heights, Killingsworth says.

Belmont Shores, on the other hand, "is one area that could be converted over to attached or cluster housing so easily because you have these tiny lots and yet they're so close to all the amenities like shopping, theaters, the beach, everything," he notes.

Whether future residential architecture will lean increasingly to the modernistic "contemporary" designs, or hark back as consistently as in the past to traditional or colonial inspiration may be a question "of fashion."



"It's like women's clothing, unfortunately," Killingsworth says." "All of a sudden now we're on a Spanish kick. We've been through the French. What's next, I would suspect, might be English," he explains. "So many people who are buying these days are looking for roots and they want something like mama or papa had. Also, people are buying up and they're buying what they think is fashionable for the next higher income bracket, or the second bracket up."

Killingsworth would prefer "glass houses." But he concedes, "it takes a special type of person to live in these. And yet you can get a good rooty feeling from the texture of the woods in a Frank Lloyd Wright home."

"While the pressure won't be on the single family house in five years to the degree it will be in ten, the pressures are there now,'" Killingsworth contends.

Housing 1970 ★ Cars Are Problems ★ Zoning Is Crucial

"You're going to find in Long Beach, in all of the beach communities, a tremendous uplift and surge. People want to live at the beach."

Either high rise apartments or attached "row housing" could comfortably accommodate more people close to the beaches, the architects say.

At present, high rise apartments going up are often for the community's senior citizens, like Gibb's John Brown Towers at 3737 Atlantic Blvd., Don Gibbs notes. These incorporate, or are situated close to, community facilities like churches, libraries and restaurants.

OTHER HIGH RISES now are designed for a more independent feeling. The Gibb's Galaxy now under construction at 2999 E. Ocean Blvd. is designed so that "everybody has a larger individual unit that has three sides of exposure, but not much at all in the way of community facilities. It serves as a kind of stack of residences," young Gibbs explains.

Some critics of the high rise apartments, noting that those built in the last few years have not always proceeded quickly to full occupancy, contend people just don't like to live in them.

"They're cold," says one critic. "And, have you ever run a baby carriage in and out of one of those elevators day in and day out. It's no fun."

Killingsworth counters "the key to this is a way of life, and we're still a little premature. It's like when they built the large projects out on Wilshire Boulevard before World War II. At first they were almost a complete loss. Now, of course, they're considered one of the best buys in Southern California."

"You've heard of Manhattan haven't you," seconds Gibbs.

Still, Gibbs conceeds, the high rise does encounter problems—mainly the automobile.

"Every family has a couple of cars and, if they have children, maybe three or four," he says. "We try to stick the cars underground—an expensive solution but the only one we have. Rapid transit might help, but we don't have it."

Another solution, Gibbs suggests, are projects designed around less use of the automobile. Here the cluster or "row housing" of planned communities comes to the fore.

"IN ENGLAND, Philadelphia or some of the other places where row housing is done, even New York, it's very pleasant," says Killingsworth. "It has the character of single family homes, because you have the gardens and other things that go with it."

One distinct advantage of attached housing, explains Killingsworth, is that "you don't have these ridiculous side yard setbacks. Right now we usually have to stay four feet from the property on each residential dwelling, so you have eight feet of sort of no man's land between dwellings, where if you have a common wall you pick up eight feet of property."

One keynote of future architectural efforts in the Long Beach area will be to achieve a community feeling, the architects agree. Eventually this may mean clusters of attached housing sitting on superblocks, they say.

"But in an existing community the thread you can pull it all together with is your trees," Lockett notes.

Gibbs cites the fences, white walls and red tile roofs of Rolling Hills and Palos Verdes as examples of what can be done with architectural patterns:

"They have attempted to control the many different ways architecture can go by saying you've got to have a particular kind of roof and you've got to paint the major portion of the walls a particular color. And, you can't use certain funny looking windows. Even though individually the buildings are sometimes pretty dull—and a lot of times they're fine—the overall result seems to be a little more rewarding than what most communities end up with nowadays."

Downey

By SCOTT E. TEMPLE
Mayor of Downey

Downey, a charter city, will in the year of 1970 have a population estimated at 104,000. The assessed valuation should reach $200 million or more.

The current annual budget of approximately $6 million will, of necessity, be greater. Although the budget will be increased, no additional city taxes will probably be levied since new sales tax revenue should offset this increase. As in the past, there should be no great problem in carrying adequate reserve funds forward each year.

The 196-bed Downey Municipal Hospital will be a reality in the year 1970. There is reason to believe that plans will be in the process of preparation for the second phase of hospital expansion by this time.

Through continued cooperation with the School District, a new 500-seat theater for the performing arts will be constructed and in use by both the children and adults. One or more new swimming pools for joint use of the schools and our other citizens will be constructed.

By the year 1970, the old downtown core area should have received a complete renovation and be enjoying a new expanded business experience.

like in 1970.

The architects talk of using trees, roofs, painted fences and dead streets to lend a community feeling to residential neighborhoods. They call for the rehabilitation of older neighborhoods "with loving care."

And Lockett and Killingsworth, at least, see the coming shoreline developments as an important stimulus to downtown development, part of such a "renaissance you're not going to know this city in four years." Gibbs worries about the direction such development will take, due to city ordinances he contends permit the building of "instant slums."

THE IMPACT of zoning on architectural trends piques the expert.

They are particularly appreciative of the city's new R-5 zone which "is worded in such a way that it's unfeasible to build on a single lot," Gibbs explains. "With it you can create these row house possibilities or maybe get together larger pieces of ground for communities of superblocks."

The R-5 zone one also means, says Killingsworth, that coming high rise buildings "will be tall towers sitting within open spaces, which they should be."

Gibbs is offended, however, by zoning laws that permit "a lot of the apartment houses, two story ones that are still being legally built in areas just being transformed from single family residences, to create somewhat of an instant slum."

He contends, "From the moment they're put in they aren't very nice and they just keep going downhill. Yet the fact that the investment is there means you can't do anything better with the land until the thing is depreciated."

In the immediate future, the architects would like to see existing residential areas revitalized.

"Loving care . . . a carefully handled tree planting program and encouragement for cleaning the whole area up" is important for areas like Los Cerritos, Cal Heights, Bixby Knolls and Belmont Heights, Killingsworth says.

Belmont Shores, on the other hand, "is one area that could be converted over to attached or cluster housing so easily because you have these tiny lots and yet they're so close to all the amenities like shopping, theaters, the beach, everything," he notes.

Whether future residential architecture will lean increasingly to the modernistic "contemporary" designs, or hark back as consistently as in the past to traditional or colonial inspiration may be a question "of fashion."

"It's like women's clothing, unfortunately," Killingsworth says." "All of a sudden now we're on a Spanish kick. We've been through the French. What's next, I would suspect, might be English," he explains. "So many people who are buying these days are looking for roots and they want something like mama or papa had. Also, people are buying up and they're buying what they think is fashionable for the next higher income bracket, or the second bracket up."

Killingsworth would prefer "glass houses." But he concedes, "it takes a special type of person to live in these. And yet you can get a good rooty feeling from the texture of the woods in a Frank Lloyd Wright home."

"While the pressure won't be on the single family house in five years to the degree it will be in ten, the pressures are there now," Killingsworth contends.

Automated Justice Not Far Away

Advancement in Law Process Affects L.B.

By BOB SCHMIDT
Court Reporter

Society is undergoing a painful permutation, and the Law—the process by which men live with each other in tranquillity—is responding to the change, as it has always done.

A Long Beach lawyer, put to sleep in 1965 and awakened in 1970, might find more changes in his profession and its related interests than in any five-year period since a Neanderthal-type negotiated the first contract by buying out another guy's interest in a cave.

Los Angeles County Courts—and Long Beach in particular—don't have anywhere near the congestion problems that courts elsewhere in the country have, but there is still congestion and it might be a major problem by 1970 unless preventative measures are taken.

It is those measures, some of which we can anticipate now, which will cause the Rip Van Winkle Jr. Long Beach lawyer to rub his eyes in disbelief in 1970.

AUTOMATION and its kin, systems engineering and data processing, will revolutionize the administration of justice just as it is already revolutionizing other aspects of life.

Imagine, for instance, two lawyers and their respective clients standing ready to go trial in, say Long Beach, but no Long Beach courts being available. Now, everybody just sits and waits until a Long Beach court is free.

Which might be days.

But by 1970, a clerk simply appraises by computer in downtown Los Angeles that case number such-and-such is ready and needs a judge and a courtroom. The computer already has been advised which courts in other jurisdictions are free, and the computer informs the clerk in Long Beach of the nearest available courtroom.

The litigants use either rapid transit and/or the improved freeway system to get from here to anywhere in half an hour or less, the court records are dispatched via facsimile reproduction or some similar device, and the case goes to trial.

Emphasis on pre-trial judicial consideration may also help by reducing requests for postponements because lawyers aren't ready on the previously agreed-on trial date.

Still another possible change which the 1965 lawyer wouldn't recognize is the use of administrative agencies instead of courts to hear such matters as automobile accident claims and marital disputes.

IN LONG BEACH, there will probably be changes on the outside as well as the inside of the County Building at 415 W. Ocean Blvd. Plans have already been drawn to extend the six-story building some 70 feet toward Chestnut Avenue, adding four Superior Courts, one Municipal Court, and a number of other county offices.

No timetable is set yet, but the eleven Superior Court departments (nine courts, one juvenile hearing room and one probate examiner's office) are currently operating near capacity, and it is only a matter of time before the need is immediate.

There is a possibility that the County Building may not have to be enlarged, but this possibility involves a drastic—and as yet unplanned—change in the Long Beach scene.

If the city builds a courthouse of its own, and shifts the seven Municipal Courts now operating in the County Building into the new structure, it would, of course, free the present courtrooms for Superior Court use.

While a Long Beach city court building is not even considered now, two other court buildings in the area are scheduled for completion in 1967, and each will take a number of cases currently falling in the jurisdiction of the South District (Long Beach) of the countywide Superior Court.

A 16-court structure in Torrance is already underway, and a courthouse will be built in Norwalk to accommodate cases now being filed in Compton, South Gate, Downey, part of Bellflower, and other communities in the area.

A portion of the work now being done by Long Beach courts will be siphoned off by the new buildings, but there will still be an increase, not a decrease, in the caseload handled by the Ocean Boulevard structure.

There are several reasons for this. One is that the crime rate will continue to increase, as the "crime-prone" 14-29-year-old age bracket increases in numbers. Not only is the number of crimes committed expected to increase, but the number of suspects demanding jury trials is expected to climb, so that by 1970 there may be more trials conducted than courts are now equipped to handle.

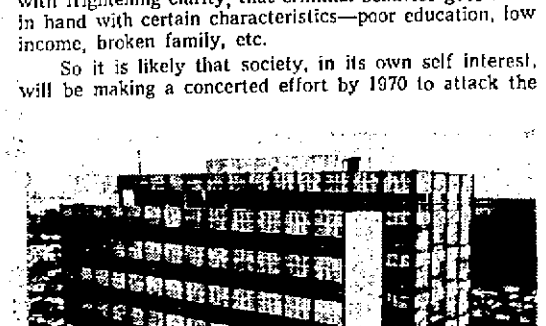
THE WAR ON POVERTY'S Neighborhood Legal Services program, together with the Group Legal Services concept now being studied by the State Bar of California, would be expected—provided both are in existence in 1970—to educate more and more people about what their legal rights are—and to persuade more and more of them to seek redress for grievances in the courts instead of on a sidewalk somewhere.

It is likely, that the most drastic alteration in the administration of justice during the next five years will have to do with the fight against crime.

Law enforcement will be using techniques and equipment of such sophistication and refinement that the business of capturing crooks may become one-sided, in favor of the good guys.

And an emphasis, to a degree unknown today, will be placed on preventing people from becoming criminals in the first place. Analysis of criminal statistics shows, with frightening clarity, that criminal behavior goes hand in hand with certain characteristics—poor education, low income, broken family, etc.



So it is likely that society, in its own self interest, will be making a concerted effort by 1970 to attack the social causes of crime, and it is also likely that that effort will dwarf the effort being made in 1966.

Along with trying to keep people from becoming criminals, and along with swifter, more certain apprehension of those who do, will come more effective treatment of criminals in prison.

To begin with, the very word "crime" is likely to be redefined to mean specifically offenses against some one else's person or property. Some acts now called crimes, such as homosexuality, prostitution, gambling, narcotics use, may be identified differently in 1970, and may be the concern of an agency other than police.

The next five years will certainly show a marked alteration in the mechanics of the administration of justice and the application of Law, but the purpose and object of Law—enabling men to live one with another, in peace—will be the same as it has been forever.

Under construction in Torrance is this five-story, 16-court structure for the Southwest District Courts. Building is in the modern Torrance Civic Center. When completed, it will relieve congestion in Long Beach courts.

Police Agencies Face Stubborn Problems

In return for higher enforcement expenditures, Long Beach and other cities can expect, and demand, more protection and safer streets from both a crime and traffic standpoint.

Specialized computers and automated techniques, products of a growing space-age technology, will be introduced into the field of law enforcement. Steps are now underway to automate record-keeping, statistical compilations, traffic information and various clerical tasks.

An example of such computerization is the AUTOSTATIS system currently being used by the Long Beach Police Department and other agencies to keep tabs on thousands of automobiles.

Feeding specific data—gathered by patrol units—into a central computer by teletype, the police determine in seconds if a car is stolen, how long it has been missing, the agency originating the theft report and the ownership status of the vehicle.

"There will be a growing trend toward the use of computers in police work," Long Beach Police Chief William Mooney says.

"DURING THE NEXT few years computer experimentation will include storage of stolen property information, through which recovered items . . . guns, jewelry, appliances and the like . . . can be identified by description and serial number.

"Computers will be used to check and report criminal records, traffic flow data, and other information, work that now requires many clerical manhours and slows police activity," he adds.

Chief Records Clerk Loren Harvey says a state-wide warrant file, handled by computer, would prove more efficient than the current system of individual warrant details in scattered cities.

Extensive progress also is expected in the field of police communications. Additional radio channels are already planned.

Miniaturized "on board" computers—programmed to a central system and carried in police cars—will make split-second record checks and warrant searches for patrol officers without present delays.

Long-playing tape recorders, also portable, will be used to store reports, witness statements and important information which currently must be handwritten, then later dictated to a typist or recorder for transcription. The savings in manhours and elimination of the need for additional typists is expected to pay for such devices.

Improved accuracy and speed will be an additional benefit.

At the end of a patrol watch the tapes can be fed into a high-speed transcribing unit capable not only of making the typed report, but also of producing necessary copies.

BUILT-IN PLAYBACK devices, using radio frequencies, may provide an hour-by-hour report system for command officers at the central headquarters.

Advanced communications systems are already being built and tested by police departments in St. Louis, Chicago and Los Angeles, and the use of "on board" computers for patrol cars is currently being studied by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office.

Electronic advancements will see wide-spread use in traffic control and safety, Chief Mooney predicts.

"In the near future a traffic officer reaching the scene of a freeway accident will be able to activate a small transmitter which will produce a broadcast through the radios of approaching cars, warning them to avoid the congested area," the chief said.

Long stretches of high-speed roadways will be "patrolled" by compact television cameras similar to those carried on current space shots, and electronic "roadblocks" will be able to stop and hold the cars of traffic violators.

Plans are now being made to improve the Long Beach department's scientific investigation capability. Chief Mooney says approximately $20,000 will be spent in the next few months to purchase and install new equipment in the police laboratory.

"In the light of recent decisions, it appears that the courts will be calling for more and more scientific testimony and expert knowledge in dealing with the physical evidence of a crime," the chief said.

Fingerprints, long the stock of the crime fiction writer, are becoming more and more important. A new device, already in use, is capable of making a photo copy of a latent print which can be quickly transmitted by wire-photo machine to any city in the United States.

During the next few years important improvements are expected in police weapons and field equipment. Non-disabling weapons such as tranquilizers and dye guns are being studied as possible additions to the law enforcement arsenal.

"FOR YEARS the policeman has had nothing to combat the criminal with except a gun and a club. It's time to give him a little more to work with," one federal official said recently.

Although use of some advanced weapons may be more than five years away, studies and tests are presently under way on the tranquilizer, delivered by an air gun. The device offers new possibilities in dealing with rabid dogs and wild animals, and may find an application in the capture of criminals.

The dye gun, built like the Army's bazooka, can hurl a concentration of dye to cover a fleeing car up to 300 yard away. Once the car is marked it can be spotted and trapped, thus eliminating the high-speed chases and running gun battles which sometime kill police officers and endanger citizens.

Another weapon under consideration is the steel wand, a folding foil similar to the one used by Japanese police. When the wand is compressed, it looks like a small cannister. Carried in the officers hand or pocket, it can be snapped out to a four-foot length to disarm a knife-wielding attacker or hold a belligerent assailant at bay.

The objective of weapon studies, according to Quinn Tamm, executive director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, is to provide officers with means of combating violence effectively with a minimum of blood shed and the maximum safety for the public.

Chief Mooney, however, notes that despite limited adoption of some new weapons, the standard police equipment—.38 caliber service revolver, handcuffs and nightstick—probably will see service for many years.

"Our present weapons are proven," the chief explains, "while many of these new devices such as rocket guns are too powerful for practical use, or too experimental for safety."

Besides improvements in weaponry and equipment, police experts foresee an increase in the likes of special enforcement details, underwater search and recovery teams and air-mobile traffic enforcement and control squads, outfitted and trained for certain assignments.

MANPOWER LOOMS as one of the most critical problems facing not only the Long Beach Police Department, but all Southern California law enforcement agencies during the next half decade.

Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess has called for doubling the size of every law enforcement agency in Los Angeles County. In line with this, the sheriff has requested 1,500 additional deputies he added to his current 5,000-man force.

The California Highway Patrol has already announced plans to hire 3,500 men by 1969, almost doubling its present strength.

"These men, along with those needed to increase the size of local police departments and to fill vacancies created by retirements, are all being recruited from the same manpower pool," Lt. Don Tubbs, Long Beach training officer, points out.

"Larger departments and agencies, with higher pay and more inducements, attract the better applicants and create a recruiting problem for smaller departments," he adds.

Retirements from the Los Angeles Police Department alone will provide more than 400 vacancies in 1966, nearly 500 in 1967, and more than 500 in 1968.

Chief Mooney says he expects the present 604-man Long Beach Police Department to be increased 25% by 1970, to a 750-officer force.

At the same time, he says, the standards for applicants may also be raised.

"There is a growing need for better educated police officers in our more professionalized field," the chief says, "and men who can now become officers with only a high school education, will soon have to complete two years of college, or possibly obtain a degree."

INCREASED PAY will make it possible to attract college-trained applicants to the law enforcement field, the chief says. He expects the salary for a patrolman to approach $1,000 montly by 1970.

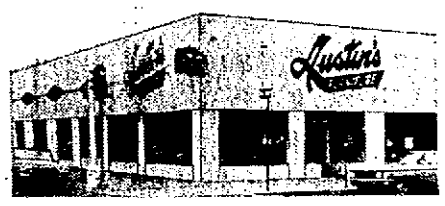
Another major problem facing law enforcement during the next half-decade will be created by recent court decisions challenging long established police procedures.

"I think the courts will examine some of the decisions very carefully in an effort to establish definite guidelines for police actions in such areas as civil rights, arrests and search and seizure.

"At the same time, I expect more of our present procedures to be challenged, and to be either upheld or changed," the chief said.

In an effort to meet both the problem of manpower and adverse court decisions, Chief Mooney and his department are turning to improved and intensified training.

"Our program will reflect the need for more training in the law, and in the humanities," the chief said.



"Plans are already being made to add 12 to 16 additional hours to the basic training in dealing with the general public and minority groups.

"More emphasis will be placed on becoming familiar with the laws and court decisions which affect our activities," Mooney says.

"For years, the policeman has had nothing to combat the criminal with except a gun and a club. It's time to give him a little more . . ."

Torrance

By EDWARD J. FERRARO

Color the next five years rosy.

There is a "Pied Piper" ring whenever the City of Torrance is mentioned. The population increase of Torrance since 1940 records one of the most spectacular growth patterns of any city in the United States. Only four cities in the nation exceeded Torrance in percentage of population growth during the 1950-60 decade—Garden Grove and Anaheim, Calif.; Hampton, Va., and Tucson, Ariz. With only 6% of the land area, Torrance contributed more than 25% of the total population gain in southwest Los Angeles, including Long Beach. By 1970 Torrance should have a population of 165,000—only four years away. At the present time Torrance is the third largest city in the Los Angeles County.

To meet the prospect of a bright tomorrow, the forward-looking Torrance City Council has laid the groundwork for these major projects:

1. MODIFIED LIBRARY SYSTEM—complete revision updating procedural improvement of the city-wide library system, including provision for a central library on the Civic Center.

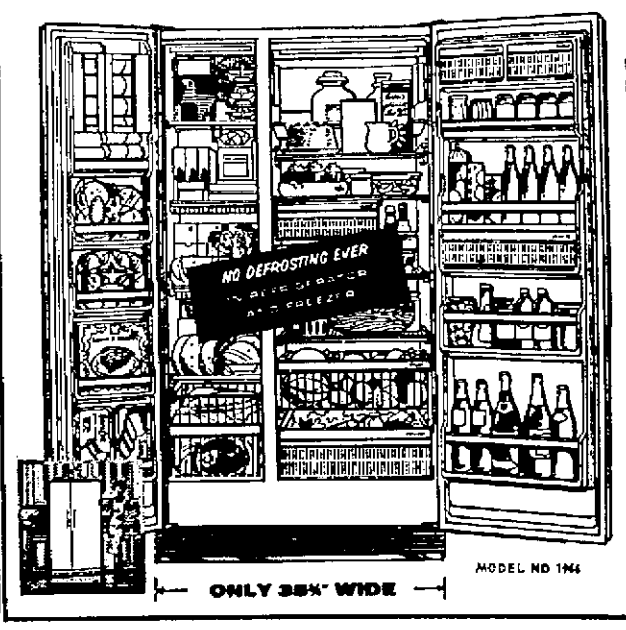
2. A CIVIC AUDITORIUM—now undergoing feasibility studies, the auditorium also is proposed on a Civic Center site. When completed it will serve as a regional center for not only Torrance but the entire South Bay.

3. JOSLYN CENTER—with part of this project already open and serving the community's cultural and recreational needs, the remaining phases of this construction program will be completed during the next five years.

Garden Grove

By GEORGE HONOLD
Mayor of Garden Grove

In 1961 the "bedroom community" of Garden Grove was named as the fastest growing city in the state. Things have slowed down somewhat since then, things look good and we are still growing.



Hampered somewhat by outward expansion, the move during the next five years will be high-rise to help accommodate the estimated 130,000 resident anticipated by 1970.

We will always be a bedroom community, but we will attempt to balance this status with a continuing rise in industrial and business growth. Aiding this all-important increment to the city's future will be the completion of the Garden Grove Freeway and adjacent freeways.

Automated Justice Not Far Away

Advancement in Law Process Affects L.B.

By BOB SCHMIDT
Court Reporter

Society is undergoing a painful permutation, and the Law—the process by which men live with each other in tranquillity—is responding to the change, as it has always done.

A Long Beach lawyer, put to sleep in 1965 and awakened in 1970, might find more changes in his profession and its related interests than in any five-year period since a Neanderthal-type negotiated the first contract by buying out another guy's interest in a cave.

Los Angeles County Courts—and Long Beach in particular—don't have anywhere near the congestion problems that courts elsewhere in the country have, but there is still congestion and it might be a major problem by 1970 unless preventative measures are taken.

It is those measures, some of which we can anticipate now, which will cause the Rip Van Winkle Jr. Long Beach lawyer to rub his eyes in disbelief in 1970.

AUTOMATION and its kin, systems engineering and data processing, will revolutionize the administration of justice just as it is already revolutionizing other aspects of life.

Imagine, for instance, two lawyers and their respective clients standing ready to go trial in, say Long Beach, but no Long Beach courts being available. Now, everybody just sits and waits until a Long Beach court is free.

Which might be days.

But by 1970, a clerk simply appraises by computer in downtown Los Angeles that case number such-and-such is ready and needs a judge and a courtroom. The computer already has been advised which courts in other jurisdictions are free, and the computer informs the clerk in Long Beach of the nearest available courtroom.

The litigants use either rapid transit and/or the improved freeway system to get from here to anywhere in half an hour or less, the court records are dispatched via facsimile reproduction or some similar device, and the case goes to trial.

Emphasis on pre-trial judicial consideration may also help by reducing requests for postponements because lawyers aren't ready on the previously agreed-on trial date.

Still another possible change which the 1965 lawyer wouldn't recognize is the use of administrative agencies instead of courts to hear such matters as automobile accident claims and marital disputes.

IN LONG BEACH, there will probably be changes on the outside as well as the inside of the County Building at 415 W. Ocean Blvd. Plans have already been drawn to extend the six-story building some 70 feet toward Chestnut Avenue, adding four Superior Courts, one Municipal Court, and a number of other county offices.

No timetable is set yet, but the eleven Superior Court departments (nine courts, one juvenile hearing room and one probate examiner's office) are currently operating near capacity, and it is only a matter of time before the need is immediate.

There is a possibility that the County Building may not have to be enlarged, but this possibility involves a drastic—and as yet unplanned—change in the Long Beach scene.

If the city builds a courthouse of its own, and shifts the seven Municipal Courts now operating in the County Building into the new structure, it would, of course, free the present courtrooms for Superior Court use.

While a Long Beach city court building is not even considered now, two other court buildings in the area are scheduled for completion in 1967, and each will take a number of cases currently falling in the jurisdiction of the South District (Long Beach) of the countywide Superior Court.

A 16-court structure in Torrance is already underway, and a courthouse will be built in Norwalk to accommodate cases now being filed in Compton, South Gate, Downey, part of Bellflower, and other communities in the area.

A portion of the work now being done by Long Beach courts will be siphoned off by the new buildings, but there will still be an increase, not a decrease, in the caseload handled by the Ocean Boulevard structure.

There are several reasons for this. One is that the crime rate will continue to increase, as the "crime-prone" 14-29-year-old age bracket increases in numbers. Not only is the number of crimes committed expected to increase, but the number of suspects demanding jury trials is expected to climb, so that by 1970 there may be more trials conducted than courts are now equipped to handle.

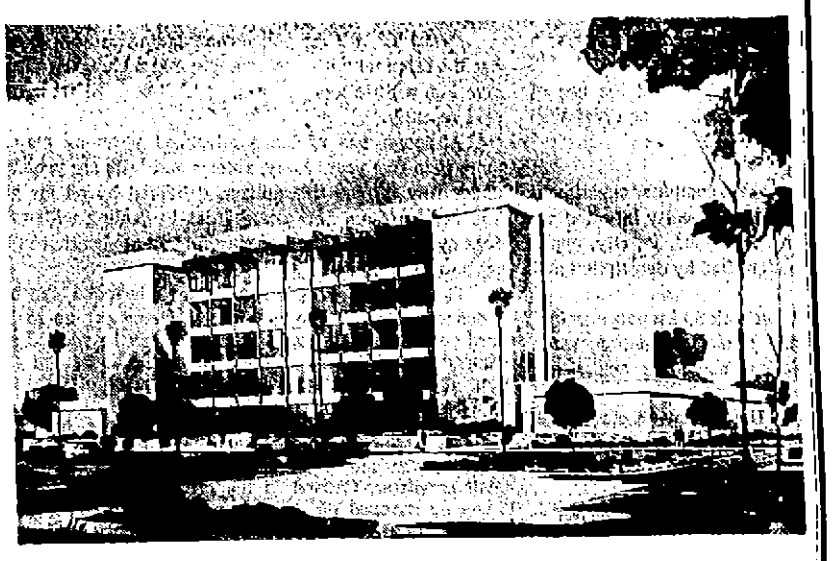
THE WAR ON POVERTY'S Neighborhood Legal Services program, together with the Group Legal Services concept now being studied by the State Bar of California, would be expected—provided both are in existence in 1970—to educate more and more people about what their legal rights are—and to persuade more and more of them to seek redress for grievances in the courts instead of on a sidewalk somewhere.

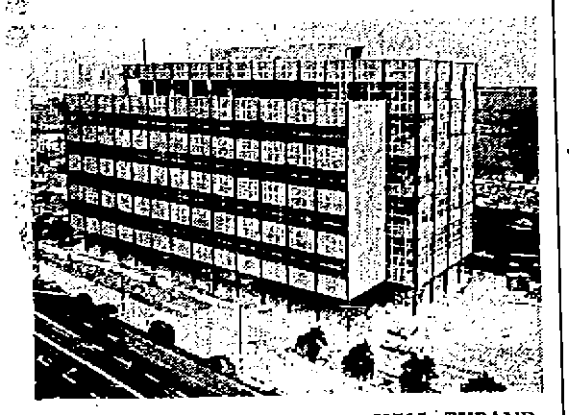
It is likely, that the most drastic alteration in the administration of justice during the next five years will have to do with the fight against crime.

Law enforcement will be using techniques and equipment of such sophistication and refinement that the business of capturing crooks may become one-sided, in favor of the good guys.



And an emphasis, to a degree unknown today, will be placed on preventing people from becoming criminals in the first place. Analysis of criminal statistics shows, with frightening clarity, that criminal behavior goes hand in hand with certain characteristics—poor education, low income, broken family, etc.

So it is likely that society, in its own self interest, will be making a concerted effort by 1970 to attack the social causes of crime, and it is also likely that that effort will dwarf the effort being made in 1966.



Along with trying to keep people from becoming criminals, and along with swifter, more certain apprehension of those who do, will come more effective treatment of criminals in prison.

To begin with, the very word "crime" is likely to be redefined to mean specifically offenses against some one else's person or property. Some acts now called crimes, such as homosexuality, prostitution, gambling, narcotics use, may be identified differently in 1970, and may be the concern of an agency other than police.

The next five years will certainly show a marked alteration in the mechanics of the administration of justice and the application of Law, but the purpose and object of Law—enabling men to live one with another, in peace—will be the same as it has been forever.

Under construction in Torrance is this five-story, 16-court structure for the Southwest District Courts. Building is in the modern Torrance Civic Center. When completed, it will relieve congestion in Long Beach courts.

Artesia

By HENRY DIRKSEN
Mayor of Artesia

Continued harmony within the City of Artesia along with continuing and closer relationship with our neighboring cities—a basic requirement for progress in any community—is one of the major goals of our city government.

The City of Artesia, incorporated in May 1959, can be well pleased with the progress — major storm drains, sewer installations and the construction of a Community Center Building in Artesia Park.

I look forward to new projects, such as the widening and improvement of Pioneer Boulevard and South Street as well as improvements on many residential streets.

Municipal projects envisioned during the next half decade include additional park areas to serve the recreational needs of the residents in the northern section of the city, additional off-street parking facilities to better serve the shoppers of Artesia, a city swimming pool, a new city hall and additional cultural activities.

The population of the city at the time of incorporation was around 10,000. The present population exceeds 13,612 and developments projected for the city in the next half decade call for a population of 17,000 by 1970.

Los Alamitos

By CHARLES A. LONG
Mayor of Los Alamitos

The City of Los Alamitos incorporated on March 1, 1960, with a population of 4200. Since incorporation the population has increased to 8400. During the next one-half decade, we anticipate reaching 16,000.

The 12,500-person community of Rossmoor forms an integral part of the area. The consolidation of Los Alamitos and Rossmoor would substantially benefit all parties concerned and would be a long step in the direction of a "no tax city."

week, face-to-face encounters in taverns, beaches and business, and outreach to "communities of alienation."

In brief, he said, what is called "unconventional evangelism," but "is actually in line with the New Testament." Weekly worship will still be the hub from which "the entire congregation finds its motivation and moves out" along with "small 'house church' groups oriented to neighborhood and vocation."

* * * *

RABBI YOSEF MILLER of Temple Beth Sholom termed himself a robust optimist as far as the immediate and long range future of Judaism are concerned. "We have more children studying than ever, and adults are coming back to fundamental study."

In interfaith understanding, the rabbi commented, Long Beach "is making only a beginning. Oh, there are good formal relationships — very good, in fact — and personal friendships, but only in the past year, largely stimulated by the Vatican Council, has there been a start toward genuine dialogue."

If those of different faiths hopefully "continue to grope together," the rabbi said, they will not only find "quite a bit we didn't know about each other," but ways to work together on pressing social, economic and racial problems. "The three poverty areas designated in Long Beach puts religious leaders on the spot. In the next five years, we should see more cooperation, viewing our city from the spiritual point of view rather than separate clerical points of view."

There has never been a more opportune time, according to Rev. Ponder W. Gilliland of First Nazarene, "from Pentacost until now, for effective church work than this day, in Long Beach. It seems to me people respond to the church more readily here than any place I have ever lived."

Paramount

By WALTER SCOTT
Mayor of Paramount

The City of Paramount has genuinely proved itself the "City of Progress." The once small and insignificant rural community has become a thriving metropolis of 34,250 people, and is still growing. Population projections show that next year's citizenry will reach 36,000, and by 1970 will arrive at 40,000.

The eight year old community, incorporated in 1957, came to be a mark of pride in the minds of its citizens. Paramount residents have a farsighted Council and Administration to thank for their city being so exceptionally well planned.

The "City of Progress" is still progressing. Plan for wider streets, storm drains, and improved street lighting, have already been formulated. Construction of a swimming pool, new fire station, and library, are also seen for the near future.

Signal Hill

By DON BRADSHAW
Mayor of Signal Hill

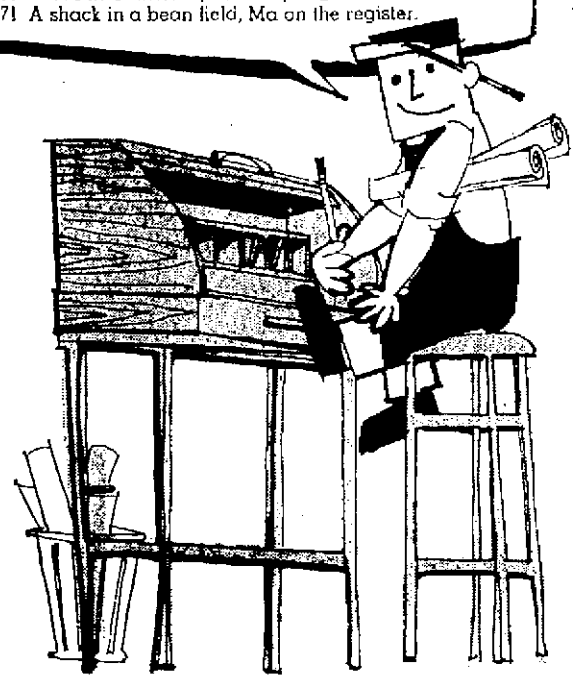
The present Signal Hill population of over 6,000 and conservative predictions of a population of over 10,000 by 1970 are solid indications that a City previously known for oil production is now becoming a well balanced industrial and residential hub.

Renovation of the City Hall is now in the final stage. A beautiful new, well equipped library has now been opened on the ground floor of City Hall; the completely remodeled Council Chamber adds to the dignity of the city.

Another current project, also in line with the city's beautification goals, is the removal of all oil derricks from "the hill" by July 1, 1966 as well as the removal of sumps and abandoned oil wells. This should provide a strong impetus to the already impending residential development.

Our principal project of tomorrow is of special interest not only to citizens of Signal Hill but to the entire area—the widening of Willow Street. This major artery will be expanded from the present right of way of 60 feet to one of 110 feet.

Lomita



By CLYDE BERNHARDT
Mayor of Lomita

Lomita, completing its first full year of operation in 1965, has established a five-year capital improvements program for public facilities.

The program is being coordinated with the development of a general plan for the city, being prepared by planning consultant Neal Irving.

Lomita, with a present population of 19,864 persons, expects to reach 24,000 persons by 1970.

Police Agencies Face Stubborn Problems

In return for higher enforcement expenditures, Long Beach and other cities can expect, and demand, more protection and safer streets from both a crime and traffic standpoint.

Specialized computers and automated techniques, products of a growing space-age technology, will be introduced into the field of law enforcement. Steps are now underway to automate record-keeping, statistical compilations, traffic information and various clerical tasks.

An example of such computerization is the AUTOSTATIS system currently being used by the Long Beach Police Department and other agencies to keep tabs on thousands of automobiles.

Feeding specific data—gathered by patrol units—into a central computer by teletype, the police determine in seconds if a car is stolen, how long it has been missing, the agency originating the theft report and the ownership status of the vehicle.

"There will be a growing trend toward the use of computers in police work," Long Beach Police Chief William Mooney says.

"DURING THE NEXT few years computer experimentation will include storage of stolen property information, through which recovered items . . . guns, jewelry, appliances and the like . . . can be identified by description and serial number.

"Computers will be used to check and report criminal records, traffic flow data, and other information, work that now requires many clerical manhours and slows police activity," he adds.

Chief Records Clerk Loren Harvey says a state-wide warrant file, handled by computer, would prove more efficient than the current system of individual warrant details in scattered cities.

Extensive progress also is expected in the field of police communications. Additional radio channels are already planned.

Miniaturized "on board" computers—programmed to a central system and carried in police cars—will make split-second record checks and warrant searches for patrol officers without present delays.

Long-playing tape recorders, also portable, will be used to store reports, witness statements and important information which currently must be handwritten, then later dictated to a typist or recorder for transcription. The savings in manhours and elimination of the need for additional typists is expected to pay for such devices.

Improved accuracy and speed will be an additional benefit.

At the end of a patrol watch the tapes can be fed into a high-speed transcribing unit capable not only of making the typed report, but also of producing necessary copies.

BUILT-IN PLAYBACK devices, using radio frequencies, may provide an hour-by-hour report system for command officers at the central headquarters.

Advanced communications systems are already being built and tested by police departments in St. Louis, Chicago and Los Angeles, and the use of "on board" computers for patrol cars is currently being studied by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office.

Electronic advancements will see wide-spread use in traffic control and safety, Chief Mooney predicts.

"In the near future a traffic officer reaching the scene of a freeway accident will be able to activate a small transmitter which will produce a broadcast through the radios of approaching cars, warning them to avoid the congested area," the chief said.

Long stretches of high-speed roadways will be "patrolled" by compact television cameras similar to those carried on current space shots, and electronic "roadblocks" will be able to stop and hold the cars of traffic violators.

Plans are now being made to improve the Long Beach department's scientific investigation capability. Chief Mooney says approximately $20,000 will be spent in the next few months to purchase and install new equipment in the police laboratory.

"In the light of recent decisions, it appears that the courts will be calling for more and more scientific testimony and expert knowledge in dealing with the physical evidence of a crime," the chief said.

Fingerprints, long the stock of the crime fiction writer, are becoming more and more important. A new device, already in use, is capable of making a photo copy of a latent print which can be quickly transmitted by wire-photo machine to any city in the United States.

During the next few years important improvements are expected in police weapons and field equipment. Non-disabling weapons such as tranquilizers and dye guns are being studied as possible additions to the law enforcement arsenal.

"FOR YEARS the policeman has had nothing to combat the criminal with except a gun and a club. It's time to give him a little more to work with," one federal official said recently.

Although use of some advanced weapons may be more than five years away, studies and tests are presently under way on the tranquilizer, delivered by an air gun. The device offers new possibilities in dealing with rabid dogs and wild animals, and may find an application in the capture of criminals.

The dye gun, built like the Army's bazooka, can hurl a concentration of dye to cover a fleeing car up to 300 yard away. Once the car is marked it can be spotted and trapped, thus eliminating the high-speed chases and running gun battles which sometime kill police officers and endanger citizens.

Another weapon under consideration is the steel wand, a folding foil similar to the one used by Japanese police. When the wand is compressed, it looks like a small cannister. Carried in the officers hand or pocket, it can be snapped out to a four-foot length to disarm a knife-wielding attacker or hold a belligerent assailant at bay.

The objective of weapon studies, according to Quinn Tamm, executive director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, is to provide officers with means of combating violence effectively with a minimum of blood shed and the maximum safety for the public.

Chief Mooney, however, notes that despite limited adoption of some new weapons, the standard police equipment—.38 caliber service revolver, handcuffs and nightstick—probably will see service for many years.

"Our present weapons are proven," the chief explains, "while many of these new devices such as rocket guns are too powerful for practical use, or too experimental for safety."

Besides improvements in weaponry and equipment, police experts foresee an increase in the likes of special enforcement details, underwater search and recovery teams and air-mobile traffic enforcement and control squads, outfitted and trained for certain assignments.

MANPOWER LOOMS as one of the most critical problems facing not only the Long Beach Police Department, but all Southern California law enforcement agencies during the next half decade.

Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess has called for doubling the size of every law enforcement agency in Los Angeles County. In line with this, the sheriff has requested 1,500 additional deputies he added to his current 5,000-man force.

The California Highway Patrol has already announced plans to hire 3,500 men by 1969, almost doubling its present strength.

"These men, along with those needed to increase the size of local police departments and to fill vacancies created by retirements, are all being recruited from the same manpower pool," Lt. Don Tubbs, Long Beach training officer, points out.

"Larger departments and agencies, with higher pay and more inducements, attract the better applicants and create a recruiting problem for smaller departments," he adds.

Retirements from the Los Angeles Police Department alone will provide more than 400 vacancies in 1966, nearly 500 in 1967, and more than 500 in 1968.

Chief Mooney says he expects the present 604-man Long Beach Police Department to be increased 25% by 1970, to a 750-officer force.

At the same time, he says, the standards for applicants may also be raised.

"There is a growing need for better educated police officers in our more professionalized field," the chief says, "and men who can now become officers with only a high school education, will soon have to complete two years of college, or possibly obtain a degree."

INCREASED PAY will make it possible to attract college-trained applicants to the law enforcement field, the chief says. He expects the salary for a patrolman to approach $1,000 montly by 1970.

Another major problem facing law enforcement during the next half-decade will be created by recent court decisions challenging long established police procedures.

"I think the courts will examine some of the decisions very carefully in an effort to establish definite guidelines for police actions in such areas as civil rights, arrests and search and seizure.

"At the same time, I expect more of our present procedures to be challenged, and to be either upheld or changed," the chief said.

In an effort to meet both the problem of manpower and adverse court decisions, Chief Mooney and his department are turning to improved and intensified training.

"Our program will reflect the need for more training in the law, and in the humanities," the chief said.

"Plans are already being made to add 12 to 16 additional hours to the basic training in dealing with the general public and minority groups.

"More emphasis will be placed on becoming familiar with the laws and court decisions which affect our activities," Mooney says.

"For years, the policeman has had nothing to combat the criminal with except a gun and a club. It's time to give him a little more . . . "

Torrance

By EDWARD J. FERRARO

Color the next five years rosy.

There is a "Pied Piper" ring whenever the City of Torrance is mentioned. The population increase of Torrance since 1940 records one of the most spectacular growth patterns of any city in the United States. Only four cities in the nation exceeded Torrance in percentage of population growth during the 1950-60 decade—Garden Grove and Anaheim, Calif.; Hampton, Va., and Tucson, Ariz. With only 6% of the land area, Torrance contributed more than 25% of the total population gain in southwest Los Angeles, including Long Beach. By 1970 Torrance should have a population of 165,000—only four years away. At the present time Torrance is the third largest city in the Los Angeles County.

To meet the prospect of a bright tomorrow, the forward-looking Torrance City Council has laid the groundwork for these major projects:

1. MODIFIED LIBRARY SYSTEM—complete revision updating procedural improvement of the city-wide library system, including provision for a central library on the Civic Center.

2. A CIVIC AUDITORIUM—now undergoing feasibility studies, the auditorium also is proposed on a Civic Center site. When completed it will serve as a regional center for not only Torrance but the entire South Bay.

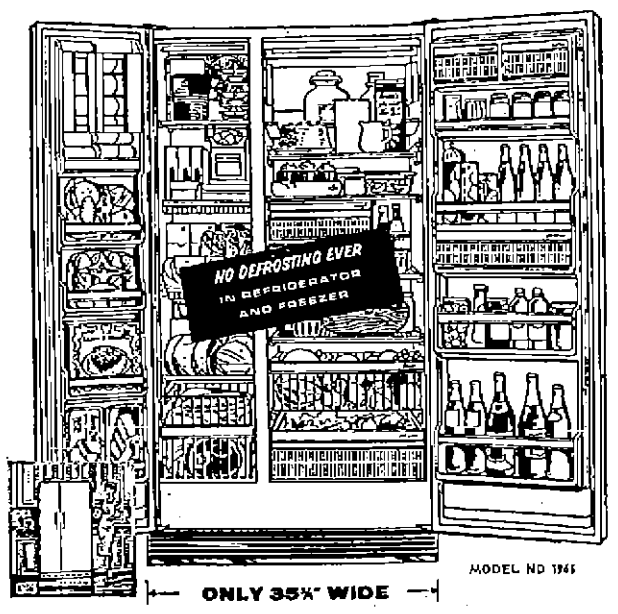
3. JOSLYN CENTER—with part of this project already open and serving the community's cultural and recreational needs, the remaining phases of this construction program will be completed during the next five years.

Garden Grove

By GEORGE HONOLD
Mayor of Garden Grove

In 1961 the "bedroom community" of Garden Grove was named as the fastest growing city in the state. Things have slowed down somewhat since then, things look good and we are still growing.

Hampered somewhat by outward expansion, the move during the next five years will be high-rise to help accommodate the estimated 130,000 resident anticipated by 1970.



We will always be a bedroom community, but we will attempt to balance this status with a continuing rise in industrial and business growth. Aiding this all-important increment to the city's future will be the completion of the Garden Grove Freeway and adjacent freeways.

Anaheim

By FRED KREIN
Mayor of Anaheim

When Anaheim was a fledging it acquired considerable renown for its wine producing industry.

The city today, offers recreation. And it is Melodyland and Disneyland that are expected to attract an estimated 200,000 residents and 10-million tourists annually by the end of this decade.

This recreation-incited growth, fertilized by such attractions opening this year as the Angel Baseball Stadium and the Anaheim Convention Hall, is expected to attract associated growth from industry and business.

As new residents move into the area, there will be an increased labor pool, which will attract industry, and the additional buying power will prompt new business to rise and flourish. Motels and hotels will also increase to satisfy a basic need of the folks from Tampa, Dubuque, and Provo.

Transportaation? This may also be solved before the end of the sixties. The city is studying how to solve the agonizing problem of transportation, but is still undecided as to what method—bus, tram or monorail.

Artesia

By HENRY DIRKSEN
Mayor of Artesia

Continued harmony within the City of Artesia along with continuing and closer relationship with our neighboring cities—a basic requirement for progress in any community—is one of the major goals of our city government.

The City of Artesia, incorporated in May 1959, can be well pleased with the progress — major storm drains, sewer installations and the construction of a Community Center Building in Artesia Park.

I look forward to new projects, such as the widening and improvement of Pioneer Boulevard and South Street as well as improvements on many residential streets.

Municipal projects envisioned during the next half decade include additional park areas to serve the recreational needs of the residents in the northern section of the city, additional off-street parking facilities to better serve the shoppers of Artesia, a city swimming pool, a new city hall and additional cultural activities.

The population of the city at the time of incorporation was around 10,000. The present population exceeds 13,612 and developments projected for the city in the next half decade call for a population of 17,000 by 1970.

Los Alamitos

By CHARLES A. LONG
Mayor of Los Alamitos

The City of Los Alamitos incorporated on March 1, 1960, with a population of 4200. Since incorporation the population has increased to 8400. During the next one-half decade, we anticipate reaching 16,000.

The 12,500-person community of Rossmoor forms an integral part of the area. The consolidation of Los Alamitos and Rossmoor would substantially benefit all parties concerned and would be a long step in the direction of a "no tax city."

New Winds for Christendom

week, face-to-face encounters in taverns, beaches and business, and outreach to "communities of alienation."

In brief, he said, what is called "unconventional evangelism," but "is actually in line with the New Testament." Weekly worship will still be the hub from which "the entire congregation finds its motivation and moves out" along with "small house church' groups oriented to neighborhood and vocation."

* * * *

RABBI YOSEF MILLER of Temple Beth Sholom termed himself a robust optimist as far as the immediate and long range future of Judaism are concerned. "We have more children studying than ever, and adults are coming back to fundamental study."

In interfaith understanding, the rabbi commented, Long Beach "is making only a beginning. Oh, there are good formal relationships — very good, in fact — and personal friendships, but only in the past year, largely stimulated by the Vatican Council, has there been a start toward genuine dialogue."

If those of different faiths hopefully "continue to grope together," the rabbi said, they will not only find "quite a bit we didn't know about each other," but ways to work together on pressing social, economic and racial problems. "The three poverty areas designated in Long Beach puts religious leaders on the spot. In the next five years, we should see more cooperation, viewing our city from the spiritual point of view rather than separate clerical points of view."

There has never been a more opportune time, according to Rev. Ponder W. Gilliland of First Nazarene, "from Pentacost until now, for effective church work than this day, in Long Beach. It seems to me people respond to the church more readily here than any place I have ever lived."

By WALTER SCOTT
Mayor of Paramount

The City of Paramount has genuinely proved itself the "City of Progress." The once small and insignificant rural community has become a thriving metropolis of 34,250 people, and is still growing. Population projections show that next year's citizenry will reach 36,000, and by 1970 will arrive at 40,000.

The eight year old community, incorporated in 1957, came to be a mark of pride in the minds of its citizens. Paramount residents have a farsighted Council and Administration to thank for their city being so exceptionally well planned.

The "City of Progress" is still progressing. Plan for wider streets, storm drains, and improved street lighting, have already been formulated. Construction of a swimming pool, new fire station, and library, are also seen for the near future.

Paramount

By DON BRADSHAW
Mayor of Signal Hill

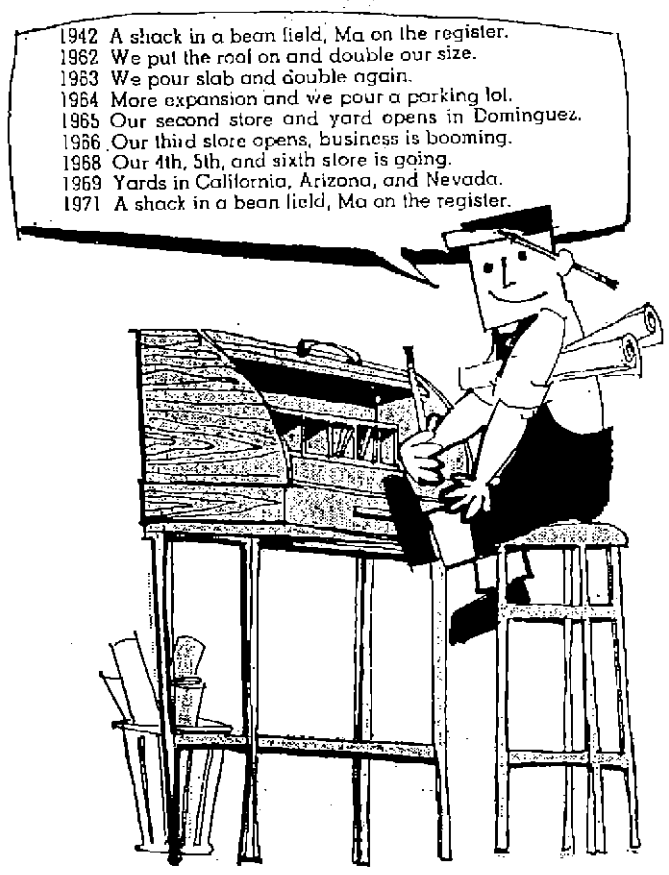
The present Signal Hill population of over 6,000 and conservative predictions of a population of over 10,000 by 1970 are solid indications that a City previously known for oil production is now becoming a well balanced industrial and residential hub.

Renovation of the City Hall is now in the final stage. A beautiful new, well equipped library has now been opened on the ground floor of City Hall; the completely remodeled Council Chamber adds to the dignity of the city.

Another current project, also in line with the city's beautification goals, is the removal of all oil derricks from "the hill" by July 1, 1966 as well as the removal of sumps and abandoned oil wells. This should provide a strong impetus to the already impending residential development.

Our principal project of tomorrow is of special interest not only to citizens of Signal Hill but to the entire area—the widening of Willow Street. This major artery will be expanded from the present right of way of 60 feet to one of 110 feet.

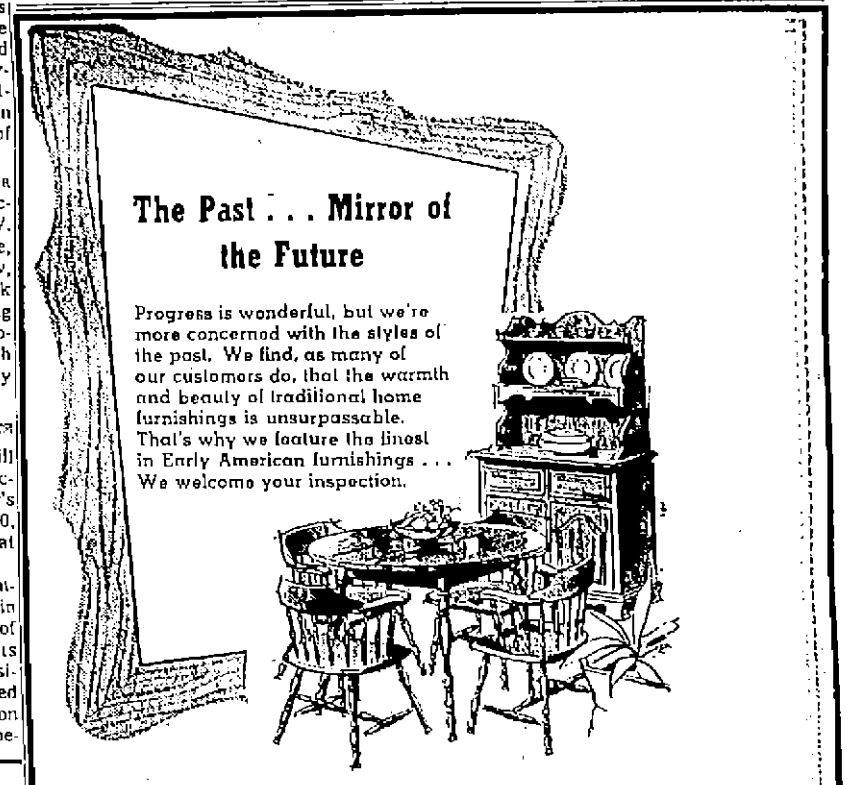
Signal Hill



By CLYDE BERNHARDT
Mayor of Lomita

Lomita, completing its first full year of operation in 1965, has established a five-year capital improvements program for public facilities.

The program is being coordinated with the development of a general plan for the city, being prepared by planning consultant Neal Irving.



Lomita, with a present population of 19,864 persons, expects to reach 24,000 persons by 1970.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE EVENING NEWS AND THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

Bert's Eye View

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

A RELATIVELY UNKNOWN 21-year-old English girl selected for television as the typical All-American college coed is currently the No. 1 date for singer Eddie Fisher.

The girl is Linda Foster, a curvesome blonde who has the coed role of Doris Royal on NBC-TV's (channel 4's) Friday night "Hank" series.

She's having a ball.

For never in her wildest dreams did Linda ever think she would be in show-business or be dating anyone like Eddie Fisher.

"Anything that has happened in the last three years has just been luck," she said.

Taking last developments first, she met Eddie at a friend's party 15 months ago.

"I went there alone and so did he," she said. "We wound up sitting in a corner all night and talking."

He called the next day and asked for a date. Linda said no, she already had a date for the evening he wanted to take her out.

He later called from Atlantic City just to say "Hello." When he returned from his Atlantic City engagement, he phoned again and asked for a date.

Linda's mother didn't approve so the 36-year-old singer again received a negative answer.

HER MOTHER felt that Linda's career was just getting started and wouldn't benefit from an association with Fisher because of his past publicity.

Fisher had previously been married to Debbie Reynolds and Elizabeth Taylor.

Further, Linda's mother, although she had never met Eddie, was convinced she didn't like him.

The singer proceeded to change that parental opinion. Appearing at Las Vegas, he invited Linda and her mother to be his guests in the Nevada city.

"After Mother met Eddie and got to know him, she flipped over him," said Linda.

Whether Linda herself has "flipped" over Eddie, she isn't saying.

Further, in reply to a question about whether the singer had asked her to marry him, Linda said:

"I can't answer that."

AMPLIFYING on the subject, she added:

"Everything is lovely right now. We see each other whenever we can. I like the way things are right now."

Linda doesn't believe that a marriage and career can be mixed. Right now, her career comes first.

It's a career that started in a supermart.

Linda and her mother were shopping one Saturday and talking to the manager of the vegetable department when they noticed a man obviously staring.

There was something else obvious about the man. He was obviously married since he was with his wife and their two children.

"These American men," indignantly snorted Linda's mother. "I'll never understand them."

She understood him later.

THE MAN was the vice president of a talent agency. While Linda and her mother were shopping, he gave the manager of the vegetable department his business card.

He told the manager he didn't want to directly approach Linda then.

But he asked the manager to give her his agency card and inform her that if she was ever interested in a theatrical career, he'd appreciate it if she would contact him.

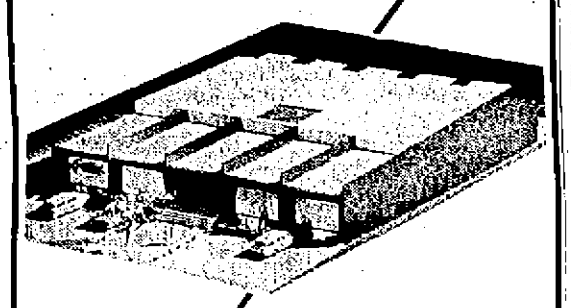
Linda, who was training to be a secretary, contacted him "for a lark." She candidly informed him that she had never done any acting and hadn't even thought about it.

The agent told her he "saw a pretty girl and sensed a quality." He took her to the offices of the producer of "My Three Sons." They also saw, sensed and immediately signed her for a role.

Before signing for the co-starring part in "Hank," Linda appeared in three other television series and a motion picture, "Marriage on the Rocks," in the latter, she was Dean Martin's secretary.

LINDA FOSTER

The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Foster, Linda was born in England and attended school there for 15 years until moving to Canada where the family stayed about two years.



Then Foster, an aeronautical engineer, moved his family to Southern California and a San Fernando Valley supermart provided the first leg of the road to Linda's television stardom.

"I just sort of fell into show-business," said Linda. "It was just luck."

If Linda's All-American brand of the luck of the English holds, there'll be no falling out.

Anaheim

By FRED KREIN
Mayor of Anaheim

When Anaheim was a fledging it acquired considerable renown for its wine producing industry.

The city today, offers recreation. And it is Melodyland and Disneyland that are expected to attract an estimated 200,000 residents and 10-million tourists annually by the end of this decade.

This recreation-incited growth, fertilized by such attractions opening this year as the Angel Baseball Stadium and the Anaheim Convention Hall, is expected to attract associated growth from industry and business.

As new residents move into the area, there will be an increased labor pool, which will attract industry, and the additional buying power will prompt new business to rise and flourish. Motels and hotels will also increase to satisfy a basic need of the folks from Tampa, Dubuque, and Provo.

Transportation? This may also be solved before the end of the sixties. The city is studying how to solve the agonizing problem of transportation, but is still undecided as to what method — bus, tram or monorail.

Garry Takes 'People Poll'

(See Page 4)

Bert's Eye View

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

A RELATIVELY UNKNOWN 21-year-old English girl selected for television as the typical All-American college coed is currently the No. 1 date for singer Eddie Fisher.

The girl is Linda Foster, a curvesome blonde who has the coed role of Doris Royal on NBC-TV's (channel 4's) Friday night "Hank" series.

She's having a ball.

For never in her wildest dreams did Linda ever think she would be in show-business or be dating anyone like Eddie Fisher.

"Anything that has happened in the last three years has just been luck," she said.

Taking last developments first, she met Eddie at a friend's party 15 months ago.

"I went there alone and so did he," she said. "We wound up sitting in a corner all night and talking."

He called the next day and asked for a date. Linda said no, she already had a date for the evening he wanted to take her out.

He later called from Atlantic City just to say "Hello." When he returned from his Atlantic City engagement, he phoned again and asked for a date.

Linda's mother didn't approve so the 36-year-old singer again received a negative answer.

HER MOTHER felt that Linda's career was just getting started and wouldn't benefit from an association with Fisher because of his past publicity.

Fisher had previously been married to Debbie Reynolds and Elizabeth Taylor.

Further, Linda's mother, although she had never met Eddie, was convinced she didn't like him.

The singer proceeded to change that parental opinion. Appearing at Las Vegas, he invited Linda and her mother to be his guests in the Nevada city.

"After Mother met Eddie and got to know him, she flipped over him," said Linda.

Whether Linda herself has "flipped" over Eddie, she isn't saying.

Further, in reply to a question about whether the singer had asked her to marry him, Linda said:

"I can't answer that."

AMPLIFYING on the subject, she added:

"Everything is lovely right now. We see each other whenever we can. I like the way things are right now."

Linda doesn't believe that a marriage and career can be mixed. Right now, her career comes first.

It's a career that started in a supermart.

Linda and her mother were shopping one Saturday and talking to the manager of the vegetable department when they noticed a man obviously staring.

There was something else obvious about the man. He was obviously married since he was with his wife and their two children.

"These American men," indignantly snorted Linda's mother. "I'll never understand them."

She understood him later.

THE MAN was the vice president of a talent agency. While Linda and her mother were shopping, he gave the manager of the vegetable department his business card.

He told the manager he didn't want to directly approach Linda then.

But he asked the manager to give her his agency card and inform her that if she was ever interested in a theatrical career, he'd appreciate it if she would contact him.

Linda, who was training to be a secretary, contacted him "for a lark." She candidly informed him that she had never done any acting and hadn't even thought about it.

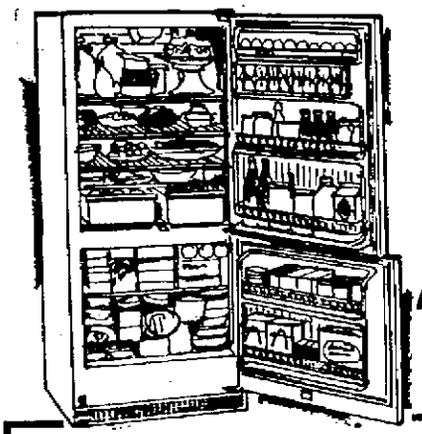
The agent told her he "saw a pretty girl and sensed a quality." He took her to the offices of the producer of "My Three Sons." They also saw, sensed and immediately signed her for a role.

Before signing for the co-starring part in "Hank," Linda appeared in three other television series and a motion picture, "Marriage on the Rocks." In the latter, she was Dean Martin's secretary.

LINDA FOSTER

The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Foster, Linda was born in England and attended school there for 15 years until moving to Canada where the family stayed about two years.

Then Foster, an aeronautical engineer, moved his family to Southern California and a San Fernando Valley supermart provided the first leg of the road to Linda's television stardom.



"I just sort of fell into show-business," said Linda. "It was just luck."

If Linda's All-American brand of the luck of the English holds, there'll be no falling out.

GARRY MOORE INTERVIEWS POLICEMAN FOR "PEOPLE POLL"

Inquiring Reporter Garry Moore Asks About Ideal Marriage Age

AFTER 18 MONTHS away from television, Garry Moore returns to the home screen Friday with a "People Poll."

The one-hour COLOR special, which airs at 10 p.m. on channel 7, has Garry in the role of an inquiring reporter.

Typical questions he asks during a nation-wide tour:

"Do you kiss your wife when you get up in the morning?"

"Are you stricter than your own parents?"

"What's the ideal age for marriage and what's the ideal number of children?"

"Are you satisfied with your life and what changes would you make if you could start over?"

IT WAS IN September of 1964 that CBS-TV announced it was dropping "The Garry Moore Show." The announcement meant the end of a 14-year era for Garry, including a period when, in addition to his variety show, he was host of "I've Got A Secret."

Following cancellation of the show, Garry and his wife went on a world-wide vacation trip. During that trip, he rarely turned on a television set.

Upon his return, he was contacted by Jay Ward, who produced the "Bullwinkle" series. Together they have prepared a format for a comedy-variety show which CBS is considering as a series for next season.

He has, in fact, an existing contract with CBS which limits his appearances in series to that network. However, he can do "one-shot" specials for other networks providing CBS has the opportunity to refuse.

SUCH WAS THE case with "People Poll." CBS turned it down and ABC-TV grabbed it.

Garry feels television today lacks "people-to-people" contact.

There has been too much emphasis on the business aspect of show business. It's financially better to film situation shows, then re-sell them for daytime repeat runs.

While it may be financially better, Garry laments that performers no longer have the opportunity for "eyeball to eyeball communication with the folks at home."

He hopes his "People Poll" and the new series next season will help fill that non-communicative void.

Cheer Up! There's Good Views Ahead

By DICK KLEINER

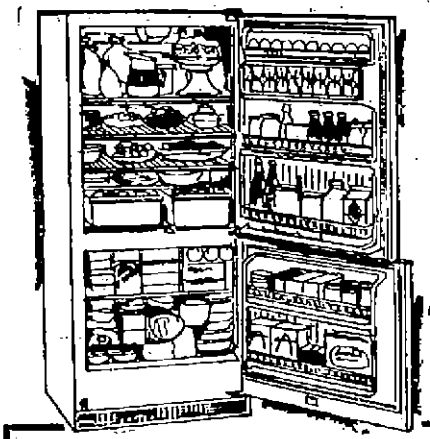
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — If you have sampled all this season's television shows, and decided now is the time to trade your set in on a new pop-up toaster, be of better cheer. There's always next year.

Among the plans for the '66-67 season that sound at least interesting are these:

A family situation comedy, set in ancient Rome.

A spoof of Sherlock Holmes, with Paul Lynde as the great detective.

A Tarzan series, with Mike Henry as the jungle boy, surrounded by a permanent cast including a riverboat captain, a woman doctor, a native who runs an animal compound, a teen-age boy and a brilliant, bored refugee from civilization.



At least they'll be better than The Long Hot Summer.

CRITIC'S CORNER

Excerpted Reviews on Recent Television Programs

Program: Second part of "The National Health Test," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

CBS concluded its two-part "National Health Test" with 37 more questions covering subjects ranging from the length of time a polio vaccine provided immunization to the best way to lose weight.

Along the way it provided a large amount of incidental information, even safety suggestions, like putting prescription medicines and poisons in locked boxes and urging periodic eye examinations.

"The self-investigative broadcast," as Harry Reasoner called it, was educational and helpful. It is just unfortunate that there have been three of these audience quiz programs in eight days—that's too much of a good thing.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

Program: "The Lucy Show," aired last Monday on channel 2.

For eight pantomime minutes, Lucy and co-workers Mickey Rooney and Gale Gordon demonstrated the soaring entertainment heights television can reach.

The Charlie Chaplin skit was visual proof there are some performers who still care about quality.

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues"

Program: "The Tom Duggan Show," premiered last Monday on channel 11.

In explaining his producer's ratings' reasoning, Tom said:

Physically, there was no question but that it was Duggan. But entertainment-wise or provocative-wise or opinionated-wise, I still can't be sure.

I have never seen Duggan so mild. He has a nice smile, but it can't carry a 90-minute show.

Milk is mild, but it can be soothing. A mild Duggan is merely boring.

At one point in his program, in response to lack of response from his studio audience, he said:

"Twice that many people applauded when I fell out of the window."

So ok, Tom. What are you going to do for an encore?

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues"

Program: "Testing: Is Anybody Honest?" aired by channel 4 last Sunday.

Success begets imitators, better known as hopping on the bandwagon. CBS has had three shots at it and the early ratings justified the experiment that if you get close enough to people they'll be watched by a lot of people. This test proved that there's a little larceny in all of us. It was the first of a series of opinion polls by NBC and the subsequent questionnaires need to get closer to problems of the masses.

Program: "The Baron," airing Thursdays on channel 7.

Critic Helm of "Variety"

"The Baron" is another James Bond facsimile. I have nothing personal against the series; in fact, it's not too awful. But I think that if I see another show about an undercover agent who shoots people with his cigarette lighter and wisecracks in the face of death, I will kick in my television set.

"The Baron," in fact, hasn't much to offer that hasn't been offered by almost any television secret agent that you can name. As played by Steve Forrest, he isn't nearly debonair as CBS-TV's "Secret Agent," Patrick McGoohan, who is by far the best of the lot because that particular show is played more for stylized character appeal than for gimmicks. Furthermore, at times Forrest sounds and looks so much like Gene Barry—who starred in "Amos Burke, Secret Agent," which "The Baron" replaced—that it is astonishing. No, make that depressing.

The last time I saw Forrest, he was wrapped in a towel in a steam room in a health club in Beverly Hills, and if you want to know the truth, the rest of us in our towels and sandals looked every bit as impressive as he did, so maybe I am prejudiced. Once you've seen a secret agent wrapped in a towel in a steam room, even if he happens to be Dana Andrews' brother—which Forrest is—you are never again quite as impressed

Cheer Up! There's Good Views Ahead

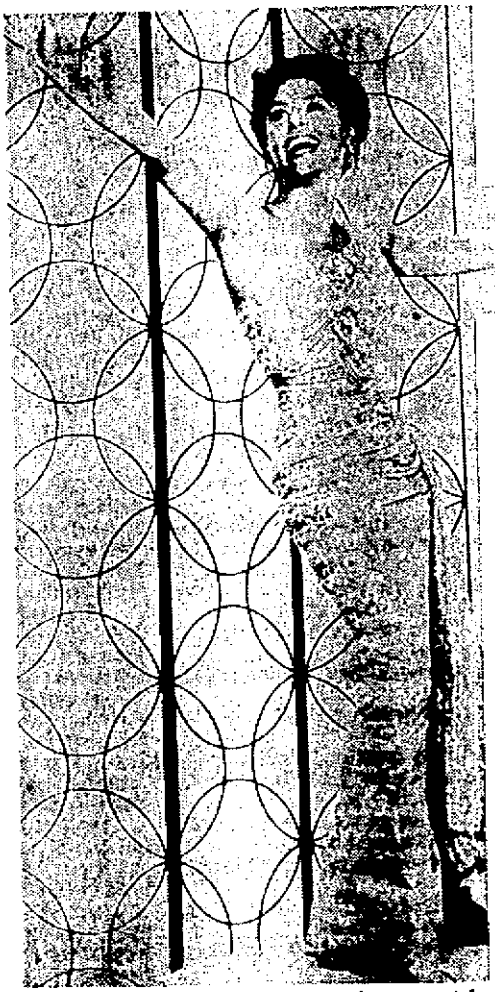
By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — If you have sampled all this season's television shows, and decided now is the time to trade your set in on a new pop-up toaster, be of better cheer. There's always next year.

Among the plans for the '66-67 season that sound at least interesting are these:

A family situation comedy, set in ancient Rome.

A spoof of Sherlock Holmes, with Paul Lynde as the great detective.



A Tarzan series, with Mike Henry as the jungle boy, surrounded by a permanent cast including a riverboat captain, a woman doctor, a native who runs an animal compound, a teen-age boy and a brilliant, bored refugee from civilization.

At least they'll be better than The Long Hot Summer.

Pic(k)s of the WEEK

FOR HER ROLE as an ancient hag, Marian Moses spent six transformation hours in the make-up department. She appears at 7 p. m. today (Sunday) in "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea" in COLOR on channel 7. The story is about a sunken research ship and a gigantic jellyfish.

TITLED "LENA," a one-hour variety repeat featuring Lena Horne, airs 7:30 p. m. today (Sunday) on channel 11. Actor James Mason, a guest, sings.

ALFRED LUNT AND HIS WIFE, LYNN FONTANNE, star in the Hallmark Hall of Fame repeat presentation of "The Magnificent Yankee" at 8:30 p. m. Thursday, channel 4, in COLOR. The 90-minute production about Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. won five Emmy Awards after its original telecast in January last year.

CRITIC'S CORNER

Excerpted Reviews on Recent Television Programs

Program: Second part of "The National Health Test," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

CBS concluded its two-part "National Health Test" with 37 more questions covering subjects ranging from the length of time a polio vaccine provided immunization to the best way to lose weight.

Along the way it provided a large amount of incidental information, even safety suggestions, like putting prescription medicines and poisons in locked boxes and urging periodic eye examinations.

"The self-investigative broadcast," as Harry Reasoner called it, was educational and helpful. It is just unfortunate that there have been three of these audience quiz programs in eight days—that's ton much of a good thing.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

Program: "The Lucy Show," aired last Monday on channel 2.

For eight pantomime minutes, Lucy and co-workers Mickey Rooney and Gale Gordon demonstrated the soaring entertainment heights television can reach.

The Charlie Chaplin skit was visual proof there are some performers who still care about quality.

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues"

Program: "The Tom Duggan Show," premiered last Monday on channel 11.

In explaining his producer's ratings' reasoning, Tom said:

Physically, there was no question but that it was Duggan. But entertainment-wise or provocative-wise or opinionated-wise, I still can't be sure.

I have never seen Duggan so mild. He has a nice smile, but it can't carry a 90-minute show.

Milk is mild, but it can be soothing. A mild Duggan is merely boring.

At one point in his program, in response to lack of response from his studio audience, he said:

"Twice that many people applauded when I fell out of the window."

So ok, Tom. What are you going to do for an encore?

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues"

Program: "Testing: Is Anybody Honest?" aired by channel 4 last Sunday.

Success begets imitators, better known as hopping on the bandwagon. CBS has had three shots at it and the early ratings justified the experiment that if you get close enough to people they'll be watched by a lot of people. This test proved that there's a little larceny in all of us. It was the first of a series of opinion polls by NBC and the subsequent questionnaires need to get closer to problems of the masses.

Program: "The Baron," airing Thursdays on channel 7.

Critic Helm of "Variety"

"The Baron" is another James Bond facsimile. I have nothing personal against the series; in fact, it's not too awful. But I think that if I see another show about an undercover agent who shoots people with his cigarette lighter and wisecracks in the face of death, I will kick in my television set.

"The Baron," in fact, hasn't much to offer that hasn't been offered by almost any television secret agent that you can name. As played by Steve Forrest, he isn't nearly debonair as CBS-TV's "Secret Agent," Patrick McGoohan, who is by far the best of the lot because that particular show is played more for stylized character appeal than for gimmicks. Furthermore, at times Forrest sounds and looks so much like Gene Barry—who starred in "Amos Burke, Secret Agent," which "The Baron" replaced—that it is astonishing. No, make that depressing.

The last time I saw Forrest, he was wrapped in a towel in a steam room in a health club in Beverly Hills, and if you want to know the truth, the rest of us in our towels and sandals looked every bit as impressive as he did, so maybe I am prejudiced. Once you've seen a secret agent wrapped in a towel in a steam room, even if he happens to be Dana Andrews' brother—which Forrest is—you are never again quite as impressed

Ketchum Caught Unglued

David Ketchum, who stars in NBC-TV's "Camp Runamuck," came unglued recently—and he's glad he did. A scene called for a bugle to stick to his hand briefly. The glue set so firmly that prop men searched four hours for a solvent that would separate Dave from the horn.

JUNIOR MISS PAGEANT—California finals to select the state's outstanding high school senior girl were held last night in Garden Grove, as 20 winners of regional contests competed at the Argonaut Auditorium for judging in scholastic ability, poise, personality, civic responsibility, creative talent and youth fitness. Bill Welsh will be mikeside at 1:30 p.m., ch. 11, with 90-minute tapes of the pageant, the winner to go on to the national finals in March.

VIET NAM PERSPECTIVE: The Congress and the War—Six Congressional leaders will deliberate America's conduct of the Viet Nam war in a special 90-min. broadcast from Washington reported at 2:30 p.m., ch. 2, by Eric Sevareid and Roger Mudd. Discussing views ranging from pulling out immediately to escalation will be Senators Joseph Clark (D-Pa.), Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), Karl E. Mundt (R-S. D.) and John Stennis (D-Miss.), plus Representatives Hale Boggs (D-La) and Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.)

IT'S HAPPENING TO US—Doctors have high hopes for LSD and other hallucinogen drugs in controlled medical experimentations, but there is no law against their use, and it is estimated that 10 to 15% of college students in L.A. use the "acid" to go on their fantastic "trips." Students who have partaken of such drugs relate their own experiences at 5 p.m., ch. 7, in documentary designed to point out the need for laws enabling local police to fight it.

TELEPHONE HOUR—An all-Gershwin program is offered at 6:30 p.m., in color, ch. 4, as Polly Bergen is hostess to Diahann Carroll, John Raitt, John Davidson, Susan Watson and pianist-composer Andre Previn. Included are Gershwin tunes from Broadway musicals, Hollywood films, his folk opera "Porgy and Bess," and his piece for piano and jazz orchestra, "Rhapsody in Blue." (This hour next week probes indoctrinations of Red China.)

LASSIE—An all-animal cast, with no human actors, no dialogue and no narration, is featured in a unique episode at 7 p.m., in color, ch. 2. After freeing a skunk from a trap, Lassie finds she had made a lifelong, if unwanted, friend of the animal—which later proves its friendship, and its bravery, in an encounter with a huge wolf.

LENA—An hour of the long-time favorite songs by Lena Horne are presented in the repeat of a London-taped program at 7:30 p.m., ch. 11. She is accompanied on the piano by her husband, composer-arranger Lennie Hayton, and actor James Mason makes a cameo singing appearance dressed as a Beefeater during Lena's tour of London.

BRIGITTE BARDOT is featured during "Hollywood Backstage" at 7:30 p. m. Friday, channel 9, in COLOR.

JACK Bailey, who hosted the defunct "Queen for a Day," has a dramatic role during "The Bob Hope Theater" at 9 p. m. Wednesday, channel 4, in COLOR.

COMEDIAN Godfrey Cambridge makes his dramatic TV debut as a king during "I Spy" at 10 p. m. Wednesday, channel 4, in COLOR.

THE CONVERSATION BUBBLES OVER with sad tidings as Don Adams and Barbara Feldon find themselves water-logged in a phone booth during "Get Smart" at 8:30 p. m. Saturday, channel 4, in COLOR.

SPECIAL

JUNIOR MISS PAGEANT—California finals to select the state's outstanding high school senior girl were held last night in Garden Grove, as 20 winners of regional contests competed at the Argonaut Auditorium for judging in scholastic ability, poise, personality, civic responsibility, creative talent and youth fitness. Bill Welsh will be mikeside at 1:30 p.m., ch. 11, with 90-minute tapes of the pageant, the winner to go on to the national finals in March.

VIET NAM PERSPECTIVE: The Congress and the War—Six Congressional leaders will deliberate America's conduct of the Viet Nam war in a special 90-min. broadcast from Washington reported at 2:30 p.m., ch. 2, by Eric Sevareid and Roger Mudd. Discussing views ranging from pulling out immediately to escalation will be Senators Joseph Clark (D-Pa.), Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), Karl E. Mundt (R-S. D.) and John Stennis (D-Miss.), plus Representatives Hale Boggs (D-La) and Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.)

IT'S HAPPENING TO US—Doctors have high hopes for LSD and other hallucinogen drugs in controlled medical experimentations, but there is no law against their use, and it is estimated that 10 to 15% of college students in L.A. use the "acid" to go on their fantastic "trips." Students who have partaken of such drugs relate their own experiences at 5 p.m., ch. 7, in documentary designed to point out the need for laws enabling local police to fight it.

TELEPHONE HOUR—An all-Gershwin program is offered at 6:30 p.m., in color, ch. 4, as Polly Bergen is hostess to Diahann Carroll, John Raitt, John Davidson, Susan Watson and pianist-composer Andre Previn. Included are Gershwin tunes from Broadway musicals, Hollywood films, his folk opera "Porgy and Bess," and his piece for piano and jazz orchestra, "Rhapsody in Blue." (This hour next week probes Indoctrinations of Red China.)

LASSIE—An all-animal cast, with no human actors, no dialogue and no narration, is featured in a unique episode at 7 p.m., in color, ch. 2. After freeing a skunk from a trap, Lassie finds she had made a lifelong, if unwanted, friend of the animal—which later proves its friendship, and its bravery, in an encounter with a huge wolf.

LENA—An hour of the long-time favorite songs by Lena Horne are presented in the repeat of a London-taped program at 7:30 p.m., ch. 11. She is accompanied on the piano by her husband, composer-arranger Lennie Hayton, and actor James Mason makes a cameo singing appearance dressed as a Beefeater during Lena's tour of London.

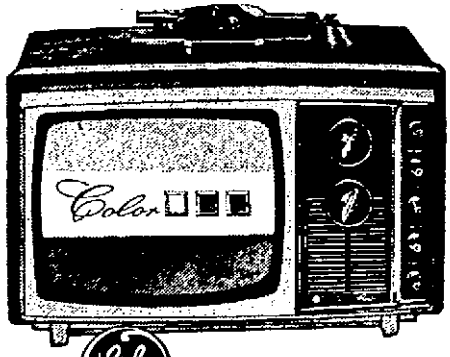
SPECIAL



BAHIA: Sister City—Jerry Dunphy is host for a filmed-in-Bahia color tour of the Brazilian city, Salvador (Bahia), chosen in 1962 as sister city by Angelenos in recognition of the Southland's citrus industry, which got its start from a navel orange tree given by Salvador in 1880. Jerry Dunphy is narrator, with Bahia seen through the personal viewpoints of two men—Long Beach physician Dr. Frank Raila, medical missionary for two years to the underprivileged of Bahia, and native Baiano singer-composer Dorival Caymmi, whose music is acknowledged to be the most authentic expression of traditional Bahia.

BEATLES ARE BACK—An hour's look at the prides of Liverpool, produced in England, is offered at 7:30 p.m., ch. 9, with host Sam Riddle. Half of the show is devoted to film clips of the Beatles' music, with the remainder devoted to Peter & Gordon, Gale Garnett, the Fortunes, the Knickerbockers and other contemporaries viewing the Beatles' popularity.

GOLDEN GLOBE Awards—Andy Williams turns over his regular hour for the 23rd annual awards voted by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for excellence in movies and television. Hosting the 9 p.m., ch. 4 color hour from the Cocoanut Grove with Cheryl (Daktari) Miller, Miss Golden Gloves of 1966, Andy will sing the 6 nominated songs—"Cat Ballou," "That Funny Feeling," "Forget Domani," "Yellow Rolls Royce," "Sweetheart Tree" and "Shadow of Your Smile." Winners of last year's awards will make presentations to winners in this year's 12 categories. (Andy is preempted next week for a Lucy Jarvis-produced special on Mary Martin's "Hello, Dolly!" tour of world.)

LATEST REPORT ON PROGRESS OF TV

News About 1939 Movie, 1949 Play

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The big news in television today is a 1939 movie and a 1949 play.

The movie is the children's classic, "The Wizard of Oz," and, of all things, its annual rerun on CBS-TV ranked as the No. 1 show in popularity in the latest national ratings.

The play is the adult classic, "Death of a Salesman," and CBS-TV has announced that it will be presented on the network April 3 in a special two-hour television production starring Lee J. Cobb and Mildred Dunnock in their original Broadway roles as Willy Loman and his wife.

* * * *

AS I HAVE always said, television is bursting with creativity and originality, and is a fiercely independent and individual medium.

"The Wizard of Oz" finished ahead of such stalwart ratings-getters as "Bonanza," Red Skelton, Lucille Ball, Andy Griffith and Ed Sullivan.

Other alleged revelations, according to the ratings:

The heavily-panned premiere of NBC-TV's Sammy Davis Jr. Show garnered a whopping statistical figure and placed ninth among all programs, but that probably is chiefly attributable to the fact that Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor were guests.

For those who enjoy small pleasures, CBS-TV's "Secret Agent" import from Britain, twice a mid-season replacement with little publicity buildup, finished ahead of two of the three weekly episodes of ABC-TV's heavily-promoted "Peyton Place," and only one notch below the third.

The Thursday "Peyton Place" finished 55rd, the Monday segment tied for 55th and the Tuesday outing came in 70th.

* * * *

CBS-TV'S "Trials of O'Brien," the show about a flamboyant New York lawyer, which was vastly overpraised for its cloying and pretentious big town "reality"—and now is cancelled—finished dead last among 103 shows, behind documentaries, behind everything.

"Hogan's Heroes," the new CBS-TV show which sets its comedy in a Nazi prison camp, and which started very high up in the ratings, now has dropped off to 22nd place, still with a healthy statistical number but one that seems to be dropping gradually.

The "Death of a Salesman" production will be presented in color, which seems a questionable decision in view of the subject matter and tone of the play. Even the movie was done in black-and-white, although color resources were available. Arthur Miller, who wrote "Death of a Salesman," will prepare the television presentation, according to the network. The video version will be produced at CBS-TV's Hollywood studios.

Here's what makes Good
DENTAL PLATES

DR. H. LEO ROWAN
Dentist

You'll Never, NEVER pay any Interest or Carrying Charge when you use my Liberal CREDIT PLAN

There's an important difference in credit plans — a difference of dollars. My credit plan is yours absolutely without cost . . . there's not one penny charged for interest, finance charge, carrying charge, or any other credit charge. You don't need any credit card . . . you don't deal with any bank or finance company. On approval of credit, you can get your plates promptly . . . spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable length of time.

UNION DENTAL PROGRAMS

We will be glad to fill out your forms and provide dentures or other dental work under your Union or California Dental Service Plan.

The professional training and skill of your dentist — together with the development of more adaptable denture materials -- have resulted in important improvements in Modern Dental Plates. Today, this progress of Dental Science makes it possible for your dentist to fit you with dentures that overcome many of the disadvantages of old-fashioned false teeth. Consult your dentist now about any plate problems you may have.

NO CASH DOWN

Come in and learn in advance at the Dr. Rowan Dental Office how easily you can afford modern dentures. All dental plates are made in Dr. Rowan's own dental laboratory in his office . . . an efficient service to save you both time and money, and to assure close professional supervision.

DENTAL PLATE SERVICE FOR O.A.S. PENSIONERS

Bring your O.A.S. Identification Card for immediate service for X-rays, plate repairs, emergency work. New plates on approval of the O.A.S. We also provide Dental Care under other County programs (A.T.D., A.P.S.B., A.N.D.).

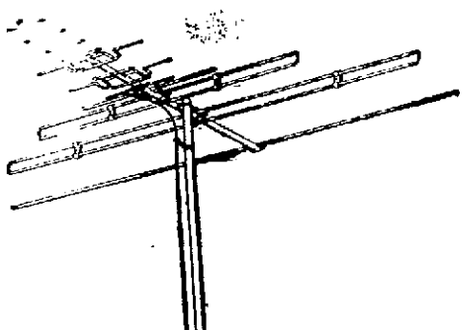
JOEY Heatherton dances during the "Sammy Davis and His Friends" special at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday, channel 7, in COLOR.



SPECIAL

SAMMY & FRIENDS — This is the ABC hour that NBC has waited for! Taped late last fall, it specified that Sammy must make no other starring appearances on competing networks within four weeks prior and one following its airing tonight at 8:30 p.m., in color, ch. 7. Now Sammy's free to return to his new NBC hour next week. With New York deejay William B. Williams as announcer, hour features friends Frank Sinatra, Edie Adams, Joey Heatherton and Count Basie, with a Davis-Sinatra medley of standards a highlight.

CAN TAHOE Be Saved?—The natural beauty of the south shore of Lake Tahoe being threatened by water pollution, and by the honky-tonk hangouts and motels that surround the gambling casinos. Robert Simmons takes a look at the problem in a KNXT news special at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2, reporting on the cooperation (or lack of it) between California and Nevada, and interviewing merchants, conservationists, city and state officials, gamblers, skiers, tourists, casino operators

SEN. J. WM. FULBRIGHT—A conversation with the Arkansas Democrat, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, is set for a CBS News Special report at 10:30 p.m., ch. 2, featuring his views on the U.S. commitment in Viet Nam (he's critical) and other foreign policy matters. (Hour next week takes a look at "typical" teenagers in a well-to-do suburb — where 16-year-olds are found strict conformists, but uninformed, with 92% knowing the identity of Sandy Koufax, but only 51% that of Robert McNamara.)

LATEST REPORT ON PROGRESS OF TV

News About 1939 Movie, 1949 Play

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The big news in television today is a 1939 movie and a 1949 play.

The movie is the children's classic, "The Wizard of Oz," and, of all things, its annual rerun on CBS-TV ranked as the No. 1 show in popularity in the latest national ratings.

The play is the adult classic, "Death of a Salesman," and CBS-TV has announced that it will be presented on the network April 3 in a special two-hour television production starring Lee J. Cobb and Mildred Dunnock in their original Broadway roles as Willy Loman and his wife.

• • • •

AS I HAVE always said, television is bursting with creativity and originality, and is a fiercely independent and individual medium.

"The Wizard of Oz" finished ahead of such stalwart ratings-getters as "Bonanza," Red Skelton, Lucille Ball, Andy Griffith and Ed Sullivan.

Other alleged revelations, according to the ratings:

The heavily panned premiere of NBC-TV's Sammy Davis Jr. Show garnered a whopping statistical figure and placed ninth among all programs, but that probably is chiefly attributable to the fact that Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor were guests.

For those who enjoy small pleasures, CBS-TV's "Secret Agent" import from Britain, twice a mid-season replacement with little publicity buildup, finished ahead of two of the three weekly episodes of ABC-TV's heavily-promoted "Peyton Place," and only one notch below the third.

The Thursday "Peyton Place" finished 53rd, the Monday segment tied for 55th and the Tuesday outing came in 70th.

• • • •

CBS-TV'S "Trials of O'Brien," the show about a flamboyant New York lawyer, which was vastly overpraised for its cloying and pretentious big town "reality"—and now is cancelled—finished dead last among 103 shows, behind documentaries, behind everything.

"Hogan's Heroes," the new CBS-TV show which sets its comedy in a Nazi prison camp, and which started very high up in the ratings, now has dropped off to 22nd place, still with a healthy statistical number but one that seems to be dropping gradually.

The "Death of a Salesman" production will be presented in color, which seems a questionable decision in view of the subject matter and tone of the play. Even the movie was done in black-and-white, although color resources were available. Arthur Miller, who wrote "Death of a Salesman," will prepare the television presentation, according to the network. The video version will be produced at CBS-TV's Hollywood studios.

Here's what makes Good
DENTAL PLATES

You'll Never, NEVER pay any Interest or Carrying Charge when you use my Liberal CREDIT PLAN

There's an important difference in credit plans — a difference of dollars. My credit plan is yours absolutely without cost . . . there's not one penny charged for interest, finance charge, carrying charge, or any other credit charge. You don't need any credit card . . . you don't deal with any bank or finance company. On approval of credit, you can get your plates promptly . . . spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable length of time.

UNION DENTAL PROGRAMS

We will be glad to fill out your forms and provide dentures or other dental work under your Union or California Dental Service Plan. . . .

The professional training and skill of your dentist — together with the development of more adaptable denture materials — have resulted in important improvements in Modern Dental Plates. Today, this progress of Dental Science makes it possible for your dentist to fit you with dentures that overcome many of the disadvantages of old-fashioned false teeth. Consult your dentist now about any plate problems you may have.

DR. H. LEO ROWAN
Dentist

NO CASH DOWN

Come in and learn in advance at the Dr. Rowan Dental Office how easily you can afford modern dentures. All dental plates are made in Dr. Rowan's own dental laboratory in his office . . . an efficient service to save you both time and money, and to assure close professional supervision.

DENTAL PLATE SERVICE FOR O.A.S. PENSIONERS

Bring your O.A.S. Identification Card for immediate service for X-rays, plate repairs, emergency work. New plates on approval of the O.A.S. We also provide Dental Care under other County programs (A.T.D., A.P.S.B., A.N.D.).

SPECIAL

SAMMY & FRIENDS — This is the ABC hour that NBC has waited for! Taped late last fall, it specified that Sammy must make no other starring appearances on competing networks within four weeks prior and one following its airing tonight at 8:30 p.m., in color, ch. 7. Now Sammy's free to return to his new NBC hour next week. With New York deejay William B. Williams as announcer, hour features friends Frank Sinatra, Edie Adams, Joey Heatherton and Count Basie, with a Davis-Sinatra medley of standards a highlight.

CAN TAHOE Be Saved?—The natural beauty of the south shore of Lake Tahoe being threatened by water pollution, and by the honky-tonk hangouts and motels that surround the gambling casinos. Robert Simmons takes a look at the problem in a KNXT news special at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2, reporting on the cooperation (or lack of it) between California and Nevada, and interviewing merchants, conservationists, city and state officials, gamblers, skiers, tourists, casino operators

SEN. J. WM. FULBRIGHT —A conversation with the Arkansas Democrat, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, is set for a CBS News Special report at 10:30 p.m., ch. 2, featuring his views on the U.S. commitment in Viet Nam (he's critical) and other foreign policy matters. (Hour next week takes a look at "typical" teenagers in a well-to-do suburb — where 16-year-olds are found strict conformists, but uninformed, with 92% knowing the identity of Sandy Koufax, but only 51% that of Robert McNamara.)

I SPY — In his dramatic TV debut, comedian Godfrey Cambridge guestars as an Oxford-educated Zulu king, determined to get revenge on the white men of the world by selling his country's output of industrial diamonds to the Red Chinese. He hides them in a Japanese oyster bed, concealed in buckets containing stolen isotopes, which cause radium poisoning among many of the villagers. In their regular co-star roles of the 10 p.m., ch. 4 color hour, are fellow comic-turned-actor Bill Cosby, and Robert Culp, who does triple duty in this segment by filling the shoes of both script writer and director.

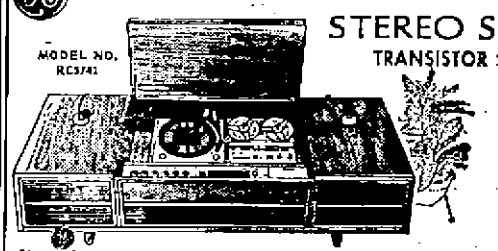
★ SPECIAL



I SPY—In his dramatic TV debut, comedian Godfrey Cambridge guestars as an Oxford-educated Zulu king, determined to get revenge on the white men of the world by selling his country's output of industrial diamonds to the Red Chinese. He hides them in a Japanese oyster bed, concealed in buckets containing stolen isotopes, which cause radium poisoning among many of the villagers. In their regular co-star roles of the 10 p.m., ch. 4 color hour, are fellow comic-turned-actor Bill Cosby, and Robert Culp, who does triple duty in this segment by filling the shoes of both script writer and director.

SPECIAL

MAGNIFICENT YANKEE —Newton N. Minow, former FCC chairman of "vast wasteland" fame, introduces a reprise presentation of the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" colorcast which picked up 5 Emmy awards following its Jan. 28, 1965 airing. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne star as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and his beloved wife Fanny, with Eduard Franz, Robert Emhardt, James Daly, Brenda Forbes and William Griffis featured in the story of Holmes' three decades in Washington, and the love between the famous jurist and his charming wife. Emmet Lavery's Broadway play was adapted for television by Robert Hartung, with George Schaefer producing the 90-min. drama seen at 8:30 p.m., in color, ch. 4.

DEAN MARTIN — Juliet Prowse, whose "Mona McCluskey" is preempted tonight and is pink-slipped permanently after April 7, still turns up on NBC tonight in an original song-and-dance arrangement of "Blue Prelude." Bob Hope offers one of his inimitable monologues as highlight of the 10 p.m. color hour, ch. 4, with other guests including Pete Fountain, Joel Grey, the Lively Set and singer Donna Butterworth. SPECIAL

MAGNIFICENT YANKEE —Newton N. Minow, former FCC chairman of "vast wasteland" fame, introduces a reprise presentation of the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" colorcast which picked up 5 Emmy awards following its Jan. 28, 1965 airing. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne star as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and his beloved wife Fanny, with Eduard Franz, Robert Emhardt, James Daly, Brenda Forbes and William Griffis featured in the story of Holmes' three decades in Washington, and the love between the famous jurist and his charming wife. Emmet Lavery's Broadway play was adapted for television by Robert Hartung, with George Schaefer producing the 90-min. drama seen at 8:30 p.m., in color, ch. 4.

DEAN MARTIN — Juliet Prowse, whose "Mona McCluskey" is preempted tonight and is pink-slipped permanently after April 7, still turns up on NBC tonight in an original song-and-dance arrangement of "Blue Prelude." Bob Hope offers one of his inimitable monologues as highlight of the 10 p.m. color hour, ch. 4, with other guests including Pete Fountain, Joel Grey, the Livciy Set and singer Donna Butterworth. (Next week with Dino—Kate Smith, Lucille Ball.)

SPECIAL

DON GIOVANNI—A complete 3-hour presentation of the Mozart opera, aired without commercial interruption, is offered at 8:30 p.m., ch. 28. Filmed during performance at the Salzburg Festival, production stars basso Cesare Siepi, soprano Lisa della Casa and the Vienna Philharmonic and Chorus of the Vienna State Opera conducted by the late Wilhelm Furtwaengler.

GARRY MOORE'S People Poll — A year and a half after his release by CBS, Garry returns to TV in the role of an inquiring reporter, interested in the human side of the American people — what they think, say and do. Interviewing his fellow Americans on the streets, in their homes and at work, Garry chats with people from Vallejo to Key West, and compares their attitudes and behavior with what Dr. George Gallup calls the "national average." Produced by Emmy-winning Irving Gitlin, hour is in color at 10 p.m., ch. 7, preempting Jimmy Dean, whose show is due to fade off completely after April Fool's Day.

Please settle an argument between my husband and me.

Can you give us the name of Kirby who is seen on "Combat," channel 7, Tuesdays, and also the name of the man who played the father of the girl Tom Dooley married on "Legend to Tom Dooley" on channel 2 at 4:30 p.m. on Friday, Jan. 21.

My husband insists they are one and the same man.

I say they are two entirely different people. Who is right?

Mrs. Henry S. Smith, Lakewood

Your husband, naturally. Jack Hogan is the actor's name.

* * * *

Why isn't Joy, one of the dancers on "Where the Action Is," on there any more?

Donna Martin, Garden Grove

She quit to marry Bobby Hatfield, one of the Righteous Brothers.

* * * *

The other night we were looking through the television log for something late at night—and really found it.

One was a 1936 movie, "Princess Comes Across," with Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard. We have been looking since then and the oldest billed was a 1932 gem, "Horse Feathers," with the Marx Brothers. That's 34 years old!

They must have to keep those old films in the deep freeze to keep them from spoiling.

J. Paul Gleason, Long Beach

Those aren't old movies, they're classics.

* * * *

I wish to disagree with an item in your paper.

Atty. Jake Ehrlich of San Francisco was the inspiration for "Sam Benedict," not Melvin Belli.

Mrs. June Ring, Long Beach

You have the right to disagree. You also have the right to be right—which you are.

* * * *

In my teen-age opinion (which probably isn't worth much), "Big Valley" is the hit of the season.

My friends and I take turns panting over Peter Breck, "Nick," and Lee Majors, who plays "Heath."

Could you please tell me how this show is faring in the ratings?

Dorothy Korber, Long Beach

There haven't been any recent ratings since the series was preempted by President Johnson on one occasion and "This Proud Land" the following week.

However, ABC-TV publicists assert the show rates about even with one of its competitors, "The Bob Hope Theater," but runs behind "Green Acres" and "The Dick Van Dyke Show."

"Big Valley" has been extended — enough new shows ordered—for the full season. There's a good chance it will be back for a second season.

As for teen-age opinion not being worth much, maybe you haven't been watching the many new TV shows that are obviously slanted in the teeners' direction.

* * * *

The Jan. 17 program of 9th Street West featured a band called the Starfires.

When Sam Riddle introduced them, he said that they were all in college and proceeded to name four of their future professions.

Well, there were five guys in the band. Why did he leave one out?

The lead guitar player was cute, but I don't think he looked old enough to be in college. My girlfriend says that he did.

Who is correct? What are the names of all of the guys in the band?

J. Peabody, Long Beach

The lead guitar player, Bobby Cochran, attends Santa Fe High School in Norwalk.

The other band members are Fred Fields, Cerritos College, wants to be a lawyer; Chuck Butler, Cerritos, majoring in business; Sonny Lathrop, English major at Long Beach State College, wants to be a teacher, and Jack Emerle, Cerritos, wants to join the FBI.

Has Tad on "Never Too Young" been on any previous programs? If so, what?

Karen Holmes, Long Beach

Michael Blodgett, who has the role of Tad, has appeared on "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "Kraft Suspense Theater" and "McHale's Navy." He's a former Olympic track star.

Batman smells!

L. Wheeler, Long Beach

Batman should be nominated for an Emmy.

Miss C. Moore's Seventh Period Class, Wilson High School, Long Beach

Hey, class! You neglected to individually sign your names. The Batman sincerely urges you to stand by the courage of your convictions because the pen, gleeps, is mightier than the sword.

SPECIAL

DON GIOVANNI—A complete 3-hour presentation of the Mozart opera, aired without commercial interruption, is offered at 8:30 p.m., ch. 28. Filmed during performance at the Salzburg Festival, production stars basso Cesare Siepi, soprano Lisa della Casa and the Vienna Philharmonic and Chorus of the Vienna State Opera conducted by the late Wilhelm Furtwaengler.

GARRY MOORE'S People Poll — A year and a half after his release by CBS, Garry returns to TV in the role of an inquiring reporter, interested in the human side of the American people—what they think, say and do. Interviewing his fellow Americans on the streets, in their homes and at work, Garry chats with people from Vallejo to Key West, and compares their attitudes and behavior with what Dr. George Gallup calls the "national average." Produced by Emmy-winning Irving Gitlin, hour is in color at 10 p.m., ch. 7, preempting Jimmy Dean, whose show is due to fade off completely after April Fool's Day.

SPECIAL

ROGER MUDD—Premiere, CBS adds a sixth night of network news at 6:30 p.m., in color, ch. 2, as Roger Mudd anchors a half-hour segment, originating in New York. A special sports report of late news will be included.

HOLLYWOOD PALACE—Guest-host Vince Edwards operates with an all-female cast, even to the animals! Joining the 9:30 p.m. color hour, ch. 7, are Bette Davis, Liza Minnelle, Lillian Montevecchi, Joan Rivers, trapeze artist Miss Elizabeth, Joan Rogge Sisters and mother-daughter elephants Bertha and Tina.

NEW HOLLYWOOD: Bikinis at the Box Office—After 3 earlier preemptions (for a space shot, Brigitte Bardot and Viet Nam), "ABC Scope" tries again to examine the people and forces behind today's "beach-bikini" craze in film making. During the 10:30 p.m. show, ch. 7 (if not postponed again), veterans Patsy Kelly and Francis X Bushman, now featured in "Bikini Party in a Haunted House," compare today's films and starlets with the comedies of the silent screen.

Please settle an argument between my husband and me.

Can you give us the name of Kirby, who is seen on "Combat," channel 7, Tuesdays, and also the name of the man who played the father of the girl Tom Dooley married on "Legend to Tom Dooley" on channel 2 at 4:30 p.m. on Friday, Jan. 21.

My husband insists they are one and the same man.

I say they are two entirely different people. Who is right?

Mrs. Henry S. Smith, Lakewood

Your husband, naturally. Jack Hogan is the actor's name.

* * * *

Why isn't Joy, one of the dancers on "Where the Action Is," on there any more?

Donna Martin, Garden Grove

She quit to marry Bobby Hatfield, one of the Righteous Brothers.

* * * *

The other night we were looking through the television log for something late at night—and really found it.

One was a 1936 movie, "Princess Comes Across," with Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard. We have been looking since then and the oldest billed was a 1932 gem, "Horse Feathers," with the Marx Brothers. That's 34 years old!

They must have to keep those old films in the deep freeze to keep them from spoiling.

J. Paul Gleason, Long Beach

Those aren't old movies, they're classics.

* * * *

I wish to disagree with an item in your paper.

Atty. Jake Ehrlich of San Francisco was the inspiration for "Sam Benedict," not Melvin Belli.

Mrs. June Ring, Long Beach

You have the right to disagree. You also have the right to be right—which you are.

* * * *

In my teen-age opinion (which probably isn't worth much), "Big Valley" is the hit of the season.

My friends and I take turns panting over Peter Breck, "Nick," and Lee Majors, who plays "Heath."

Could you please tell me how this show is faring in the ratings?

Dorothy Korber, Long Beach

There haven't been any recent ratings since the series was preempted by President Johnson on one occasion and "This Proud Land" the following week.

However, ABC-TV publicists assert the show rates about even with one of its competitors, "The Bob Hope Theater," but runs behind "Green Acres" and "The Dick Van Dyke Show."

"Big Valley" has been extended — enough new shows ordered—for the full season. There's a good chance it will be back for a second season.

As for teen-age opinion not being worth much, maybe you haven't been watching the many new TV shows that are obviously slanted in the teeners' direction.

* * * *

The Jan. 17 program of 9th Street West featured a band called the Starfires.

When Sam Riddle introduced them, he said that they were all in college and proceeded to name four of their future professions.

Well, there were five guys in the band. Why did he leave one out?

The lead guitar player was cute, but I don't think he looked old enough to be in college. My girlfriend says that he did.

Who is correct? What are the names of all of the guys in the band?

J. Peabody, Long Beach

The lead guitar player, Bobby Cochran, attends Santa Fe High School in Norwalk.

The other band members are Fred Fields, Cerritos College, wants to be a lawyer; Chuck Butler, Cerritos, majoring in business; Sonny Lathrop, English major at Long Beach State College, wants to be a teacher, and Jack Emerle, Cerritos, wants to join the FBI.

Has Tad on "Never Too Young" been on any previous programs? If so, what?

Karen Holmes, Long Beach

Michael Blodgett, who has the role of Tad, has appeared on "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "Kraft Suspense Theater" and "McHale's Navy." He's a former Olympic track star.

Batman smells!

L. Wheeler, Long Beach

Batman should be nominated for an Emmy.

Miss C. Moore's Seventh Period Class, Wilson High School, Long Beach

Hey, class! You neglected to individually sign your names. The Batman sincerely urges you to stand by the courage of your convictions because the pen, gleeps, is mightier than the sword.

SPECIAL

ROGER MUDD—Premiere. CBS adds a sixth night of network news at 6:30 p.m., in color, ch. 2, as Roger Mudd anchors a half-hour segment, originating in New York. A special sports report of late news will be included.

HOLLYWOOD PALACE—Guest-host Vince Edwards operates with an all-female cast, even to the animals! Joining the 9:30 p.m. color hour, ch. 7, are Bette Davis, Liza Minnelle, Lillian Montevecchi, Joan Rivers, trapeze artist Miss Elizabeth, Joan Rogge Sisters and mother-daughter elephants Bertha and Tina.

NEW HOLLYWOOD: Bikinis at the Box Office—After 3 earlier preemptions (for a space shot, Brigitte Bardot and Viet Nam), "ABC Scope" tries again to examine the people and forces behind today's "beach-bikini" craze in film making. During the 10:30 p.m. show, ch. 7 (if not postponed again), veterans Patsy Kelly and Francis X Bushman, now featured in "Bikini Party in a Haunted House," compare today's films and starlets with the comedies of the silent screen.

WILLBANKS'

"20 YEARS SERVING SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA"

What's the difference . . .

between Willbanks' and a so-called discount store? We are not located on a main street or in an expensive shopping center. Result: lower overhead, therefore lower prices to you. You are not lost in a crowd at Willbanks'. Each customer is given personalized attention by an experienced, courteous salesman. We are known for our excellent service before and after the sale. Service you can count on. We carry more full rolls than any so-called discount stores, which means easier selection for you, and fast installation. Your visit to Willbanks' will be a thrilling event. We are looking forward to seeing you.

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: May we have brief genealogy on McAVOY, McABOY.—W.M., Los Alamitos; R.M., Long Beach.

McAVOY and McABOY developed from the Irish clan surname Mac-A-Bhuidhe. Translated from Gaelic, this described "sons of the yellow-haired youth." Phonetic pronunciation and re-spelling produced the modern forms of this name. The clan was first recorded in Mayo, Ireland. Their armorial shield is crossed by a red stripe. The background above it is blue, decorated with a half silver lion. Below the stripe the left half is gold, emblazoned with a red hand; the right half is covered with ermine.

MISS RULE: Please explain FALCO, FALSONE.—J.F., San Pedro; E.L., S.F., Long Beach.

FALCO and FALSONE represent a medieval Italian ancestor nicknamed Falcone, meaning "falcon or hawk." His vigilance and watchfulness as a soldier were compared to an alert falcon. The Falco and Folco shield from Vicenze, Italy, is blue, crossed by a gold stripe on which are three red roses; at the shield's top are three gold stars on a silver band.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on HUCKABY, HUCKERBY. — J.H., W.R., E.C., Long Beach.

HUCKABY and HUCKERBY as surnames originated in Britain from "Huckerby," a combination of the ancestor's occupation and his home location. A "Huckere" was a 13th century seller of provisions. "By" referred to "settlement." The combined name designated "seller's settlement."

MISS RULE: Would like to know about ARAUJO.—A.C., Bellflower; E.A., Garden Grove.

ARAUJO from Spain began as a medieval dialect form of "Arrojo" and dignified the ancestor as "One with boldness and daring."

MISS RULE: Please inform us on DELZELL. — M.C., Downey; M.B., Wilmington.

DELZELL of Scotland is a variation of Dalzell. This lineage were natives of the village of Dalziel in Lanarkshire, south central Scotland. Their name began as the Scottish-Gaelic "Dail-yiel" meaning "Meadow and

By the hundreds and by the thousands have come Asian girls, Latin girls, Middle East girls, young women from all corners of the globe to study at America's colleges and universities. Custom and economics make it difficult for girls to reach college in many countries, let alone to cross the seas. For instance about one out of 12 of the approximately 600 foreign students at Long Beach State College is female — enough to provide the Long Beach area with proof of the charm of the foreign girl. Today's cover picture of Preawphun Toochinda (left) and Siriporn Luenguatana from Thailand, taken by Roger Coar, and a word-picture story on Page 7 by Jerome Hall show what we mean by "Imported Beauty — The Girls Who Cross Oceans to Get to Long Beach State."

With a little practice—and a valid fishing license—you can pick your dinner off the beach on the way home. At least, that's what Lew Allison did on the way home from work one recent low-tide period. He picked a harvest of Pismo clams from the sands, and he tells how it's done in "Are Clams Your Meat?" in next Sunday's South Magazine.

WILLBANKS'

"20 YEARS SERVING SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA"

What's the difference . . .

between Willbanks' and a so-called discount store? We are not located on a main street or in an expensive shopping center. Result: lower overhead, therefore lower prices to you. You are not lost in a crowd at Willbanks'. Each customer is given personalized attention by an experienced, courteous salesman. We are known for our excellent service before and after the sale. Service you can count on. We carry more full rolls than any so-called discount stores, which means easier selection for you, and fast installation. Your visit to Willbanks' will be a thrilling event. We are looking forward to seeing you.

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: May we have brief genealogy on McAVOY, McABOY.—W.M., Los Alamitos; R.M., Long Beach.

McAVOY and McABOY developed from the Irish clan surname Mac-A-Bhuidhe. Translated from Gaelic, this described "sons of the yellow-haired youth." Phonetic pronunciation and re-spelling produced the modern forms of this name. The clan was first recorded in Mayo, Ireland. Their armorial shield is crossed by a red stripe. The background above it is blue, decorated with a half silver lion. Below the stripe the left half is gold, emblazoned with a red hand; the right half is covered with ermine.

MISS RULE: Please explain FALCO, FALSONE.—J.F., San Pedro; E.L., S.F., Long Beach.

FALCO and FALSONE represent a medieval Italian ancestor nicknamed Falcone, meaning "falcon or hawk." His vigilance and watchfulness as a soldier were compared to an alert falcon. The Falco and Folco shield from Vicenze, Italy, is blue, crossed by a gold stripe on which are three red roses; at the shield's top are three gold stars on a silver band.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on HUCKABY, HUCKERBY. — J.H., W.R., E.C., Long Beach.

HUCKABY and HUCKERBY as surnames originated in Britain from "Huckerby," a combination of the ancestor's occupation and his home location. A "Huckere" was a 13th century seller of provisions. "By" referred to "settlement." The combined name designated "seller's settlement."

MISS RULE: Would like to know about ARAUJO.—A.C., Bellflower; E.A., Garden Grove.

ARAUJO from Spain began as a medieval dialect form of "Arrojo" and dignified the ancestor as "One with boldness and daring."

MISS RULE: Please inform us on DELZELL. — M.C., Downey; M.B., Wilmington.

DELZELL of Scotland is a variation of Dalzell. This lineage were natives of the village of Dalziel in Lanarkshire, south central Scotland. Their name began as the Scottish-Gaelic "Dail-yiel" meaning "Meadow and

Miracle Coating Eliminates House Painting

An exterior wall coating so tough and durable that it is guaranteed to totally eliminate exterior house painting for over 10 years. This remarkable textured coating is Fiberglass FLEXON.

BEST IN NATION

Homeowners are requested not to spend a single penny on painting their residences until they hear the FLEXON STORY. This remarkable material insulates, waterproofs and beautifies, and every Fiberglass FLEXON job is factory guaranteed for 10 full years against chipping, flaking or peeling.

Fiberglass, a product of Owens-Corning, brings to FLEXON its great strength, its wonderful insulating properties, its resistance to time, weather and chemical attack.

PROVEN OVER MANY YEARS

FLEXON is one of the oldest, tried and true coatings now being marketed and has been applied on thousands of homes and commercial buildings. These buildings have remained in perfect condition after more than 10 years exposure in all types of weather.

SHOT FROM A GUN

FLEXON is applied with heavy duty spray equipment and is actually "shot from a gun" without muss, fuss or odor. FLEXON fuses itself to the wall and fills holes, cracks and covers building defects.

The Students Are Dedicated

By Blaine Nels Simons

LONG BEACH has never wanted for publicity but one of its most unique institutions has never wanted any. Pacific Coast University of Law wishes only quietly to turn out well-trained law graduates who will go on to become leaders in the community's legal life.

Pacific Coast University was founded in Los Angeles in 1927. By 1946, so many of its law students were coming from Long Beach that a full-time school of law was established in this city. The school has been here since and classes are conducted on the Wilson High School campus three evenings a week. Classrooms are rented from the Long Beach Unified School District by both Pacific Coast and the University of California.

Pacific Coast's schedule is strictly an evening school. All of its students are employed full time during the day at a wide variety of jobs in the Long Beach area. Ninety-five per cent of its students are married. Considering, then, a normal 40-hour work week, at least 40 more in class and hard study, and carrying on of regular family life, these students can only be classed as 100% dedicated.

CARL H. MANSON, veteran law-school professor whose career has included distinguished periods with Ohio Northern, Southwestern and Loyola Law Schools, is dean of the school. Joining this respected legal educator on the faculty are such attorneys as Paul Strader, former U.S. judge at the postwar German war crimes trials; Deputy City Attorney Robert W. Parkin; and private practitioner W. S. Rainbolt. Harry Hunt, former superior court commissioner and city judge of San Gabriel-San Marino, and currently head of Transit Casualty Insurance Company's legal staff, and R. F. Bagley, former deputy district attorney, complete the staff.

The school offers a complete curricula leading to the degrees of Bachelor, and Master, of Laws. Students complete the Bachelor of Laws curriculum in four academic years.

Since the objective of any graduating law student is to pass his state bar examinations and become a practicing lawyer, Pacific Coast prepares its students by including among its courses all subjects used in state bar tests.

Add to this the fact that the faculty represents almost 100 years of law practice (as distinguished from straight teaching) and the result is production of graduates well-rounded in both the academic and everyday aspects of legal training. Nor does the school ever stand still on its merits. Currently, for example, W. R. (Bill) Peck, recently retired chief deputy in charge of the Long Beach branch of the county clerk's office, is preparing a series of lectures for senior students on the various procedures every lawyer must know but in which few students are ever instructed in law schools.

PACIFIC Coast's graduates have an excellent record of passing their state bar exams and from their ranks many have stayed on in the Long Beach area to become respected members of the legal and civic community. Among these are: Edwin J. Wilson, secretary-treasurer of the Long Beach Bar Association and member of the Long Beach city planning commission; Norman Rasmussen and Melvin Kambel, key members of California's law firm of Ball, Hunt & Hart; Dan Farnham of Baker, Farnham & Began (who worked his way through the school as a deputy municipal court clerk in Long Beach), and Henry Shriver, Alfred D. Williams, William White and Clyde Jones, attorneys. Each has nothing but the highest praise for Pacific Coast University's Law School.

The evening law student is unique. Typical is Richard Merrill of Garden Grove who received his Bachelor of Laws degree with scholastic distinction last June. During his years at Pacific Coast he held a full-time job. He is 35 years old and married. In these regards he is "typical" but beyond that he was the most unique of all students. Richard Merrill, you see, has ten children.

Our Cover

By the hundreds and by the thousands have come Asian girls, Latin girls, Middle East girls, young women from all corners of the globe to study at America's colleges and universities. Custom and economics make it difficult for girls to reach college in many countries, let alone to cross the seas. For instance about one out of 12 of the approximately 600 foreign students at Long Beach State College is female — enough to provide the Long Beach area with proof of the charm of the foreign girl. Today's cover picture of Preawphun Toochinda (left) and Sirlporn Luenguatana from Thailand, taken by Roger Coar, and a word-picture story on Page 7 by Jerome Hall show what we mean by "Imported Beauty — The Girls Who Cross Oceans to Get to Long Beach State."

Recipe Turmoil

By Ruth C. Ikerman

THE OTHER day in an ambitious streak I decided to go through my recipe file and try to bring some order out of the turmoil. The first thing I found was a piece called "My Best Marmalade," only I can't read the handwriting, and I am confused as to whether the word "My" refers to as friend, relative or acquaintance. It's not mine, for I can't make it because I'm not sure whether the amount of sugar involved is one cup or three.

The handwriting on the recipes I give to my friends is probably worse than theirs as handed to me, chiefly because we write them down when in a hurry and on our way to a meeting or coming home from shopping. There is one excellent recipe written on the back of a sales slip for a pair of stockings. Well do I remember the day I suddenly got a run in the pair I was wearing, and had to stop at the store and pick up a fresh pair before going on to club. During a lull in the program, my friend decided to write out her recipe for a new chocolate loaf cake. But the pencil slipped about the time of the baking powder insertion, and the sales slip is torn near the edge where she wrote down the icing ingredients. Better not try to make that cake until I call her and verify the sales slip.

WHY IS IT that women are perennially interested in new recipes, when almost nobody could possibly live long enough to try out all the recipes already collected at home in books and files and envelopes? Well probably the reason is that it is such fun to start with one recipe and make a new one.

When I asked a friend for her orange pie recipe, my husband asked that it be given to him instead. "I want to burn it so my wife won't experiment with this recipe," he told the hostess. "Just invite me here to eat this with you again sometime soon."

It is his considered opinion that the reason Eve tempted Adam with the apple was not so much to get him to eat it, but to give her some leftover apple to use in a new salad. Meanwhile I'd better get some order in my current files so I can have the fun of stirring and baking instead of just looking at recipe turmoil.

FROM BANGKOK, from Recife, from Ankara and from Accra and Osaka they come in an international cultural and educational exchange, those foreign beauties at Long Beach State College.

These amalgamous misses who have come from all corners of the world are part of the nationwide program cooperated in by most colleges and universities, a program that lists some 85,000 foreign students throughout the United States.

There are, at present, 600 foreign-born students on campus at Long Beach State College. Of these, 165 are here on temporary student visas (the others are, technically, "immigrants" intending to remain in the U. S.).

THE PROGRAM is termed "the most effective type of foreign aid we have," by Dr. Paul E. Opstad, counselor to all the foreign students on campus. "It is everlasting aid. In the best sense of the word these students are an investment."

The young women from Brazil and Turkey and Thailand and Japan get generally better grades than their American counterparts. And they work hard. "Their reading speed is about one-tenth of the American students," says Dr. Opstad, "so you can imagine how much time they spend cracking the books."

The girls (and men foreign students, too) are proficient in the English language before entering college here, usually having studied the language for five to seven years in their native lands. But often their proficiency is only in reading and writing English because they have had little opportunity to speak or hear it, so it takes time to learn the various sounds which mght not be part of their own tongue.

"And nothing," says Dr. Opstad, "can prepare them in advance for our slang. Often our common slang expressions will send a foreign lass into a deep blush ('Oh, I would never pull your leg,' they'll say aghast)."

Recipe Turmoil

THE OTHER day in an ambitious streak I decided to go through my recipe file and try to bring some order out of the turmoil. Hobby Inspired by Cut Glass

By Helen L. Gillum

SOME years ago, Mrs. Ruthanne Lorenzen, 775 Roswell Ave., received a beautiful gift from her grandmother — a sparkling cut-glass compote. Since the bowl had originally been a wedding present to her grandmother, Mrs. Lorenzen was especially appreciative of having the dish. However, because of its unique butterfly design, the compote also inspired a new interest for Mrs. Lorenzen; she decided that she would like to possess additional cut glass containing butterflies in the pattern.

She now owns nearly two dozen pieces of cut glass, all featuring the lovely butterfly figure. But, as she says, "It hasn't been easy to find these pieces. They are really scarce!"

RESEARCH on this particular design feature also revealed that information about it was almost as difficult to find as the glassware itself. Occasionally, a magazine article could be found among the antiques publications that gave brief mention. For instance, "Spinning Wheel" for November 1962 says that, ". . . Albin Carlson, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, on June 23, 1914 . . . registered Patent No. 45, 987, a design which featured a large butterfly hovering above a spray of flowers . . ." This pattern was used on a cut-glass vase.

A recently published book on cut glass also includes some material on the butterfly. But for the most part, both the butterfly theme and the cut glass using it are hard to come by.

BE THAT as it may, Mrs. Lorenzen's gleaming cut-glass "butterfly" collection is outstanding, whether considered from the beauty angle or from its value as a rare item.

A Harvard-cut table lamp, 25 inches high, with crystal pendants hanging from the shade and with butterflies in both shade and the base, is perhaps the most elegant item. The lamp, an anniversary gift from her husband, possibly goes as far back as 1835. Purchased from a local shop, it is in constant use. A large jewel box with butterflies and carnations rests on the table beside the lamp.

A LADIES' cuspidor in the same pattern as the jewel box sits on an elegant whatnot stand or "etegere", across the room. Here can be seen an unusual vase, 12 inches high, containing a sharply cut geometric butterfly among flowers. A set consisting of a fruit bowl, compote, creamer, sugar bowl and cruet, gleams with matching butterflies and flowers in each item.

Butterflies flutter among birds and water lilies on separate pieces, and a powder jar has richly cut butterflies hovering over garlands of flowers. The butterfly is effectively used with cosmos in a nappie, pickle and celery dish. Brilliantly-cut birds, flowers and butterflies sparkle on a large, shallow bowl and other pieces.

About 170,000 different issues of stamps have been produced around the world, and millions of people are engrossed in collecting them.

One of first triangle stamps.

Hobby of Kids, Kings

Long Beach stamp dealer Willi Schmidt, above, has spent 65 years in the trade and his advice to hobbyists in stamp collecting is: "Start young." The stamp hobby draws devotees from all walks of life and all ages. Right, Henry H. Frazier, treasurer; Raymond D. Rodgers, president, and Carl Davenport, vice president, of Long Beach Stamp Club, look over a page of stamps from Viet Nam.

By ROBERT HAZELLEAF

WHEN THE pressures of the presidency weighed too heavily on Franklin D. Roosevelt, he'd disappear for an hour or two. Pleas for his attention were answered by his staff in a single short sentence: "He's with his stamps."

Men as dissimilar as England's King George V and Egypt's King Farouk found solitude, entertainment and knowledge in their valuable stamp collections. So, too, have others — from 10-year-olds getting their first dime-store assortments to wealthy men who bid into the thousands for a rare specimen.

Since the beginning of time, man has had the urge to collect things—all kinds of things—for the pure joy of having more of something than his fellows.

Is that why millions of persons collect stamps? Partly, perhaps, but there is much more to it.

ENGLAND STARTED it all in 1840, when the penny post came into being to mark an important breakthrough in man's effort to communicate. Since then, some 170,000 different issues have been produced around the world, leading to what would have to be called the tycoons of philately, the international collectors.

Look closely at a simple-appearing postage stamp. It is a composite effort by artists of high caliber and by some of the world's finest engravers, lithographers and papermakers, all working to manufacture a hard-to-counterfeit receipt for prepaid postage, easily identifiable and at the same time attractive.

Since an Englishman, Mount Brown, published the first stamp catalog in 1864, scores of catalogs, magazines and newspaper columns have flourished through the years, all devoted to stamps.

SPECIALIZED philatelists sprang up rapidly, until today there are collectors who seek only airmails, stamps with pictures of animals or flowers, still others portraying famous men and women.

A Long Beach stamp dealer, Willi Schmidt, has worked with all kinds of collectors during his 65 years in the trade. Since 1929 he has had his shop in the Jergins Arcade, catering to the needs of everyone from youngsters getting started to advanced philatelists in search of a genuine rarity.

The nucleus of his advice to beginners is contained in two words: "Start young."

"If you start young," he explains, "you can begin building an international collection that will be worth following all your life. You'll learn much of history, politics, geography. And the more you learn the more you will become interested.

THE CHOICE for a beginner is wide open. Assortments featuring hundreds of stamps are on display in Long Beach variety stores, and won't make too large a dent in an allowance. Schmidt suggests choosing stamps in window envelopes that give some inkling of the contents. There are some packets loaded with Cuban and Communist Chinese stamps that are virtually worthless.

Businessmen with large volumes of mail, some of it from foreign countries, can be a source of canceled stamps for the new philatelist, especially if a kind-hearted secretary will save complete envelopes or cut off the corners with stamps and cancellations.

"Whatever you do," admonishes Willi Schmidt, "get a good stamp album. A well-kept collection of perfect stamps is worth many, many times an accumulation that hasn't been maintained. And don't specialize too soon. There's plenty of time for that."

TO PROVE his point, Schmidt mentions a Long Beach collection of more than 100,000 stamps of different issues. "The collection is valuable not only because the owner has so many excellent specimens, but because he is meticulous in their care. The man is retired now, but he started when he was only 9 years old."

Stamps for cataloging should be placed in albums with hinges or mounts easily available in stores or through stamp dealers. They cost little and are made so as not to damage stamps as they are handled and transferred.

"Always handle stamps with stamp tongs (tweezers)," Schmidt says. "That way you won't ruin a good stamp by soiling, tearing or creasing it. A $50 stamp can be dropped to less than $5 by a smudge or thin spot in the paper."

While the spectacular rarities sell for as much as $50,000, inexpensive issues are not without interesting backgrounds. German issues during 1923 often show denominations into the millions of marks. Disastrous currency devaluation forced overprinting even before new issues left their vaults. Thus it's common to see stamps originally designated "100 million" overprinted to "500 million."

LATER FOREIGN issues, too, are colorful and interesting as new countries emerge, as historical events are recalled in stamps and as famous personages are honored.

Then there are the "postage stamp" countries of Europe — Andorra, Monaco, Lichtenstein and San Marino, to mention

Stamps Exhibited at Long Beach Show

Valuable collections of stamps will be on display at the third annual Long Beach Coin and Stamp Show commencing Thursday and continuing through next Sunday in Long Beach Municipal Auditorium. Show hours will be 9:30 a. m. to 10 p. m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and 9:30 to 8 p. m. Sunday.

Midget Assassin

By Bob and Jan Young

LACKING mice to feed his snakes, a university lab technician dropped a mouse-like animal into a reptile cage. Later, he came back to take out the snake and found that there was only the little animal and he was frantically sniffing the cage as though searching for food. Then the technician realized that he had put a shrew in with the snake. The shrew had devoured the reptile, body, skin, skull and bones and was racing about looking for more snakes!

Well he might, because the shrew's fantastic rate of living is so rapid it will die if starved for as little as three hours! And the creatures are so nervous they sometimes die from merely being captured.

Shrews are the smallest American mammals, perhaps smallest in the world in this category. Native to California are the Yosemite, Trowbridge, Wandering, Dusky and Water shrews. They are distributed from the upper edge of the foothills across the Sierra to the eastern base, some in wet places near streams or in meadows, others in drier spots—in short, anywhere.

One variety weighs approximately 1/14 of an ounce; the largest less than one ounce and is seldom more than six inches from stub tail to tip of its long pointed nose.

The shrew begins life no larger than a bee in a litter of 4 to 8 other shrews, their combined weight less than a silver dime. Except for natural enemies — skunks, hawks, owls and coyotes—the world might be up to its knees in shrews. There are three litters annually.

SHREWS, born in well-hidden nests, are quickly weaned and kicked out.

Young shrews begin gulping down vast quantities of crickets, ants, snails, lizards and carrion. One variety delights in Douglas fir seeds. From this rather catholic diet, the shrew daily eats three times its weight. Because of their awesome insect consumption they are considered important conservationists.

The shrew has poor eyesight and, it is possible, may not be as ferocious as just bad judges of size. For, without hesitation, the shrew will attack animals several sizes larger than himself, and almost invariably emerges victor.

SHREWS HAVE a thong-tough hide, especially around the neck, and their keen teeth rip and slash so effectively that a larger animal is mortally wounded before he can grasp this little assassin. Their tremendous nervous energy propels them about in quick, jerky motions that have no pattern. They frenetically twitter and squeak. When the kill is made and they are avidly devouring their opponent, they squeal maniacally.

Even when the shrew is relatively quiet, its nose twiches and its ears move about like radar screens.

But they have reason to be alert because of their propensity to fret themselves to death and their lack of resistance to exposure. Shrews have died because no bedding was provided in traps, and a cold snap will kill off hundreds.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Photo

White-lipped water shrew, one of the many varieties of nature's under-sized assassins.

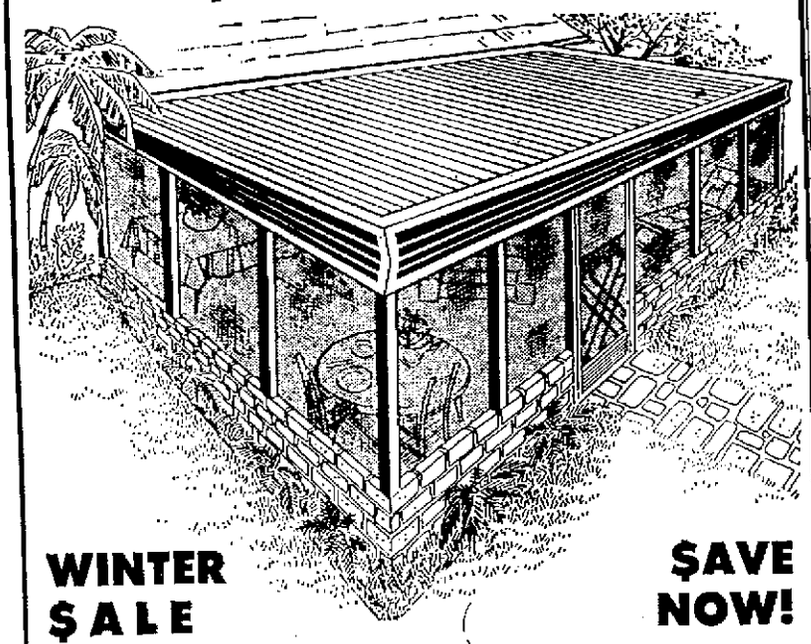
Predators don't avidly seek shrews because of two small musk glands in their rear legs and animals not used to this offensive odor will often drop the shrew before doing any damage, though the shrew may have died from the excitement.

ONE OF THE thirty-odd species which inhabit North America hunts entirely in water, although many shrews thrive in damp, boggy areas near water. Holding air bubbles in their feet, they skitter across the surface of a pool, walking on water, if the surface is sufficiently quiet.

Despite an inability to withstand cold, some have a dense oily, mouse-colored fur and a hair webbing between toes aids in swimming. The shrew will slash into a school of small fish or tadpoles, harvesting them like a lawnmower. With the fish scattered, the shrew gulps air, then runs along the stream bed, snapping at snails, leeches or larvae.

The shrew will leap on a slow-moving fish, such as a carp, to slice away flesh, then immediately turn to devour a frog. Fagged, the water shrew dives to an underwater burrow entrance, suns himself for a moment before resuming the insatiable hunt. It never hibernates because it would die quickly of hunger.

SHREWS ARE weird, nonconformists. The European "white-fanged shrew," if harm threatens, signals one of the youngsters to hold fast to the mother's rump with its teeth, and the others follow in line, each holding to the one ahead. If one loses its grip the mother will pick up the straggler in her mouth and carry it. These shrews are protected by laws.



Not the least of the shrew surprises is that one variety is poisonous!

As far back as Pliny the Elder who died in 79 AD, there have been tales: "...if he byte it swelleth to the heart and the beast dyeth." But scientists put down such nonsense, even though women, with poisonous mouths, were called shrews. Rapacious men were called shrewd.

Recently, the short-tailed shrewd was proved venomous and others may be found. Bitten, mice become paralyzed, their eyes bug and convulsions precede death. The venom, a cobra-variety, flows along lower incisor teeth. No human deaths have been recorded. Bite effects are similar to an aggravated wasp sting.

There are recurring hints about the poisonous creatures. Literature is laced with references to Gypsy potions. Perhaps Shakespeare's witches in Macbeth stirred shrews in their magic brews.

About 170,000 different issues of stamps have been produced around the world, and millions of people are engrossed in collecting them.

One of first triangle stamps.

Hobby of Kids, Kings

Long Beach stamp dealer Willi Schmidt, above, has spent 65 years in the trade and his advice to hobbyists in stamp collecting is: "Start young." The stamp hobby draws devotees from all walks of life and all ages. Right, Henry H. Frazier, treasurer; Raymond D. Rodgers, president, and Carl Davenport, vice president, of Long Beach Stamp Club, look over a page of stamps from Viet Nam.

By ROBERT HAZELLEAF

WHEN THE pressures of the presidency weighed too heavily on Franklin D. Roosevelt, he'd disappear for an hour or two. Pleas for his attention were answered by his staff in a single short sentence: "He's with his stamps."

Men as dissimilar as England's King George V and Egypt's King Farouk found solitude, entertainment and knowledge in their valuable stamp collections. So, too, have others — from 10-year-olds getting their first dime-store assortments to wealthy men who bid into the thousands for a rare specimen.

Since the beginning of time, man has had the urge to collect things—all kinds of things—for the pure joy of having more of something than his fellows.

Is that why millions of persons collect stamps? Partly, perhaps, but there is much more to it.

ENGLAND STARTED it all in 1840, when the penny post came into being to mark an important breakthrough in man's effort to communicate. Since then, some 170,000 different issues have been produced around the world, leading to what would have to be called the tycoons of philately, the international collectors.

Look closely at a simple-appearing postage stamp. It is a composite effort by artists of high caliber and by some of the world's finest engravers, lithographers and papermakers, all working to manufacture a hard-to-counterfeit receipt for prepaid postage, easily identifiable and at the same time attractive.

Since an Englishman, Mount Brown, published the first stamp catalog in 1864, scores of catalogs, magazines and newspaper columns have flourished through the years, all devoted to stamps.

SPECIALIZED philatelists sprang up rapidly, until today there are collectors who seek only airmails, stamps with pictures of animals or flowers, still others portraying famous men and women.

A Long Beach stamp dealer, Willi Schmidt, has worked with all kinds of collectors during his 65 years in the trade. Since 1929 he has had his shop in the Jergins Arcade, catering to the needs of everyone from youngsters getting started to advanced philatelists in search of a genuine rarity.

The nucleus of his advice to beginners is contained in two words: "Start young."

"If you start young," he explains, "you can begin building an international collection that will be worth following all your life. You'll learn much of history, politics, geography. And the more you learn the more you will become interested.

THE CHOICE for a beginner is wide open. Assortments featuring hundreds of stamps are on display in Long Beach variety stores, and won't make too large a dent in an allowance. Schmidt suggests choosing stamps in window envelopes that give some inkling of the contents. There are some packets loaded with Cuban and Communist Chinese stamps that are virtually worthless.

Businessmen with large volumes of mail, some of it from foreign countries, can be a source of canceled stamps for the new philatelist, especially if a kind-hearted secretary will save complete envelopes or cut off the corners with stamps and cancellations.

"Whatever you do," admonishes Willi Schmidt, "get a good stamp album. A well-kept collection of perfect stamps is worth many, many times an accumulation that hasn't been maintained. And don't specialize too soon. There's plenty of time for that."

TO PROVE his point, Schmidt mentions a Long Beach collection of more than 100,000 stamps of different issues. "The collection is valuable not only because the owner has so many excellent specimens, but because he is meticulous in their care. The man is retired now, but he started when he was only 9 years old."

Stamps for cataloging should be placed in albums with hinges or mounts easily available in stores or through stamp dealers. They cost little and are made so as not to damage stamps as they are handled and transferred.

"Always handle stamps with stamp longs (tweezers)," Schmidt says. "That way you won't ruin a good stamp by soiling, tearing or creasing it. A $50 stamp can be dropped to less than $5 by a smudge or thin spot in the paper."

While the spectacular rarities sell for as much as $50,000, inexpensive issues are not without interesting backgrounds. German issues during 1923 often show denominations into the millions of marks. Disastrous currency devaluation forced overprinting even before new issues left their vaults. Thus it's common to see stamps originally designated "100 million" overprinted to "500 million."

LATER FOREIGN issues, too, are colorful and interesting as new countries emerge, as historical events are recalled in stamps and as famous personages are honored.

Then there are the "postage stamp" countries of Europe — Andorra, Monaco, Lichtenstein and San Marino, to mention

Stamps Exhibited at Long Beach Show

Valuable collections of stamps will be on display at the third annual Long Beach Coin and Stamp Show commencing Thursday and continuing through next Sunday in Long Beach Municipal Auditorium. Show hours will be 9:30 a. m. to 10 p. m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and 9:30 to 8 p. m. Sunday.

Down to the Last Drop

With Southland population explosion inevitable, Rossmoor is subjected to tap test to determine how much precious water suburbia uses.

By BILL DUNCAN

As part of a state survey, a research makes a laboratory test of Rossmoor water to determine its mineral content (above). An average of 220 gallons of water flows through kitchens (upper left), bathrooms (left) and other indoor plumbing fixtures daily in Rossmoor. Findings will be combined with other area surveys and will help with decisions on future water policies in California.

WATER IS THE most precious commodity in Southern California—the section of the state with the greatest need and the smallest supply. The reason for the need is the Southland's rapid urbanization. The short supply—nothing new to the region—is caused by the perennial drought in the near-desert terrain at the southern end of the state.

The state's water engineers, in order to quench the powerful thirst created by urbanization, must literally count every drop of water. To get an accurate gauge on water use in urban areas, the State Department of Water Resouces is conducting a series of studies on water consumption in urban and metropolitan areas.

One of these surveys, a two-year drop counting study, was recently completed in Rossmoor, the walled Orange County community just east of Long Beach.

ROSSMOOR was selected for the study, according to James J. Doody, state water resources district engineer, because of its climate, economics, topography and density of population. Rossmoor, with a population of more than 10,000, is a middle class single-family dwelling tract situated on 1,057 acres bounded by Katella Avenue, Los Alamitos Boulevard, the San Gabriel River and the San Diego Freeway.

With 3.83 homes for each acre, the tract is typical of the mushroom growth of urban residential tracts. It provided the state with an ideal study area for water use because most of the Rossmoor homes are equipped with such water-using modern devices as dishwashers, garbage disposals, washing machines, sprinkler systems and multiple bathrooms.

It is a relatively new development so the state had access to records of previous water deliveries and sewage discharges. The Rossmoor study involved a total of 3,448 homes in the walled tract, but to get a more detailed analysis of home water consumption, the state picked 12 test homes at various locations within the community. Every drop of water used by these homes was measured by special meters installed both inside and outside the homes.

IN ADDITION to Rossmoor, the state is currently engaged in surveys of this type in Monterey Park and in downtown Los Angeles.

In summary, the Rossmoor water use investigation disclosed:

—That the average family of 3 to 5 persons uses 500 gallons of water a day—an average of 134 gallons per person.

—That an average of 220 gallons of water flows through kitchens, bathrooms and other indoor plumbing fixtures daily.

—That more than half—56% or 280 gallons a day—is used outdoors in sprinklers, garden hoses and swimming pools.

—That rainfall, heavy or light, makes little difference in the total annual water consumption.

—That water consumption, as it would be expected, goes up in the summer months and down in the winter. However, indoor water consumption, it was found, remains almost stable summer or winter.

—That water use in a tract or a cluster of single-family dwellings is less than on a citywide per capital consumption basis, mainly due to the heavy draw of supplies by industrial and commercial users.

RAW STATISTICS such as these are the prizes gleaned from long, painstaking measures by water engineers involved in the Rossmoor study. William E. Warne, director of the State's Water Resources, explains why the survey is important to the future planning for urbanization:

"Water agency people are concerned with growth. Consider the impact of somewhere between 50 and 60 million people living in California in the next 50 years as compared with its present 18 million population. This three-fold increase brings with it needs to be satisfied and water will play one of the biggest roles in meeting these needs. The Rossmoor tract—and hundreds like it—stand today on what was once land occupied by orange groves, pastures or bean fields 10 years ago."

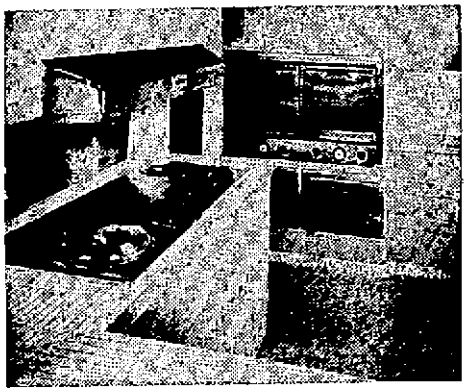
Using the data collected in Rossmoor, state water engineers can develop a formula to supply the necessary water to meet the anticipated population increase. More than half of the expected 60 million population will live in Southern California, it is predicted.

AS PART of the Rossmoor survey, state engineers left little to chance. They took soil samples, evaporation readings, measured the depth of the soak or penetration of lawn irrigation and tested the water used in Rossmoor for its hardness or mineral content.

The soil in the tract, the tests showed, runs from a silty clay to a silty clay loam and the dark grayish-brown soil, heavy with alkali, generally repels a deep soak. The average homeowner irrigates his lawns and shrubbery as deep as 3.28 feet—about as deep as the soil will take water before causing it to run off.

Water is supplied to the community by Southern California Water Co., a private water firm that cooperated with the state survey. The state found that the water, drawn from six wells in the area, was of a sodium-calcium bicarbonate mineral character.

Typical of the 12 test homes are those of John Home at 2761 Oak Knoll Drive, where a family of three resides, and the David Converse home, at the corner of Main Way and Foster Road, where a family of five lives.



THESE HOMES, like the other 10, were carefully selected to provide the state with a type of home that was different from the rest by some characteristic. Home, a ship pilot at the Seal Beach Navy installation, said his home was chosen because he was half way through with his landscaping plans when the test began. The state wanted to check the increase and decrease of water usage as the landscaping progressed.

Converse said his home had a wider side yard than most Rossmoor homes and had a lush landscaping scheme. He also has small children, which the state needed in the test to determine amounts of water used by families as compared to water used by adults only.

"WE USED water as normally as we would have if the test had not been conducted," Converse said, even though he realized that every drop of water used in his home was being monitored.

"Much has been learned from the Rossmoor experiment," the state water engineers say. "The state needs to know where the precious water supply is going as California changes from a rural to an urban way of life."

The changing face of California will depend on supplying water to its urban areas.

Midget Assassin

By Bob and Jan Young

LACKING mice to feed his snakes, a university lab technician dropped a mouse-like animal into a reptile cage. Later, he came back to take out the snake and found that there was only the little animal and he was frantically sniffing the cage as though searching for food. Then the technician realized that he had put a shrew in with the snake. The shrew had devoured the reptile, body, skin, skull and bones and was racing about looking for more snakes!

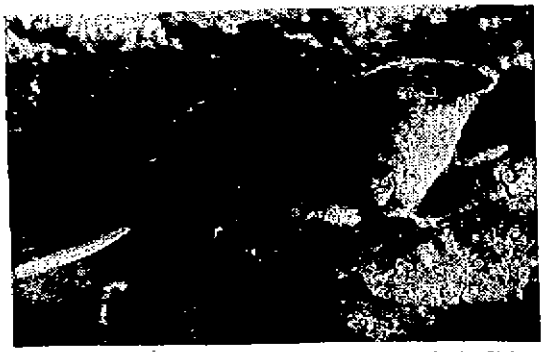
Well he might, because the shrew's fantastic rate of living is so rapid it will die if starved for as little as three hours! And the creatures are so nervous they sometimes die from merely being captured.

Shrews are the smallest American mammals, perhaps smallest in the world in this category. Native to California are the Yosemite, Trowbridge, Wandering, Dusky and Water shrews. They are distributed from the upper edge of the foothills across the Sierra to the eastern base, some in wet places near streams or in meadows, others in drier spots—in short, anywhere.

One variety weighs approximately 1/14 of an ounce; the largest less than one ounce and is seldom more than six inches from stub tail to tip of its long pointed nose.

The shrew begins life no larger than a bee in a litter of 4 to 8 other shrews, their combined weight less than a silver dime. Except for natural enemies — skunks, hawks, owls and coyotes—the world might be up to its knees in shrews. There are three litters annually.

SHREWS, born in well-hidden nests, are quickly weaned and kicked out.



Young shrews begin gulping down vast quantities of crickets, ants, snails, lizards and carrion. One variety delights in Douglas-fir seeds. From this rather catholic diet, the shrew daily eats three times its weight. Because of their awesome insect consumption they are considered important conservationists.

The shrew has poor eyesight and, it is possible, may not be as ferocious as just bad judges of size. For, without hesitation, the shrew will attack animals several sizes larger than himself, and almost invariably emerges victor.

SHREWS HAVE a thong-tough hide, especially around the neck, and their keen teeth rip and slash so effectively that a larger animal is mortally wounded before he can grasp this little assassin. Their tremendous nervous energy propels them about in quick, jerky motions that have no pattern. They frenetically twitter and squeak. When the kill is made and they are avidly devouring their opponent, they squeal maniacally.

Even when the shrew is relatively quiet, its nose twiches and its ears move about like radar screens.

But they have reason to be alert because of their propensity to fret themselves to death and their lack of resistance to exposure. Shrews have died because no bedding was provided in traps, and a cold snap will kill off hundreds.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Photo

White-lipped water shrew, one of the many varieties of nature's under-sized assassins.

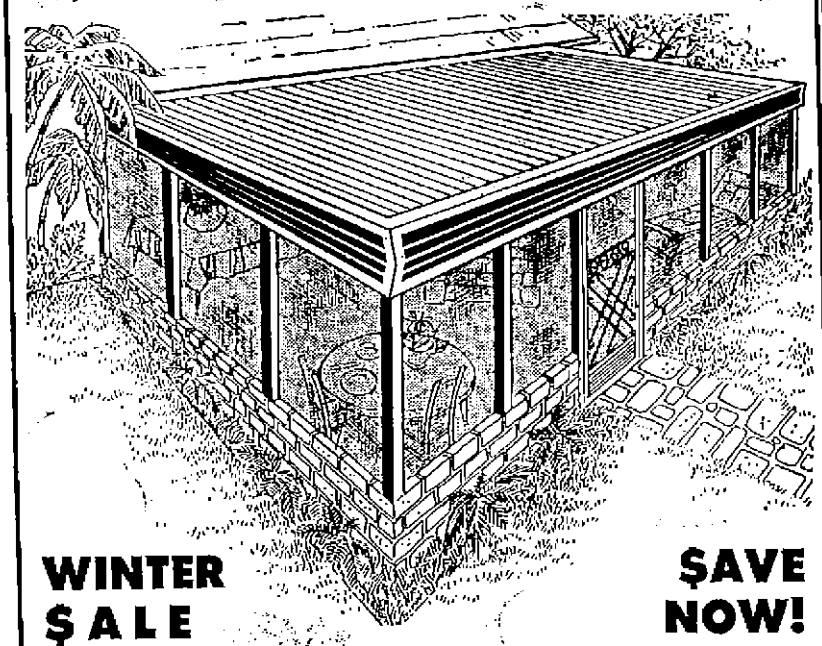
Predators don't avidly seek shrews because of two small musk glands in their rear legs and animals not used to this offensive odor will often drop the shrew before doing any damage, though the shrew may have died from the excitement.

ONE OF THE thirty-odd species which inhabit North America hunts entirely in water, although many shrews thrive in damp, boggy areas near water. Holding air bubbles in their feet, they skitter across the surface of a pool, walking on water, if the surface is sufficiently quiet.

Despite an inability to withstand cold, some have a dense oily, mouse-colored fur and a hair webbing between toes aids in swimming. The shrew will slash into a school of small fish or tadpoles, harvesting them like a lawnmower. With the fish scattered, the shrew gulps air, then runs along the stream bed, snapping at snails, leeches or larvae.

The shrew will leap on a slow-moving fish, such as a carp, to slice away flesh, then immediately turn to devour a frog. Fagged, the water shrew dives to an underwater burrow entrance, suns himself for a moment before resuming the insatiable hunt. It never hibernates because it would die quickly of hunger.

SHREWS ARE weird, nonconformists. The European "white-fanged shrew," if harm threatens, signals one of the youngsters to hold fast to the mother's rump with its teeth, and the others follow in line, each holding to the one ahead. If one loses its grip the mother will pick up the straggler in her mouth and carry it. These shrews are protected by laws.



Not the least of the shrew surprises is that one variety is poisonous!

As far back as Pliny the Elder who died in 79 AD, there have been tales: "... If he byte it swelleth to the heart and the beast dyeth." But scientists put down such nonsense, even though women, with poisonous mouths, were called shrews. Rapacious men were called shrewd.

Recently, the short-tailed shrewd was proved venomous and others may be found. Bitten, mice become paralyzed, their eyes bug and convulsions precede death. The venom, a cobra-variety, flows along lower incisor teeth. No human deaths have been recorded. Bite effects are similar to an aggravated wasp sting.

There are recurring hints about the poisonous creatures. Literature is laced with references to Gypsy potions. Perhaps Shakespeare's witches in Macbeth stirred shrews in their magic brews.

Ready for Instant Living

By Stella George

Streamlined simplicity marks the decorating style of the Mitchell Dions' home. Above, a look into the living room. Below, the much-used family room is luxurious yet practical.

LANDSCAPING is in the growing stage but the enjoyable home of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Dion in picturesque Palos Verdes, specifically 4962 Silver Arrow Road, is ready for instant living.

Partiality of the owners to warm, earthy colors was the key to the decorating of the residence, which was planned and executed by Don McLaughlin and Dick Sharp, interior designers. Carpeting throughout is olive green and all walls are off white.

Barrel chairs in the living room are green on green wool shadow stripes. The wood frame chair is orange, rust, and earth green in tones. Pictures, pillows, and lamps all echo the warm autumn colors.

Unique Project

Fatshedera grows well indoors and out, where there is good light and it makes an excellent background for tropical plants of all kinds. Under indoor conditions the stems are weaker and more adequate support must be supplied to hold the plants in place.

A unique project of specialists in unusual effects is to graft ivy branches of the small-leaf varieties into branches of mature plants of Fatshedera. When the ivy becomes established in it's new growing medium, foliage of the Fatshedera is removed. The result is a series of waterfalling clumps of ivy suspended from odd-shaped branches of the parent shrub. This treatment provides unusual plants for pots displayed in shops and apartments.

Ready for Instant Living

By Stella George

Streamlined simplicity marks the decorating style of the Mitchell Dions' home. Above, a look into the living room. Below, the much-used family room is luxurious yet practical.

LANDSCAPING is in the growing stage but the enjoyable home of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Dion in picturesque Palos Verdes, specifically 4982 Silver Arrow Road, is ready for instant living.

Partiality of the owners to warm, earthy colors was the key to the decorating of the residence, which was planned and executed by Don McLaughlin and Dick Sharp, interior designers. Carpeting throughout is olive green and all walls are off white.

Barrel chairs in the living room are green on green wool shadow stripes. The wood frame chair is orange, rust, and earth green in tones. Pictures, pillows, and lamps all echo the warm autumn colors.

The 54-inch, round cock-

Unique Project

Fatshedera grows well indoors and out, where there is good light and it makes an excellent background for tropical plants of all kinds. Under indoor conditions the stems are weaker and more adequate support must be supplied to hold the plants in place.

A unique project of specialists in unusual effects is to graft ivy branches of the small-leaf varieties into branches of mature plants of Fatshedera. When the ivy becomes established in it's new growing medium, foliage of the Fatshedera is removed. The result is a series of waterfalling clumps of ivy suspended from odd-shaped branches of the parent shrub. This treatment provides unusual plants for pots displayed in shops and apartments.

Tooled leather, telling a legend of ancient Peru, tops the table in the foreground above. Stools serving the table are also topped in the leather.

tail table is topped with tooled leather. Here the design unfolds an interesting legend of old Peru. Six carved stools are also topped in tooled leather, and each stool is embossed on top with the crest of the six major cities of Peru. The Dions are fond of international appointments and the designers have carried this idea throughout the entire home.

THE FAMILY ROOM separates into three areas for kitchen, family dining and relaxing. It is luxurious, yet, at the same time, very practical. Flooring is off-white cobblestone laid vinyl, and the relaxing area has a rug of deep wool pile dyed in soft greens, rust, and a dash of paprika.

The soft is covered in olive green textured fabric. The dark walnut frame of the sofa matches the wood of the built-in stereo and that of the kitchen cabinets. The wood frame chairs are painted burnt orange and upholstered in burnt orange and olive green. In the family dining area, the dinette chairs are each covered in a different color fabric matching the colors in the area rug.

THE MASTER bedroom is a cool retreat in shades of blues and soft yellows. Son Michael's room is off white with greens and rich browns. Daughter Lindsey has a feminine room fashioned in olive green, pinks, and reds. Both rooms have a hobby or recreation area.

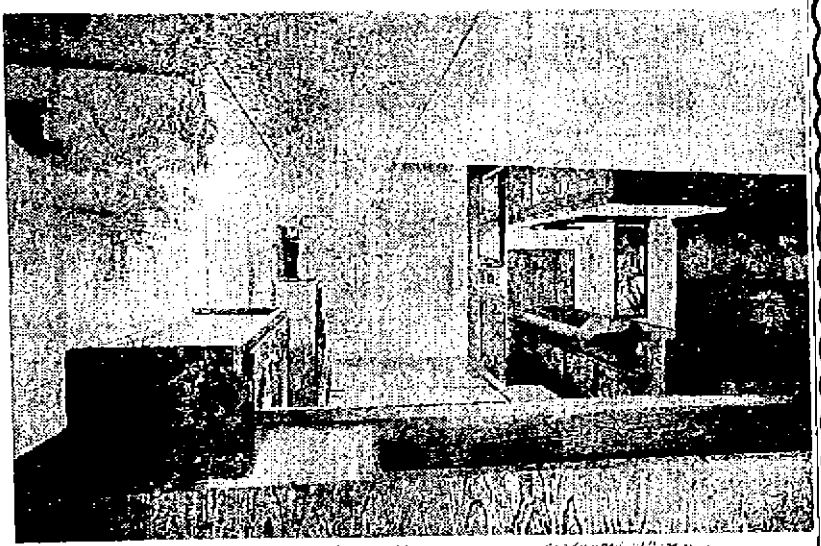

Photo above shows the long sweep of the modern kitchen. Cabinets are finished in dark walnut. Landscaping needs time yet to achieve quality, but home's ready for living.

Hot and Hearty for the Family

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

HOT AND HEARTY family meals are just the ticket for these wintry days. Condensed canned soups and delicious dairy products make perfect "convenience foods" partners for satisfying menus.

As a menu you'll like, we suggest:

Tomato Sour Cream Bisque
Beef Skillet Stew
Tossed Green Salad
French Rolls with Herbed Butter
Milk
Baked Fruit Crunch

Tomato Sour Cream Bisque

- ¼ cup (½ stick) butter
- 1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ¼ teaspoon leaf thyme
- 2 cans (11 oz. each) condensed bisque of tomato soup
- ½ cup dairy sour cream
- 2 cups water
- Chopped chives or parsley

In 1½ quart saucepan melt butter; saute mushrooms, garlic and thyme. Add soup and sour cream; gradually stir in water. Heat to serving temperature, stirring occasionally. Garnish with chives or parsley. 4-6 servings.

Beef Skillet Stew

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1½ pounds boneless beef, cubed
- 2 cans (10½ oz. each) condensed cream of mushroom soup
- ¼ teaspoon leaf marjoram
- 4 medium carrots, cut in 2-inch pieces
- 1½ cups small white onions OR 4 medium onions, quartered
- 1 cup celery cut in 2-inch pieces
- Chopped parsley

In large covered skillet melt butter; brown beef. Add soup and marjoram. Cover and simmer 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Add carrots, onions and celery. Simmer 1 additional hour or until meat and vegetables are tender. Serve garnished with parsley. 4-6 servings.

French Rolls With Herbed Butter

- 1 package (10 oz.) brown and serve French rolls
- ½ cup (1 stick) butter, softened
- ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- Generous dash crushed basil
- Generous dash garlic powder
- Generous dash crushed oregano

Slice rolls almost through to bottom. In a bowl blend together butter, cheese, basil, garlic powder and oregano; spread between slices of bread. Place on baking sheet. Bake on baking sheet 10 minutes in preheated 400 degree oven or until golden brown. 4 servings.

Baked Fruit Crunch

- 1 can (1 lb.) apricot halves, drained
- 1 can (1 lb.) pear halves, drained
- ¼ cup raisins
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- ¼ cup (½ stick) butter, softened
- 1 cup corn flakes

Place fruit in 1-quart casserole; sprinkle with lemon juice. Combine sugar, butter and corn flakes; sprinkle over fruit. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven 15-20 minutes. Serve with sweetened whipped cream. 4-6 servings.

COIN ROUNDUP

Rare Penny

By Maurice Gould

AN INDIAN HEAD cent very much in demand is the one dated 1864 with the "L" on the ribbon.

The coin without the "L" is fairly common and the number struck is a little over 39,000,000. Possibly included in this mintage figure is the 1864 with "L" because no separate records have been found which show the number struck of this particular variety.

The initial in question is that of J. B. Longacre, the mint engraver of this period just a century ago. It is interesting to note that all Indian Head Cents dated after 1864 do have the "L".

The simplest way I know of to locate the "L" is to look at the obverse of the coin and have the words "of America" directly in front of you. Look at the word "Liberty" and go along, following the line of this word. The "L" appears underneath the last feather of the headdress and is slightly raised.

AN ALTERNATIVE method of checking the "L" on the ribbon is to look at the extreme lower left of the Indian Head Cent. If it bears the "L" the bust will be pointed and just over the "1" in the date. If it is the plain 1864, it is round and extends far over the "1" in the date.

Even though I have read stories to the contrary, there are cases where the "L" can be seen on coins which may be in only Fair or Good condition, but naturally the better the condition, the stronger the "L" shows up.

For some reason, this particular variety shows up in New England and the Eastern seaboard and evidently was not placed in circulation out West; one remembers the 1908 and 1909 San Francisco Mint Indian Head Cents which circulated mostly on the West Coast.

Indian head cent of 1864 with "L" on ribbon is rare item of premium value.

The 1864-L catalogs $60 in Fine condition and $285 in Uncirculated condition and is worth several thousand dollars in Proof condition; but there are only 20 Proof specimens known to exist.

ANOTHER POPULAR U. S. series is the Indian Head or Buffalo Type Five-Cent Piece; these pieces have also been called "The Bison."

Many inquiries are received about the 1913 date, which is not a scarce item. It is the 1913 LIBERTY HEAD NICKEL, an entirely different style, with only five known, which is worth a small fortune.

Mintages of the Buffalo Type coins are not very large and these coins wore down very rapidly, making it difficult to obtain them in top condition.

Many of the coins catalog $100 or more, with the 1926-S bringing $400 in Uncirculated condition, the 1924-S, $450, and the 1921-S $300.

THERE IS ONE overdate, the 1918-D over 7 variety, which is very valuable. It runs as high as $4,250 in New condition in the catalog and $200 in Very Good condition. In the very low grades, it becomes quite difficult to distinguish the overdate.

The 1938-D over S variety was discovered a few years ago, and this now catalogs for $50 in Uncirculated condition.

The 1937-D three-legged nickel was discovered during 1937 in the Montana area. This item is also very scarce in Uncirculated condition, and is listed at $210. I have seen advertisements for 2½-legged nickels and other variations of this piece.

WORKSHOP

Make a Gossip Bench

Gossip bench that's easily made and a happy addition to home furnishings is displayed by Susan Gates of Walt Disney "Gnomobile" cast.

By STEVE ELLINGSON

REALLY fine furniture is something that doesn't always fit into a budget. Often it has to be "forced" in. If you are among the many with more taste than money, you just can't take chances. Every penny counts. That's why millions of Americans are building fine furniture for themselves. Just such a handcrafted piece is a gossip bench (see photo).

This bench is another example of a furniture piece that is so essential to "completing" a room, to add personality and charm to your home, to give it a truly finished look. And what is more, it is marvelously useful. You will notice that on one side of the bench is a writing surface and a place for your telephone, below it are places for your phone book, personal directory, writing pads and so forth. On the other side is cushioned comfort to make lengthy calls less tiresome. The cushion is a standard size box type available at dime, department or furniture stores.

IF YOU already have a convenient place for your telephone, then this same piece of furniture makes a handsome deacon's bench. All you need do to convert it is to eliminate the shelves on one side and add another cushion. You'll find it an excellent piece to convert a hallway, or other areas, into a cozy nook.

Any amateur can build the bench when he uses the full size pattern. You need only trace the pattern parts on plywood, then saw them out and put them together. Lots of illustrations are included to make the project an easy one. The bench shown was made of birch plywood, but you may choose any one of the dozens of great and beautiful plywoods now available from lumber dealers everywhere.

To obtain the ful size gossip bench pattern No. 390, send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91401.

Hobby for Kids and Kings

a few. Their size could account for the "postage stamp" term, but it really refers to the countries' main industry as they grind out issue after issue of new stamps.

"They can be a nuisance," Schmidt admits, "but some new issues are welcomed by philatelists, especially those of the United Nations and the Vatican. Both produce stamps of great beauty and are well worth the collector's effort."

Although Schmidt likes uncanceled (unused) stamps for beginners because they may eventually have more value, there is great interest in canceled specimens.

THERE ARE Issues of the African colonies of Germany, for example. When post offices changed hands, hundreds of thousands of new stamps were released, depressing the market. Canceled specimens increased in value because they became scarce.

For canceled stamps, Schmidt warns, "Never try to peel a stamp off an envelope. Instead, cut the stamped corners off envelopes and place them in a basin of cool to lukewarm water after making sure there are no stamps with running colors. Forget them for a half hour or so, and the stamps will float loose. They can be picked out with tongs and placed between paper toweling, cloth or blotters for drying, then the best specimens mounted."

What makes a best specimen? Those stamps with clean, evenly spaced perforations and with the pictures centered on the paper. There should be no marks or thin spots, and printing should be clearly legible.

Acquiring good stamps can be a problem, but that's where stamp clubs come in. Even as a dealer, Willi Schmidt is quick to recommend stamp clubs as ideal places for the beginner and long-time philatelist to upgrade collections and learn by trading.

CLUBS IN Long Beach, Torrance, Inglewood and other cities have memberships ranging in age from sub-teens to the 80s. They're active and often meet in joint session for talk and trade.

Naturally, some stamps may have to be purchased to fill a vacant spot in an album. "If you stay with dealers who belong to either the Society of Philatelic Americans or the American Philatelic Society, there is no problem," Schmidt says. "Both organizations are careful about whom they admit. And local, well-established dealers are worth cultivating. They are there to help."

Does a stamp collection automatically lead to riches? Probably not. But there will be many fresh experiences in store for the new philatelist, not the least of which will be increasing knowledge of the world and companionship with some of its people.

BULLETIN: FIRST 10 MONTHS OF 1965 IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA*

Anthony builds more pools than the next fifteen single pool builders combined!

WHY ANTHONY?

We believe that much of the overwhelming preference for Anthony results from the recommendation of satisfied pool owners. Here are some of the reasons:

DEPENDABLE ACCESSORIES. At our 15 acre facility we manufacture our own top-quality line of pool parts and accessories. Our reputation for the dependability of our filters, heaters, water purifier, and pool cleaner—plus the assurance of service on all equipment from one source—is one of the big reasons many people recommend Anthony Pools.

FINANCIAL BACK-UP. The warranties of a builder or manufacturer depend on his ability to back them up. Ask any builder for his financial statement. Here is Anthony's current financial back-up: Cash, $1,265,567; Total net worth, $3,050,832.

IT'S EASY TO JOIN THE POOL OWNER SET. On ten-year financing, a complete pool can be yours for very low monthly payments. For example, a loan balance of $2000 runs only $26.67 a month. Is it any wonder so many young families are adding an Anthony pool to their way of life?

*Per most recent building permits reported by independent reporting service, Anthony also built more pools than all franchised pool builders combined!

COIN ROUNDUP

Rare Penny

By Maurice Gould

AN INDIAN HEAD cent very much in demand is the one dated 1864 with the "L" on the ribbon.

The coin without the "L" is fairly common and the number struck is a little over 39,000,000. Possibly included in this mintage figure is the 1864 with "L" because no separate records have been found which show the number struck of this particular variety.

The initial in question is that of J. B. Longacre, the mint engraver of this period just a century ago. It is interesting to note that all Indian Head Cents dated after 1864 do have the "L".

The simplest way I know of to locate the "L" is to look at the obverse of the coin and have the words "of America" directly in front of you. Look at the word "Liberty" and go along, following the line of this word. The "L" appears underneath the last feather of the headdress and is slightly raised.

AN ALTERNATIVE method of checking the "L" on the ribbon is to look at the extreme lower left of the Indian Head Cent. If it bears the "L" the bust will be pointed and just over the "1" in the date. If it is the plain 1864, it is round and extends far over the "1" in the date.

Even though I have read stories to the contrary, there are cases where the "L" can be seen on coins which may be in only Fair or Good condition, but naturally the better the condition, the stronger the "L" shows up.

For some reason, this particular variety shows up in New England and the Eastern seaboard and evidently was not placed in circulation out West; one remembers the 1908 and 1909 San Francisco Mint Indian Head Cents which circulated mostly on the West Coast.

Indian head cent of 1864 with "L" on ribbon is rare item of premium value.

The 1864-L catalogs $60 in Fine condition and $285 in Uncirculated condition and is worth several thousand dollars in Proof condition; but there are only 20 Proof specimens known to exist.

ANOTHER POPULAR U. S. series is the Indian Head or Buffalo Type Five-Cent Piece; these pieces have also been called "The Bison."

Many inquiries are received about the 1913 date, which is not a scarce item. It is the 1913 LIBERTY HEAD NICKEL, an entirely different style, with only five known, which is worth a small fortune.

Mintages of the Buffalo Type coins are not very large and these coins were down very rapidly, making it difficult to obtain them in top condition.

Many of the coins catalog $100 or more, with the 1926-S bringing $400 in Uncirculated condition, the 1924-S, $450, and the 1921-S $300.

THERE IS ONE overdate, the 1918-D over 7 variety, which is very valuable. It runs as high as $4,250 in New condition in the catalog and $200 in Very Good condition. In the very low grades, it becomes quite difficult to distinguish the overdate.

The 1936-D over S variety was discovered a few years ago, and this now catalogs for $50 in Uncirculated condition.

The 1937-D three-legged nickel was discovered during 1937 in the Montana area. This item is also very scarce in Uncirculated condition, and is listed at $210. I have seen advertisements for 2½-legged nickels and other variations of this piece.

Science for You

By Bob Brown

PROBLEM: A safe shocker.

NEEDED: Two or three dry cells, a small bell transformer, a bell or buzzer, a push button, some wires, a board to mount them on, and some tacks or other metal pieces to serve as electrodes.

DO THIS: Mount the parts as shown in the diagram. The author used metal sliders from old chair legs as terminals. When the bell is ringing terminals 1 and 2 will give a slight shock. Terminals 3 and 4 will give a much stronger shock; the shock from terminals 3 and 4 may be felt through a line of 15 or more people if all are holding fingers tightly.

HERE'S WHY: The voltage from the two or three dry cells would be only three or four-and-one-half volts and could not give a shock. However, the coils in the circuit and the making and breaking of the circuit by the vibrating bell mechanism can build up a peak momentary voltage of perhaps 50 to 100 volts. The bell transformer, connected as shown, serves to increase the voltage by a multiple of about 6 to 16 times. This is enough to give all the shock anyone could want to feel.

Voltages of more than 50 could be dangerous if enough amperage goes along with it. In this shocker, however, the amperage is so small that there could be absolutely no danger. It is a safe toy for even very young children.

One wire to the battery has a clip on it, so that two or three cells may be used. Connect the positive of one cell to the negative of the next.

The Science For You experiments are in two books. "Science Circus" and "Science Circus No. 2." They are in bookstores and libraries.

field." The armorial shield for the Dalzells of Dalziel, Scotland is black, emblazoned with a man's bold figure with outspread arms. The accompanying motto is "I Dare."

MISS RULE: Would you explain GUIHAN. — T.G., Garden Grove; M.G., Long Beach.

GUIHAN was initiated in north Tipperary, Ireland. This surname's Gaelic source "O'Gaoithin" described "sons of the Chief of the Wind," referring to a forefather who was as speedy as a breeze.

MISS RULE: Kindly analyze ALFANO, ALFANI.——O.A., C.A., Long Beach.

ALFANO and ALFANI began in Italy. These names allude to "son of Alfredo" from the contracted form "Alf" joined to "-ani" indicating "son of." Alfredo meant "good counsellor." The family shield is silver, crossed by three black stripes.

Make a Gossip Bench

Gossip bench that's easily made and a happy addition to home furnishings is displayed by Susan Gates of Walt Disney "Guomobile" cast.

By STEVE ELLINGSON

REALLY fine furniture is something that doesn't always fit into a budget. Often it has to be "forced" in. If you are among the many with more taste than money, you just can't take chances. Every penny counts. That's why millions of Americans are building fine furniture for themselves. Just such a handcrafted piece is a gossip bench (see photo).

This bench is another example of a furniture piece that is so essential to "completing" a room, to add personality and charm to your home, to give it a truly finished look. And what is more, it is marvelously useful. You will notice that on one side of the bench is a writing surface and a place for your telephone, below it are places for your phone book, personal directory, writing pads and so forth. On the other side is cushioned comfort to make lengthy calls less tiresome. The cushion is a standard size box type available at dime, department or furniture stores.

IF YOU already have a convenient place for your telephone, then this same piece of furniture makes a handsome deacon's bench. All you need do to convert it is to eliminate the shelves on one side and add another cushion. You'll find it an excellent piece to convert a hallway, or other areas, into a cozy nook.

Any amateur can build the bench when he uses the full size pattern. You need only trace the pattern parts on plywood, then saw them out and put them together. Lots of illustrations are included to make the project an easy one. The bench shown was made of birch plywood, but you may choose any one of the dozens of great and beautiful plywoods now available from lumber dealers everywhere.

To obtain the ful size gossip bench pattern No. 390, send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91401.

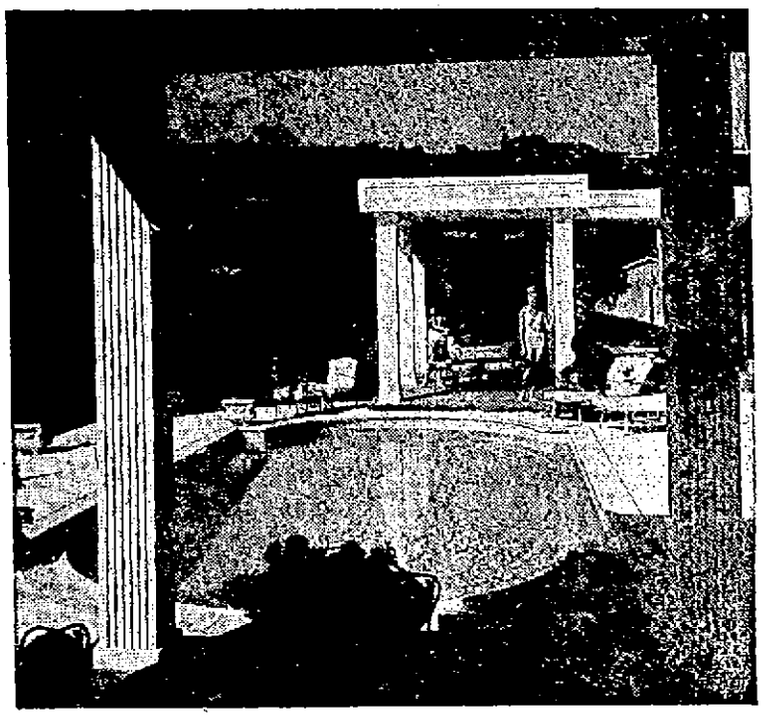
a few. Their size could account for the "postage stamp" term, but it really refers to the countries' main industry as they grind out issue after issue of new stamps.

"They can be a nuisance," Schmidt admits, "but some new issues are welcomed by philatelists, especially those of the United Nations and the Vatican. Both produce stamps of great beauty and are well worth the collector's effort."

Although Schmidt likes uncanceled (unused) stamps for beginners because they may eventually have more value, there is great interest in canceled specimens.

THERE ARE issues of the African colonies of Germany, for example. When post offices changed hands, hundreds of thousands of new stamps were released, depressing the market. Canceled specimens increased in value because they became scarce.

For canceled stamps, Schmidt warns, "Never try to peel a stamp off an envelope. Instead, cut the stamped corners off envelopes and place them in a basin of cool to lukewarm water after making sure there are no stamps with running colors. Forget them for a half hour or so, and the stamps will float loose. They can be picked out with tongs and placed between paper toweling, cloth or blotters for drying, then the best specimens mounted."



What makes a best specimen? Those stamps with clean, evenly spaced perforations and with the pictures centered on the paper. There should be no marks or thin spots, and printing should be clearly legible.

Acquiring good stamps can be a problem, but that's where stamp clubs come in. Even as a dealer, Willi Schmidt is quick to recommend stamp clubs as ideal places for the beginner and long-time philatelist to upgrade collections and learn by trading.

CLUBS IN Long Beach, Torrance, Inglewood and other cities have memberships ranging in age from sub-teens to the 80s. They're active and often meet in joint session for talk and trade.

Naturally, some stamps may have to be purchased to fill a vacant spot in an album. "If you stay with dealers who belong to either the Society of Philatelic Americans or the American Philatelic Society, there is no problem," Schmidt says. "Both organizations are careful about whom they admit. And local, well-established dealers are worth cultivating. They are there to help."

Does a stamp collection automatically lead to riches? Probably not. But there will be many fresh experiences in store for the new philatelist, not the least of which will be increasing knowledge of the world and companionship with some of its people.

Anthony builds more pools than the next fifteen single pool builders combined!

WHY ANTHONY?

We believe that much of the overwhelming preference for Anthony results from the recommendation of satisfied pool owners. Here are some of the reasons:

DEPENDABLE ACCESSORIES. At our 15 acre facility we manufacture our own top-quality line of pool parts and accessories. Our reputation for the dependability of our filters, heaters, water purifier, and pool cleaner—plus the assurance of service on all equipment from one source—is one of the big reasons many people recommend Anthony Pools.

FINANCIAL BACK-UP. The warranties of a builder or manufacturer depend on his ability to back them up. Ask any builder for his financial statement. Here is Anthony's current financial back-up: Cash, $1,265,567; Total net worth, $3,050,832.

IT'S EASY TO JOIN THE POOL OWNER SET. On ten-year financing, a complete pool can be yours for very low monthly payments. For example, a loan balance of $2000 runs only $26.67 a month. Is it any wonder so many young families are adding an Anthony pool to their way of life?

*Per most recent building permits reported by independent reporting service. Anthony also built more pools than all franchised pool builders combined!

Alone Across the Continent

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

EARLY days of aviation are recreated when Richard Bach takes a 1929 open-cockpit biplane and pilots it alone across the continent.

The writer, reared in Long Beach, tells the story in "BI-PLANE" (Harper & Row, $3.95).

Bach traded his "completely rebuilt 1946 Fairchild 24, as good as brand new" for the antique plane because he wanted to travel back through time, fly a difficult plane, and feel the wind in his face.

The flight covered nearly 3,000 miles from Lumberton, N.C., where the trade was made to Southern California.

Dick Bach writes with the emotional brilliance of Antoine de Saint-Exupery, and he loves his plane as Lindbergh loved the Spirit of St. Louis.

Excerpts:

"I have watched the sky for hours uncounted and followed it, and crossed horizons with it, and still have not begun to tire. The ever-changing, fascinating sky. The airplane, of course, is the key. It makes the sky accessible. As astronomy without a telescope can be uninteresting, so the sky without an airplane.

"One can watch only so much before he is sated, but when he can participate, when he can move himself through the halls of cloud in the day and travel from star to star in the night, then he can watch with knowing, and does not have to imagine what it would be like to walk those halls and those stars."

He lands:

"We turn one last time, to enter a busy traffic pattern. One last runway tilting beneath us, rising out of the city. Compton airport. Home . . . Oil trailing back from our silver cowl, wet dust spraying from beneath our tail wheels, past fitting smoothly into present, our journey is done. We have been splintered across runways; frozen in midair; blasted in flying sand; soaked in rain; beaten in mountain winds; scourged in brittle sage; we have flickered back and forth through the years, a brightwinged bird in time and we have arrived home . . .

"In the miles and sand and rain and years, we have learned only a little about ourselves, picked up just a tiny fraction of knowing about one man and one old biplane, and about what they mean to each other. At the last, in the sudden quiet of a dark hangar, man and biplane alone together, we find our answer to the question of the journey. Four words.

"It was worth it."

Two years ago, Harper & Row published Bach's "Stranger to the Ground," describing a storm-tossed night flight across France in a modern jet fighter.

The author now lives in Ottumwa, Iowa, where he is executive director of the Antique Airplane Assn. and editor of its magazine, The Antiquer.

TRUMAN CAPOTE'S "IN COLD BLOOD" (Random House, $5.95), the February Book of the Month, is an extraordinary factual narrative about a multiple murder in Finney County, Kan. in 1959 and the capture, trial and execution of the murder suspects. Victims were Herbert Clutter, a prosperous farmer, his wife Bonnie, their 16-year-old daughter Nancy and 15-year-old son Kenyon. Two former cellmates in the Kansas State penitentiary, Perry Smith and Dick Hickok, were hanged.

Capote interviewed friends and neighbors of the Clutters, police authorities, investigators. He visited Smith and Hickok 200 times in Death Row and witnessed their execution.

Why did Capote, master of sophisticated novels and short stories become engrossed in this case?

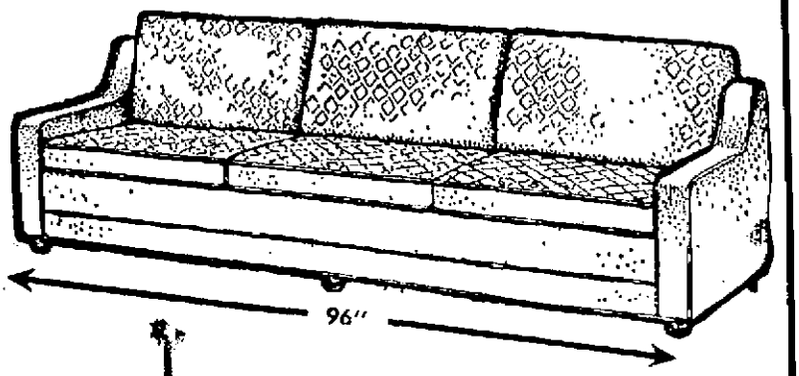
"Because," he says, "the 'experimental' novel has gone about as far as it can go . . . Reportage is the great unexplored art form of the future."

IN THE OPINION of M. Sivaram, journalist with the Indian Express with impressive credentials as an expert on Southeast Asia, the war in Viet Nam is not a civil war but resistance by the democratic government of Saigon, with the invited help of American allies, against Communist aggression out of Hanoi.

And although the Vietnamese are of Chinese stock, they regard China as their traditional enemy, counting 15 invasions by China in 2,000 years, and 1,000 years of Chinese rule. Sivaram's analysis, "THE VIET NAM WAR: WHY?" (Tuttle, $3.50) is a concise historical review of the always- embattled nation under Chinese, Japanese and French rule, its chaotic political power struggle, and the rise and fall of Ngo Diem and his brother Ngo Dinh Nhu.

The so-called "war of liberation" is sponsored from Peking by Mao Tsetung, through his associate, Ho Chi Minh, in Hanoi, and, therefore, merely continues the historic pattern of Chinese aggression, Sivaram writes.

He believes the war can end only with the retreat of the aggressor, whether by force or negotiation. "The forces of peace have an uncanny knack of overreaching the forces of war. It is a question of time and environment," he concludes.



CAPT. LIDDELL HART has been called "the greatest military thinker of the 20th century, whose ideas revolutionized war." President Kennedy said of him, "No expert on military affairs has better earned the right to respectful attention than Liddell Hart." G. P. Putnam's is publishing Vol. 1 of "THE LIDDELL HART MEMOIRS: 1918-1938" ($7.50). The memoirs are a record of his activities, the first volume starting with his early experiences and ending with his appointment as confidential advisor to Hore-Belisha when the latter became British secretary of war.

He Was a Child Star

Gene Jackson entered the entertainment world as a member of "Our Gang" comedies. Today, still active, he renders his own version of "Mule Train."

By Michael MacDonald

HAVE you ever wondered what happened to the kids that were stars in the movies years ago? Without a doubt the most time you have spent wondering was very little. A fleeting thought maybe, and then more important things bring your mind back to reality. It could be really interesting if a person would follow up one and see how he fared in life.

The sign in front of the bar reads "The Jackson Trio," and certainly the name didn't ring a bell. The trio consisted of a man on drums, another on piano and the third, Gene Jackson, with an array of instruments. Also, hidden beneath the piano bar, is an assortment of various hats, equipment of a dubious nature to be used in Jackson's many skits.

NONE OF the trio looks the part of a child star, but Jackson seems to put so much effort into most songs that you cannot help but ask him how he started. With much prodding and coaxing, Jackson will tell you that he was in the "Our Gang Comedies" during the 20's and 30's. Since that time he has kept active in the movies and television in addition to the band.

Jackson, "Pineapple" in the "Our Gang" series, was the third Negro to take a major role in American film history. He is also the only Negro member of the series to keep active in the industry.

At the bar, the short, stout bandleader is never without a smile. Humor and friendliness seems to radiate from him. His sincere "How are you folks" helps him pack the club every weekend.

HIS TALENTS, inherent in all of his actions, are found also in his son who now has a major part in Universal's new film, "Shenandoah." The older Jackson was working as a double on the same part.

He has appeared recently in "King Creole," playing clarinet; "The Apartment," dancing; "Robin and the Seven Hoods," playing a trombone; and "The Patsy." He also had parts in the television series of "Slattery's People" and is now working on a movie with Doris Day.

Family film tradition is carried on by son, Eugene Jackson Jr., seen here in "Shenandoah."

Make a Gossip Bench

Gossip bench that's easily made and a happy addition to home furnishings is displayed by Susan Gates of Walt Disney "Gnomobile" cast.

By STEVE ELLINGSON

REALLY fine furniture is something that doesn't always fit into a budget. Often it has to be "forced" in. If you are among the many with more taste than money, you just can't take chances. Every penny counts. That's why millions of Americans are building fine furniture for themselves. Just such a handcrafted piece is a gossip bench (see photo).

This bench is another example of a furniture piece that is so essential to "completing" a room, to add personality and charm to your home, to give it a truly finished look. And what is more, it is marvelously useful. You will notice that on one side of the bench is a writing surface and a place for your telephone, below it are places for your phone book, personal directory, writing pads and so forth. On the other side is cushioned comfort to make lengthy calls less tiresome. The cushion is a standard size box type available at dime, department or furniture stores.

IF YOU already have a convenient place for your telephone, then this same piece of furniture makes a handsome deacon's bench. All you need do to convert it is to eliminate the shelves on one side and add another cushion. You'll find it an excellent piece to convert a hallway, or other areas, into a cozy nook.

Any amateur can build the bench when he uses the full size pattern. You need only trace the pattern parts on plywood, then saw them out and put them together. Lots of illustrations are included to make the project an easy one. The bench shown was made of birch plywood, but you may choose any one of the dozens of great and beautiful plywoods now available from lumber dealers everywhere.

To obtain the ful size gossip bench pattern No. 390, send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91401.

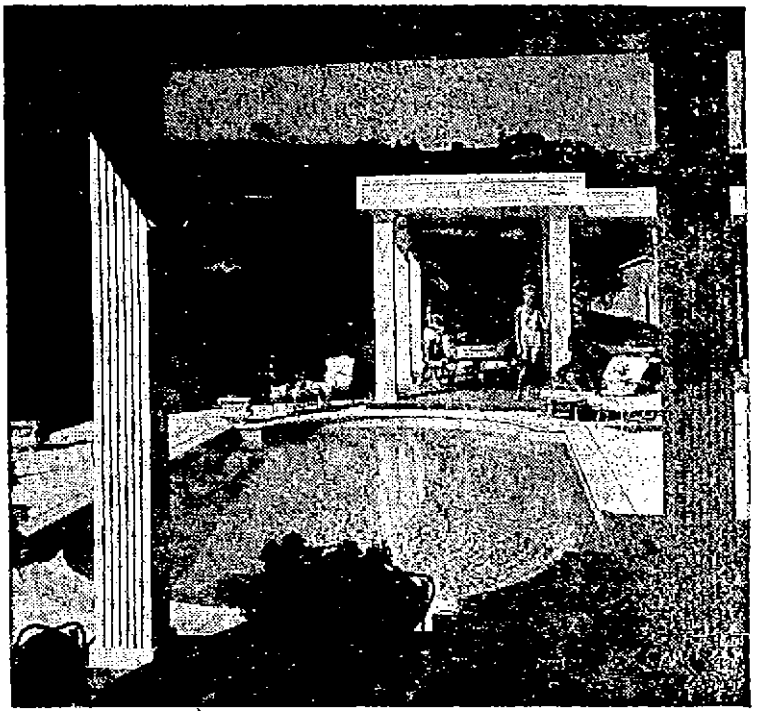
a few. Their size could account for the "postage stamp" term, but it really refers to the countries' main industry as they grind out issue after issue of new stamps.

"They can be a nuisance," Schmidt admits, "but some new issues are welcomed by philatelists, especially those of the United Nations and the Vatican. Both produce stamps of great beauty and are well worth the collector's effort."

Although Schmidt likes uncanceled (unused) stamps for beginners because they may eventually have more value, there is great interest in canceled specimens.

THERE ARE issues of the African colonies of Germany, for example. When post offices changed hands, hundreds of thousands of new stamps were released, depressing the market. Canceled specimens increased in value because they became scarce.

For canceled stamps, Schmidt warns, "Never try to peel a stamp off an envelope. Instead, cut the stamped corners off envelopes and place them in a basin of cool to lukewarm water after making sure there are no stamps with running colors. Forget them for a half hour or so, and the stamps will float loose. They can be picked out with tongs and placed between paper toweling, cloth or blotters for drying, then the best specimens mounted."



What makes a best specimen? Those stamps with clean, evenly spaced perforations and with the pictures centered on the paper. There should be no marks or thin spots, and printing should be clearly legible.

Acquiring good stamps can be a problem, but that's where stamp clubs come in. Even as a dealer, Willi Schmidt is quick to recommend stamp clubs as ideal places for the beginner and long-time philatelist to upgrade collections and learn by trading.

CLUBS IN Long Beach, Torrance, Inglewood and other cities have memberships ranging in age from sub-teens to the 80s. They're active and often meet in joint session for talk and trade.

Naturally, some stamps may have to be purchased to fill a vacant spot in an album. "If you stay with dealers who belong to either the Society of Philatelic Americans or the American Philatelic Society, there is no problem," Schmidt says. "Both organizations are careful about whom they admit. And local, well-established dealers are worth cultivating. They are there to help."

Does a stamp collection automatically lead to riches? Probably not. But there will be many fresh experiences in store for the new philatelist, not the least of which will be increasing knowledge of the world and companionship with some of its people.

Anthony builds more pools than the next fifteen single pool builders combined!

WHY ANTHONY?

We believe that much of the overwhelming preference for Anthony results from the recommendation of satisfied pool owners. Here are some of the reasons:

DEPENDABLE ACCESSORIES. At our 15 acre facility we manufacture our own top-quality line of pool parts and accessories. Our reputation for the dependability of our fillers, heaters, water purifier, and pool cleaner—plus the assurance of service on all equipment from one source—is one of the big reasons many people recommend Anthony Pools.

FINANCIAL BACK-UP. The warranties of a builder or manufacturer depend on his ability to back them up. Ask any builder for his financial statement. Here is Anthony's current financial back-up: Cash, $1,265,567; Total net worth, $3,050,832.

IT'S EASY TO JOIN THE POOL OWNER SET. On ten-year financing, a complete pool can be yours for very low monthly payments. For example, a loan balance of $2000 runs only $26.67 a month. Is it any wonder so many young families are adding an Anthony pool to their way of life?

*Per most recent building permits reported by independent reporting service, Anthony also built more pools than all franchised pool builders combined!

MEDICINE AND YOU

Crybaby? High IQ

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

WHEN A BABY cries loudly and persistently, it's a good sign he'll turn out to be intelligent, researchers say.

Medical invertigators at Long Island Jewish Hospital, New York, say there appears to be a relationship between a baby's cries and his IQ.

Doctors tape-recorded the cries of 38 babies between 4 and 10 days old. Three years later a study showed that those who had cried longer and louder were normal with high IQs. Those with lower IQs had cried feebly.

The report is in GP, journal of the American Academy of General Practice.

ALL CHILDREN between 6 and 12 months old should be tested for tuberculosis, two medical organizations urge.

The recommendation comes from the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Chest Physicians.

If possible, the test should be given before the child has been vaccinated against measles or smallpox.

Tuberculous infection in children is still prevalent, it was noted, and testing for TB should be repeated annually up to 4 years of age and thereafter every two years, "depending on the risk of exposure of the child and the prevalence of TB in the population group."

Early treatment of TB with the drug isoniazid has been especially effective in young children.

ACUTE MOUNTAIN sickness occurs in some persons at elevations as low as 6,000 feet above sea level, Army researchers report.

Chief symptoms: headache, sleeplessness, breathlessness, nausea and vomiting.

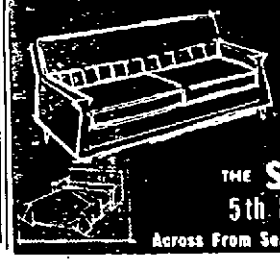
Symptoms are more severe in the morning and ordinarily reach a peak by the second day in a higher altitude.

Recommended treatment: mild activity, aspirin and a barbiturate (the latter for sleeplessness). General improvement usually occurs within a few days, but shortness of breath on exertion may continue.

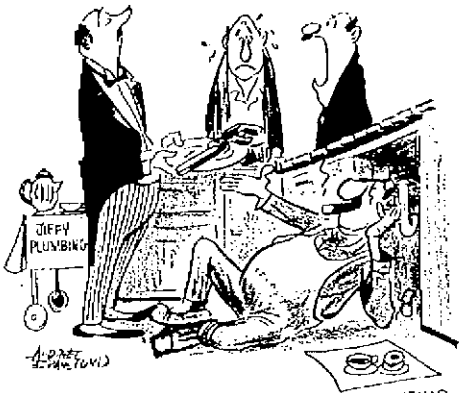
Potassium preparations, believed by some to be beneficial, are of no value, researchers say in Archives of Environmental Health.

A COLLEGE professor thinks medical science should take a closer look at the health implications of electromagnetic radiation, such as that involved in television, radio and radar.

Dr. Hans Neuberger, professor of meteorology at Pennsylvania State University, says:



"The general unrest among people may well be a direct result of electromagnetic insults to their nervous system."



CONTRARY to popular opinion in medical circles, a barium enema is a safe procedure for the diagnosis of appendicitis, a doctor has reported to the Radiological Society of North America.

Dr. Constantine S. Soter of Arlington Heights, Ill., says he has used barium and X-rays in more than 40 patients with no adverse effects.

The procedure makes possible earlier and more precise diagnosis, he says. This is important since 18% of all appendicitis cases are seen by the surgeon after perforation, a dangerous complication, has taken place.

Science for You

By Bob Brown

PROBLEM: A safe shocker.

NEEDED: Two or three dry cells, a small b transformer, a bell or buzzer, a push button, so wires, a board to mount them on, and some tacks other metal pieces to serve as electrodes.

DO THIS: Mount the parts as shown in the d gram. The author used metal sliders from old ch legs as terminals. When the bell is ringing termin 1 and 2 will give a slight shock. Terminals 3 and will give a much stronger shock; the shock from t minals 3 and 4 may be felt through a line of 15 more people if all are holding fingers tightly.

HERE'S WHY: The voltage from the two or thr dry cells would be only three or four-and-one-h volts and could not give a shock. However, the co in the circuit and the making and breaking of t circuit by the vibrating bell mechanism can build a peak momentary voltage of perhaps 50 to 100 volt The bell transformer, connected as shown, serves increase the voltage by a multiple of about 6 to times. This is enough to give all the shock anyo could want to feel.

Voltages of more than 50 could be dangerous enough amperage goes along with it. In this shock however, the amperage is so small that there cou be absolutely no danger. It is a safe toy for ev very young children.

One wire to the battery has a clip on it, so th two or three cells may be used. Connect the positi of one cell to the negative of the next.

The Science For You experiments are in two book "Science Circus" and "Science Circus No. 2." They are bookstores and libraries.

MISS RULE: Would you explain GUIHAN. — T.G., Garden Grove; M.G., Long Beach.

GUIHAN was initiated in north Tipperary, Ireland. This surname's Gaelic source "O'Gaoithin" described "sons of the Chi of the Wind," referring to forefather who was speedy as a breeze.

MISS RULE: Kindly an lyze ALFANO, ALFANI —O.A., C.A., Long Beach.

ALFANO and ALFAN began in Italy. These name allude to "son of Alfredo from the contracted for "Alf" joined to "-ani" ind cating "son of." Alfred meant "good counsellor. The family shield is silve crossed by three blac stripes.

The Silky Is a Home Body

By Eleanor Avery Price

Courageous silky terrier Cindy achieved the Companion Dog Excellent title despite handicap.

DO YOU recall Cindy, the toy silky terrier (pictured with this column a while back) that, in spite of losing part of a foot in an accident, went on to earn a Companion Dog title? Now Cindy has attained a Companion Dog Excellent title, the second silky in the nation to earn this award. Which goes to prove that an indomitable spirit can overcome almost anything. Dorothy Huber, member of Long Beach Obedience Club, owns Cindy.

The silky is a peppy little dog that one can enjoy in the home as he does not have a doggy odor. Usually dogs with heavy undercoats are the offenders. The Silky's coat is flat, fine in texture, and quite long. If he should happen to soil his coat with body waste upon occasion, he would need some attention. A little clipping, judiciously done, would help. Also, his under part can be carefully sprayed with a very mild solution of Clorox or Purex (one teaspoon to a full quart of water). Only use a small amount, as chlorine is drying.

IF YOU DETECT other odor on any dog, consider several possible reasons. Smell his ears. They should be sweet. If not, the pet may have ear mites or an ear infection perhaps caused by a burr-type weed. Usually these troubles call for a visit to your veterinarian. You can obtain an ear wash from your pet shop. But don't let the odor go unchallenged.

Improper diet, internal parasites, and tartar on the teeth can give a dog an unpleasant odor. The diet must be corrected, and perhaps a highly assimilable calcium added to create strong teeth in the younger dog. (Not all calcium is easily assimilated.) Of course worms should be eliminated, and a program of dental hygiene observed.

IT IS MUCH easier to get a puppy accustomed to a small toothbrush than it is an older dog. Warm salt water is a good tooth cleanser. So is peroxide on a swab. However, only a small amount can be used, for if a dog swallows peroxide, he will likely upchuck.

An older dog may need to have tartar scraped from his teeth by a veterinarian. Then obtain a scaler and scrape the dog's teeth once monthly. If you can afford it, take the pet to a veterinarian every four to six months for professional scraping. Also give the dog a milkbone daily according to his size (available on your grocery shelf), as this product, although being a fine food, also helps prevent tartar from forming. The beef chewsticks are good, too.

ORANGE EMPIRE Dog Club has a show and trial today at National Orange Showgrounds, San Bernardino.

CONTINENTAL Cat Club will have a show next Saturday and Sunday at Orange County Fairgrounds, Costa Mesa. The International Tortoise Shell Cat Club will be honored.

Alone Across the Continent

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

EARLY days of aviation are recreated when Richard Bach takes a 1929 open-cockpit biplane and pilots it alone across the continent.

The writer, reared in Long Beach, tells the story in "BIPLANE" (Harper & Row, $3.95).

Bach traded his "completely rebuilt 1946 Fairchild 24, as good as brand new" for the antique plane because he wanted to travel back through time, fly a difficult plane, and feel the wind in his face.

The flight covered nearly 3,000 miles from Lumberton, N.C., where the trade was made to Southern California.

Dick Bach writes with the emotional brilliance of Antoine de Saint-Exupery, and he loves his plane as Lindbergh loved the Spirit of St. Louis.

Excerpts:

"I have watched the sky for hours uncounted and followed it, and crossed horizons with it, and still have not begun to tire. The ever-changing, fascinating sky. The airplane, of course, is the key. It makes the sky accessible. As astronomy without a telescope can be uninteresting, so the sky without an airplane.

"One can watch only so much before he is sated, but when he can participate, when he can move himself through the halls of cloud in the day and travel from star to star in the night, then he can watch with knowing, and does not have to imagine what it would be like to walk those halls and those stars."

He lands:

"We turn one last time, to enter a busy traffic pattern. One last runway tilting beneath us; rising out of the city. Compton airport. Home . . . Oil trailing back from our silver cowl, wet dust spraying from beneath our tail wheels, past fitting smoothly into present, our journey is done. We have been splintered across runways; frozen in midair; blasted in flying sand; soaked in rain; beaten in mountain winds; scourged in brittle sage; we have flickered back and forth through the years, a brightwinged bird in time and we have arrived home . . .

"In the miles and sand and rain and years, we have learned only a little about ourselves, picked up just a tiny fraction of knowing about one man and one old biplane, and about what they mean to each other. At the last, in the sudden quiet of a dark hangar, man and biplane alone together, we find our answer to the question of the journey. Four words.

"It was worth it."

Two years ago, Harper & Row published Bach's "Stranger to the Ground," describing a storm-tossed night flight across France in a modern jet fighter.

The author now lives in Ottumwa, Iowa, where he is executive director of the Antique Airplane Assn. and editor of its magazine, The Antiquer.

TRUMAN CAPOTE'S "IN COLD BLOOD" (Random House, $5.95), the February Book of the Month, is an extraordinary factual narrative about a multiple murder in Finney County, Kan. in 1959 and the capture, trial and execution of the murder suspects. Victims were Herbert Clutter, a prosperous farmer, his wife Bonnie, their 16-year-old daughter Nancy and 15-year-old son Kenyon. Two former cellmates in the Kansas State penitentiary, Perry Smith and Dick Hickok, were hanged.

Capote interviewed friends and neighbors of the Clutters, police authorities, investigators. He visited Smith and Hickok 200 times in Death Row and witnessed their execution.

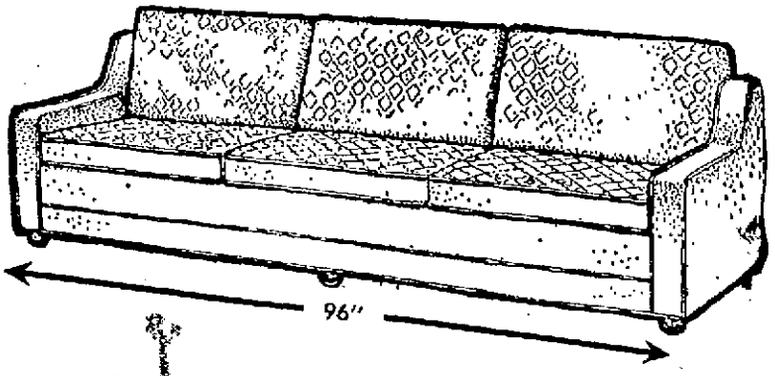
Why did Capote, master of sophisticated novels and short stories become engrossed in this case?

"Because," he says, "the 'experimental' novel has gone about as far as it can go . . . Reportage is the great unexplored art form of the future."

IN THE OPINION of M. Sivaram, journalist with the Indian Express with impressive credentials as an expert on Southeast Asia, the war in Viet Nam is not a civil war but resistance by the democratic government of Saigon, with the invited help of American allies, against Communist aggression out of Hanol.

And although the Vietnamese are of Chinese stock, they regard China as their traditional enemy, counting 15 invasions by China in 2,000 years, and 1,000 years of Chinese rule, Sivaram's analysis, "THE VIET NAM WAR: WHY?" (Tuttle, $3.50) is a concise historical review of the always- embattled nation under Chinese, Japanese and French rule, its chaotic political power struggle, and the rise and fall of Ngo Diem and his brother Ngo Dinh Nhu.

The so-called "war of liberation" is sponsored from Peking by Mao Tsetung, through his associate, Ho Chi Minh, in Hanol, and, therefore, merely continues the historic pattern of Chinese aggression, Sivaram writes.



He believes the war can end only with the retreat of the aggressor, whether by force or negotiation. "The forces of peace have an uncanny knack of overreaching the forces of war. It is a question of time and environment," he concludes.

CAPT. LIDDELL HART has been called "the greatest military thinker of the 20th century, whose ideas revolutionized war." President Kennedy said of him, "No expert on military affairs has better earned the right to respectful attention than Liddell Hart." G. P. Putnam's is publishing Vol. 1 of "THE LIDDELL HART MEMOIRS: 1918-1938" ($7.50). The memoirs are a record of his activities, the first volume starting with his early experiences and ending with his appointment as confidential advisor to Hore-Belisha when the latter became British secretary of war.

Capacious Cabinet

FLOOR-to-ceiling shelves enclosed behind high doors in the formal dining room of the home of H. G. Appleton, 25 Laguna Place, amply accommodate china and glassware that could present a problem. There are seven high, wide shelves side by side, each large enough to hold a complete dinner servive for 12.

Glasses of varied size and description rest in precision order without fear of breakage. Shelves are spaced apart enough for a large punch bowl, and recessed far back in the wall for quantity storage. Everything there can be seen at a glance, and there is no clutter.

Imported Beauty

BUT ONE slang expression is latched onto quickly by all of them: "That course bugs me," they learn to say without much explanation.

For the most part, when the foreign girls at Long Beach State complete their studies here, they return to their homelands to teach.

"I was very fortunate to get a scholarship," says 22-year-old Evelia Coto from Santa Ana, El Salvador, who had a year teaching elementary school before she was selected to go to America for a year.

"My principal said he thinks I will be a good teacher. I know I will be a better teacher because of what I have learned here. I think all of us (foreign students) will be better off because of our studies here."

The foreign girls who have been studying at Long Beach State for a decade now have added much to the cultural life of the campus. They have taken much home with them and, as Dr. Opstad puts it, "they have left much with us. The exchange program has been of tremendous benefit in both directions. The American students who get to know them have learned much from them.

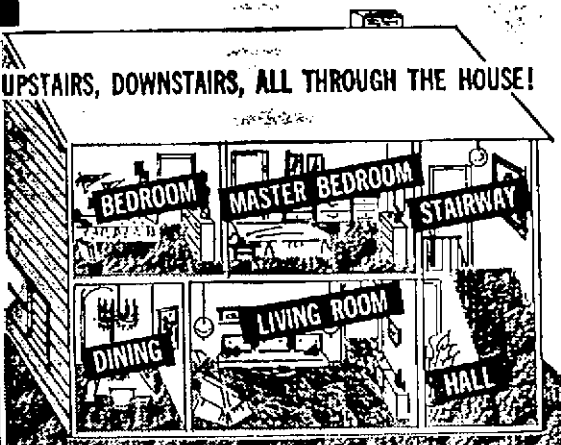
"They have added a certain beauty to our campus, to be sure," observes Dr. Opstad, "but much of their real beauty can't be captured by a camera's lens—their genuineness, their sincerity, their wholsomeness."

Saludos to the foreign girls of Long Beach State.

Recipe of the Week

COOKIES "take the cake" in the form of this week's $5 best recipe prize for Mrs. G. Wehrly, 2976 Maine Ave., Long Beach 90806. The recipe:

Peanut Brittle Cookies



½ cup butter or shortening
½ cup white sugar
½ cup brown sugar
1 egg
½ cup creamy peanut butter
1⅛ cups sifted flour
Dash of salt
½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup Spanish unsalted peanuts, chopped
¾ cup finely chopped peanut brittle

Cream butter and sugar, beat in egg and peanut butter. Mix in remaining ingredients. Shape dough into balls and place on greased cookie sheet. Press lengthwise with tines of fork. Bake at 375 degrees about 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from pans immediately after taking from oven. Makes 3 dozen cookies.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

He Was a Child Star

Gene Jackson entered the entertainment world as a member of "Our Gang" comedies. Today, still active, he renders his own version of "Mule Train."

By Michael MacDonald

HAVE you ever wondered what happened to the kids that were stars in the movies years ago? Without a doubt the most time you have spent wondering was very little. A fleeting thought maybe, and then more important things bring your mind back to reality. It could be really interesting if a person would follow up one and see how he fared in life.

The sign in front of the bar reads "The Jackson Trio," and certainly the name didn't ring a bell. The trio consisted of a man on drums, another on piano and the third, Gene Jackson, with an array of instruments. Also, hidden beneath the piano bar, is an assortment of various hats, equipment of a dubious nature to be used in Jackson's many skits.

NONE OF the trio looks the part of a child star, but Jackson seems to put so much effort into most songs that you cannot help but ask him how he started. With much prodding and coaxing, Jackson will tell you that he was in the "Our Gang Comedies" during the 20's and 30's. Since that time he has kept active in the movies and television in addition to the band.

Jackson, "Pineapple" in the "Our Gang" series, was the third Negro to take a major role in American film history. He is also the only Negro member of the series to keep active in the industry.

At the bar, the short, stout bandleader is never without a smile. Humor and friendliness seems to radiate from him. His sincere "How are you folks" helps him pack the club every weekend.

HIS TALENTS, inherent in all of his actions, are found also in his son who now has a major part in Universal's new film, "Shenandoah." The older Jackson was working as a double on the same part.

He has appeared recently in "King Creole," playing clarinet; "The Apartment," dancing; "Robin and the Seven Hoods," playing a trombone; and "The Patsy." He also had parts in the television series of "Slattery's People" and is now working on a movie with Doris Day.

Family film tradition is carried on by son, Eugene Jackson Jr., seen here in "Shenandoah."

Busy is the housewife with the hundred-and-one tasks of the day—breakfast, kids off to school, lunches, laundry, shopping, club, P.T.A., you name it. So it's welcome assistance with menu planning that Southland Magazine offers a weekly recipe for the family menu. Watch for Mildred K. Flanary's cooking column each Sunday in Southland.

The play is on a name at Simon Bolivar Park where Simon Bolivar roses grow 50 in a bed.

Rose by a Name

By Vera Williams

SIMON BOLIVAR PARK has a bed of Simon Bolivar roses.

Fifty of the handsome roses, Chinese red in color with an orange sheen, were planted in January in the northeast corner of Simon Bolivar Park, Del Amo Boulevard and Downey Avenue, Lakewood—the gift of the Lakewood Kiwanis Club and Armstrong Nurseries.

Let G. David Mills, club member and Lakewood superintendent of parks and recreation, tell the story:

"The year just past, 1965, was the 50th anniversary of Kiwanis International. In keeping with its agriculture and conservation policy, clubs were encouraged to give 50 of something—shrubs, plants, trees—to their communities.

"LAKEWOOD has an attractive 10-acre Simon Bolivar Park.

"We read in the Southland Magazine about the new Simon Bolivar rose, developed by Armstrong Nurseries. It was a natural!

"President William Young and Dr. I. W. Meirovitz, agriculture and conservation chairman, and the members liked the idea. We took up the idea with Armstrong Nurseries—and J. Awdry Armstrong, president, gave us the roses!"

The roses, 2½ feet apart, were planted carefully under the direction of Louis M. Hernandez, park foreman. They had to have good top soil and good drainage, because, as Hernandez explains, "Roses don't like wet feet."

IN THE CENTER of the rose bed is a bronze plaque, "Kiwanis, 1965."

The Simon Bolivar, the current Armstrong pride, is described as a hybrid tea rose, with enormous double flowers of about 40 broad velvety petals. The bushes are upright but spread.

The bed will have some blooms by April, says Hernandez. In two years "it will be a beauty."

Glads for Showy Color

By Joe Littlefield

SWORD LILY is one common name for gladiolus, because the bulb name stems from a Latin allusion to the sword-like foliage. Actually, the preferred pronunciation is "glad-DIE-o-lus," whereas the popular usage is "glad-di-O-lus," the nickname "glads."

Regardless of which pronunciation you use, plant some of those bulbs and you'll have strikingly showy spiked (nickname "glads") flowers annually, whether you dig up the bulbs each year to rest them or leave them in the ground for several years.

Dig them up each year after the foliage has mostly died down, then replant later for next year's blossoms and you'll have taller spikes of larger flowers. Left in the ground for three or four years, they'll be shorter plants with correspondingly smaller flower spikes. This is due to community clustering of young bulbs all seeking their share of nourishment.

ALTHOUGH we call them bulbs, the technical name is corms. Plant them from four to five inches deep and you'll get a sturdier, deeper root system growth. Shallow planting causes the plants to topple over from overhead watering.

Set the corms five inches deep in sandy porous type soil, about four inches deep in heavy soil, in sunny location. Give them deep watering as the foliage grows through the soil.

Glads aren't the only corms to plant at this time of the year. Set out some hybrid amaryllis bulbs, leave them in the ground for around four years, and you'll have lily-like, showy flowers each spring.

PINK AND YELLOW callas are an added color attraction in the garden, or as potted plants for color in patio or porch areas. You'll be sure to have them bloom if you'll grow them in an area where they'll get about half day of sunshine.

While we're discussing bulbs for spring color, let's be conscious of several perennial plants that are flowering right now. Saxifrage cordifolio (new name Bergenia) is a hardy winter blooming plant with clusters of pink flowers that brighten those shady garden areas. They may be grown in sunny location if away from reflected heat, but not in desert or nearly desert-like sectors.

ANOTHER most amazing winter blooming perennial plant is helleborous orientalis the "lenten rose." The single saucer shape blossoms, whether white, shades of pink, various tones of rose, or variegated, last five to ten days indoors as cut flowers.

Mature plants bloom continuously from three to four months. They grow about a foot tall. Flower spikes will grow above the foliage if they get several hours of early morning sunlight, or late afternoon sunshine. The small amount of direct sunlight teases the flower spikes to grow taller. Do not plant them in full shade.

Plant gladiolus corms now and at intervals later for spikes of interesting garden hues.

Rarest of Cypress

By Vi Chamberlain

AMONG California's rare plants and trees are four groves of Piute cypress which grow only in the area of Piute Mountain, Greenhorn and Breckenridge—in Kern County, the region around Lake Isabella.

The greyish-green leaves of the trees are unusual in themselves and send forth a "Christmasy" fragrance. Indeed, twigs of the foliage and the wing-marked seeds, would make an intriguing ornament atop a yule package—if one was allowed to pluck them.

It is hoped that visitors will confine their souvenirs to pictures of the trees, so that nature may propagate and continue this interesting species.

MAN, FIRE, insects fungi and animals are decimating the Piutes (Cupressus nevadensis Abrams) and if care is not taken to preserve the remaining specimens, they may soon disappear.

Twigs of the rare cypress are slender, distinctly foursided and grow in all directions. The leaves are a gray-green and have an active resin gland which exudes a fragrant white substance, sticky to the touch. The leaves themselves are formed by tiny scales wrapped closely around a central axis and overlapping.

Oddly marked cones, wing-shaped, have six or eight wartlike protuberances and are ⅝ to 1¼ inches long. The first year these cones are a rich light brown with conical and pointed bosses, but become silvery grey the second year, the points blunted. Seeds, about 90 in each cone, are light tan in cover.

THE BARK of lower parts of old trunks is gray-brown and narrowly furrowed, with slender, flat ridges; that of upper portions are somewhat brownish to cherry-red.

Leroy Abrams, a California botanist, brought to light the Piute Cypress in 1955. Ranchers in the area have used the trees for fence posts, the hardwood having long lasting qualities. They say the trees seem draped in gold in the spring when myriads of yellow flowers bloom on branches. Some of the trees grow to a height of 30 feet.

The area of the trees is reached by freeway to Bakersfield, thence right through Oildale on Highway 178 to the ghost town of Bodfish, turning south about 3 miles. At the top of a grade, a road marked by a Forest Service sign—Numbers 27S02—leads off to the largest of the four groves of cypress. However, in rainy weather, it is advisable not to drive in.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Crybaby? High IQ

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

WHEN A BABY cries loudly and persistently, it's a good sign he'll turn out to be intelligent, researchers say.

Medical investigators at Long Island Jewish Hospital, New York, say there appears to be a relationship between a baby's cries and his IQ.

Doctors tape-recorded the cries of 38 babies between 4 and 10 days old. Three years later a study showed that those who had cried longer and louder were normal with high IQs. Those with lower IQs had cried feebly.

The report is in GP, journal of the American Academy of General Practice.

ALL CHILDREN between 6 and 12 months old should be tested for tuberculosis, two medical organizations urge.

The recommendation comes from the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Chest Physicians.

If possible, the test should be given before the child has been vaccinated against measles or smallpox.

Tuberculous infection in children is still prevalent, it was noted, and testing for TB should be repeated annually up to 4 years of age and thereafter every two years, "depending on the risk of exposure of the child and the prevalence of TB in the population group."

Early treatment of TB with the drug isoniazid has been especially effective in young children.

ACUTE MOUNTAIN sickness occurs in some persons at elevations as low as 6,000 feet above sea level, Army researchers report.

Chief symptoms: headache, sleeplessness, breathlessness, nausea and vomiting.

Symptoms are more severe in the morning and ordinarily reach a peak by the second day in a higher altitude.

Recommended treatment: mild activity, aspirin and a barbiturate (the latter for sleeplessness). General improvement usually occurs within a few days, but shortness of breath on exertion may continue.

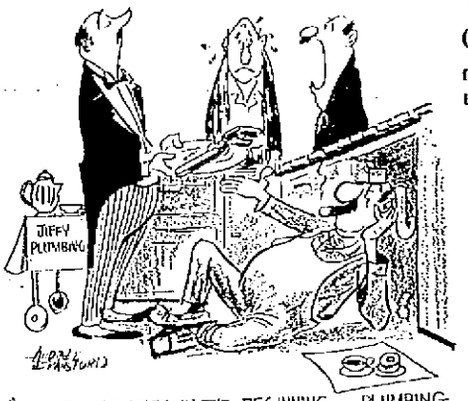
Potassium preparations, believed by some to be beneficial, are of no value, researchers say in Archives of Environmental Health.

A COLLEGE professor thinks medical science should take a closer look at the health implications of electromagnetic radiation, such as that involved in television, radio and radar.

Dr. Hans Neuberger, professor of meteorology at Pennsylvania State University, says:

"The general unrest among people may well be a direct result of electromagnetic insults to their nervous system."

CONTRARY to popular opinion in medical circles, a barium enema is a safe procedure for the diagnosis of appendicitis, a doctor has reported to the Radiological Society of North America.



Dr. Constantine S. Soter of Arlington Heights, Ill., says he has used barium and X-rays in more than 40 patients with no adverse effects.

The procedure makes possible earlier and more precise diagnosis, he says. This is important since 18% of all appendicitis cases are seen by the surgeon after perforation, a dangerous complication, has taken place.

Garden Clubs

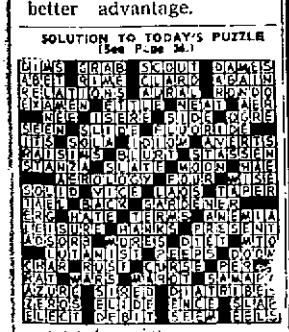
Garden Grove Branch, California National Fuchsia Society, plans an old-fashioned box supper at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Iva Meairs School, Newland Street and Trask Avenue, Garden Grove. Members and their guests are invited.

Belmont Heights Garden Club will view slides of flowers presented by members at a meeting at 1 p.m. Tuesday in Wesley Hall, 317 Termino Ave. Mrs. Muriel Oyaas will preside and the tea committee will be composed of Esta Stough, Pauline Bordner, Minnie Powell, Grace Stilwell, Kate Smith and Theresa Trost.

Camellia Fete

Camellia enthusiasts from across the nation and some from outside the United States are expected for the 12th Annual Camellia Festival to be observed from March 4 through 13 in Sacramento. A highlight will be the 42nd annual show of the Camellia Society of Sacramento in the city's Memorial Auditorium.

The festival attracted more than 55,000 persons last year. Thousands of camellia blossoms are displayed and anyone wishing to enter may do so with charge.



The 21st annual meeting of the American Camellia Society is planned in conjunction with the festival. Other highlights will include a children's camellia parade with beautifu camellia-laden floats, a two-day Camellia Folk Dance Pageant, an International Friendship Breakfast and a sailing regatta on the final day. Special events are scheduled daily. Further information may be obtained by addressing Pat Merrick, Sacramento Camellia Festival Association, 352 Eleventh & L. Building, Sacramento, Calif. 95814.

Sun Loving Tree

Olive trees need full sun. Although they are most lush when growing in deep, rich soil, they'll grow in even the poorest soil with little water or fertilizer. They are noted for being extremely drought resistant.

You can prune olive trees heavily if you wish. In fact, thinning each year shows off the handsome and often gnarled branch pattern to better advantage.

The Silky Is a Home Body

By Eleanor Avery Price

DO YOU recall Cindy, the toy silky terrier (pictured with this column a while back) that, in spite of losing part of a foot in an accident, went on to earn a Companion Dog title? Now Cindy has attained a Companion Dog Excellent title, the second silky in the nation to earn this award. Which goes to prove that an indomitable spirit can overcome almost anything. Dorothy Huber, member of Long Beach Obedience Club, owns Cindy.

The silky is a peppy little dog that one can enjoy in the home as he does not have a doggy odor. Usually dogs with heavy undercoats are the offenders. The Silky's coat is flat, fine in texture, and quite long. If he should happen to soil his coat with body waste upon occasion, he would need some attention. A little clipping, judiciously done, would help. Also, his under part can be carefully sprayed with a very mild solution of Clorox or Purex (one teaspoon to a full quart of water). Only use a small amount, as chlorine is drying.

IF YOU DETECT other odor on any dog, consider several possible reasons. Smell his ears. They should be sweet. If not, the pet may have ear mites or an ear infection perhaps caused by a burr-type weed. Usually these troubles call for a visit to your veterinarian. You can obtain an ear wash from your pet shop. But don't let the odor go unchallenged.

Improper diet, internal parasites, and tartar on the teeth can give a dog an unpleasant odor. The diet must be corrected, and perhaps a highly assimilable calcium added to create strong teeth in the younger dog. (Not all calcium is easily assimilated.) Of course worms should be eliminated, and a program of dental hygiene observed.

IT IS MUCH easier to get a puppy accustomed to a small toothbrush than it is an older dog. Warm salt water is a good tooth cleanser. So is peroxide on a swab. However, only a small amount can be used, for if a dog swallows peroxide, he will likely upchuck.

An older dog may need to have tartar scraped from his teeth by a veterinarian. Then obtain a scaler and scrape the dog's teeth once monthly. If you can afford it, take the pet to a veterinarian every four to six months for professional scraping. Also give the dog a milkbone daily according to his size (available on your grocery shelf), as this product, although being a fine food, also helps prevent tartar from forming. The beef chewsticks are good, too.

Courageous silky terrier Cindy achieved the Companion Dog Excellent title despite handicap.

ORANGE EMPIRE Dog Club has a show and trial today at National Orange Showgrounds, San Bernardino.

CONTINENTAL Cat Club will have a show next Saturday and Sunday at Orange County Fairgrounds, Costa Mesa. The International Tortoise Shell Cat Club will be honored.

Art of the Netsuke

Netsukes are interestingly displayed in this collection that also includes snuff bottles. Netsukes have an interesting story. (See article below.)

By Olive Breed

"I WOULD like to see a Netsuke Club here," remarked William Deacon, 219 E. Forhan St.

"You mean a gun-totin' bunch?"

"No, you know, a netsuke, a toggle." And Deacon turned to his impressive collection of bits of ivory, hard woods, jade and other semi-precious stones, carved with microscopic detail into Oriental figures and groups, with a 2-inch outside dimension.

The netsuke's period of usefulness was highest during the 18th and first half of the 19th centuries — before pockets were known in Japan. The slim lines of kimono and girdle permitted no place to carry money, keys or other accessory items, and these were provided for by carrying a pouch on a loop of string which slipped through beneath the girdle and was held by the netsuke, which was just large enough to stay on the outside top of the girdle. This bit of usefulness became a conspicuous work of art, and when Commodore Perry gave the Japanese their first glimpse of western clothing, more than 10,000 artists were devoting as much as three months to one of these miniatures. As conversation pieces, netsukes must have something to tell.

DEACON HAS researched the stories told by his prizes, and at random, picked up "The Sumo Wrestlers," dominated by the umpire in costume and cap, traditional over the centuries, and holding the lacquered fan, engraved with "Peace to the World," that he raises and lowers with his commands. Wrestlers' costumes are loin cloths and long hair wound on top of their heads.

In contrast, "A Happy Couple Taking Dinner," represents long life and happiness, and is a "must" at all marriages—one legend says the couples are the spirits of two trees far apart on a magic mountain, but married to each other.

Written language, done with fude (brush), is a cultural art, and involves two distinct alphabets, kata-kana, with 50 syllabic letters, and hira-kana, with 47, a flowing script. Kata-kana is written in the squares Westerners often see. "Mother Teaching Her Son to Write," a 1½-inch bit of ivory shows in great detail the written characters, fingernails and texture of clothing.

The Sumo Wrestlers

A HORSE, first sign of the Japanese zodiac, figures in many legends. A number of shrines today have collections of ema, the painting of a horse on wood, used as a votive offering to the shrine up to modern times. One of the legends is of the horses so well painted they became animated at night and foraged the fields until one was caught with mud on the painted hoofs.

One of the true masterpieces, "Six Blind Men Helping Each Other Across a Stream," is one inch high and 1½ inches long, showing accurately such details as the current in the water; the type of blindness shown by expression on the faces; the six pairs of sandals carried on a cane across their shoulders. There is a touch of satire in some of the stories around this really famous classic.

Usefulness lost to the western pockets, the netsuke came into its own as a work of art, characteristic of the unparalleled skill the Japanese put into their miniature creations. As such they are found in collections, most of them in countries other than Japan. Imitations have come into being, and the expert's knowledge is put to the test in separating the originals from their clever counterparts, a challenge many of them welcome.

Capacious Cabinet

FLOOR-to-ceiling shelves enclosed behind high doors in the formal dining room of the home of H. G. Appleton, 25 Laguna Place, amply accommodate china and glassware that could present a problem. There are seven high, wide shelves side by side, each large enough to hold a complete dinner servive for 12.

Glasses of varied size and description rest in precision order without fear of breakage. Shelves are spaced apart enough for a large punch bowl, and recessed far back in the wall for quantity storage. Everything there can be seen at a glance, and there is no clutter.

Imported Beauty

BUT ONE slang expression is latched onto quickly by all of them: "That course bugs me," they learn to say without much explanation.

For the most part, when the foreign girls at Long Beach State complete their studies here, they return to their homelands to teach.

"I was very fortunate to get a scholarship," says 22-year-old Evelia Coto from Santa Ana, El Salvador, who had a year teaching elementary school before she was selected to go to America for a year.

"My principal said he thinks I will be a good teacher. I know I will be a better teacher because of what I have learned here. I think all of us (foreign students) will be better off because of our studies here."

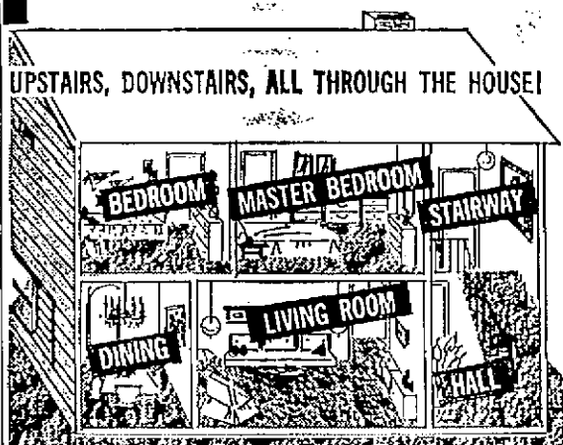
The foreign girls who have been studying at Long Beach State for a decade now have added much to the cultural life of the campus. They have taken much home with them and, as Dr. Opstad puts it, "they have left much with us. The exchange program has been of tremendous benefit in both directions. The American students who get to know them have learned much from them.

"They have added a certain beauty to our campus, to be sure," observes Dr. Opstad, "but much of their real beauty can't be captured by a camera's lens—their genuineness, their sincerity, their wholsomeness."

Saludos to the foreign girls of Long Beach State.

Recipe of the Week

COOKIES "take the cake" in the form of this week's $5 best recipe prize for Mrs. G. Wehrly, 2976 Maine Ave., Long Beach 90806. The recipe:



Peanut Brittle Cookies

- ½ cup butter or shortening
- ½ cup white sugar
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 1 egg
- ½ cup creamy peanut butter
- 1½ cups sifted flour
- Dash of salt
- ½ tsp. vanilla
- ½ cup Spanish unsalted peanuts, chopped
- ¾ cup finely chopped peanut brittle

Cream butter and sugar, beat in egg and peanut butter. Mix in remaining ingredients. Shape dough into balls and place on greased cookie sheet. Press lengthwise with tines of fork. Bake at 375 degrees about 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from pans immediately after taking from oven. Makes 3 dozen cookies.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

His Laboratory Is a Bubble

Bubbles are a world of wonder and science for Dr. K. J. Mysels, may hold key to many secrets.

By Betty DeWeese

THE HOMELY little soap bubble is a world of wonder and scientific intrigue to Polish-born researcher Dr. Karol J. Mysels.

An award-winning colloid chemist and widely-recognized authority on liquid films, the USC professor has found in the shimmering, fleeting life of the bubble, a visible laboratory in which to investigate the basic mechanics of nature.

Research into the behavior of the soap bubble, claims the balding, genial Mysels, may provide new insight into the effects of molecular interactions and the problems of foams in various forms.

There is nothing funny—for those who might snicker—in scientific bubble blowing.

Sir Isaac Newton, formulator of the Law of Gravity and other milestones of scientific theorem, was fascinated by bubbles and spent hours studying them.

So did the 17th Century experimental physicist, Robert Hooke.

DR. MYSELS has applied modern technology to bubble research, inventing, among other things, special bubble-making laboratory containers, and pioneering the use of photographic study techniques.

He has even produced a remarkable color motion picture called "The Birth, Life and Death of a Soap Bubble."

The brilliant colors of soap bubbles, a big part of their fascination for mankind, all ages, are a result of the thinness of the film, he explains.

There has been no competent explanation of why and how the film becomes and remains so thin and how and why the colors change until only the black remains.

PEERING into his bubble tumblers is a memorable experience.

The detergent film shimmers with vivid purples, reds, grays, greens and color-unexplainable. As the film becomes thinner, the colors change rapidly, acquire more brilliant hues and then become a brilliant silvery white. The white gradually fades as the width of the film shrinks, turns gray and then black when it approaches two-tenths of a microinch, which is the thinnest any film has even been observed.

Results of his study (involving extensive use of motion picture and time-lapse photography) indicate soap film may behave in one of two ways, depending upon the chemical nature:

"IT MAY either be like two sheets of cellophane with some water between them and this water flows out under the action of gravity, or alternatively, it may behave like a mosaic of flat blocks of different thickness which constantly slide past each other while staying in the plane of the film," he explains succinctly and with some eloquence.

Force of gravity, he continues, tends to stack these blocks with the thin ones near the top and the thicker at the bottom.

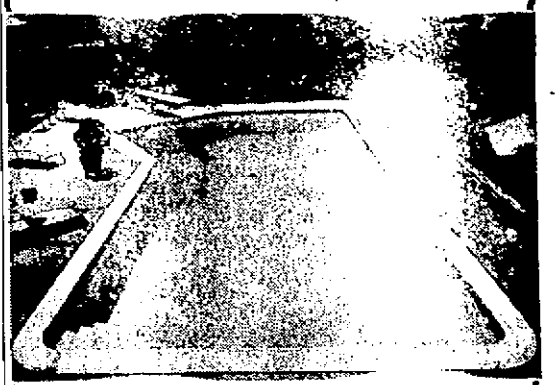
"However, whenever the blocks come near the edge of the film—where the bubble meets another, or the rim of the pipe from which it is blown—they are drawn into this border and replaced by thinner blocks . . . thus regenerating itself."

At this point, this simple process becomes, to the lay mind, more complex and a part of the basic will of the universe.

EXPLAINS Dr. Mysels, "When the film becomes very thin, the mechanism of thinning changes radically as attractive forces between atoms—the van der Waals forces—take over and effectively squeeze the film rapidly until it becomes black.

"It is only when the film is thin enough to be black that a halt is called to this thinning by repulsion of soap molecules which form its two surfaces."

This repulsion, he believes, may result from the affinity of these molecules for water or from the electrical repulsion of these molecules.



"Thus the behavior of the simple soap bubble can show directly to the naked eye the effects of molecular interactions and more refined measurements of these children's toys may well give us new insight into these forces . . ."

The play is on a name at Simon Bolivar Park where Simon Bolivar roses grow 50 in a bed.

Rose by a Name

By Vera Williams

SIMON BOLIVAR PARK has a bed of Simon Bolivar roses.

Fifty of the handsome roses, Chinese red in color with an orange sheen, were planted in January in the northeast corner of Simon Bolivar Park, Del Amo Boulevard and Downey Avenue, Lakewood—the gift of the Lakewood Kiwanis Club and Armstrong Nurseries.

Let G. David Mills, club member and Lakewood superintendent of parks and recreation, tell the story:

"The year just past, 1965, was the 50th anniversary of Kiwanis International. In keeping with its agriculture and conservation policy, clubs were encouraged to give 50 of something—shrubs, plants, trees—to their communities.

"LAKEWOOD has an attractive 10-acre Simon Bolivar Park.

"We read in the Southland Magazine about the new Simon Bolivar rose, developed by Armstrong Nurseries. It was a natural!

"President William Young and Dr. I. W. Meirovitz, agriculture and conservation chairman, and the members liked the idea. We took up the idea with Armstrong Nurseries—and J. Awdry Armstrong, president, gave us the roses!"

The roses, 2½ feet apart, were planted carefully under the direction of Louis M. Hernandez, park foreman. They had to have good top soil and good drainage, because, as Hernandez explains, "Roses don't like wet feet."

IN THE CENTER of the rose bed is a bronze plaque, "Kiwanis, 1965."

The Simon Bolivar, the current Armstrong pride, is described as a hybrid tea rose, with enormous double flowers of about 40 broad velvety petals. The bushes are upright but spread.

The bed will have some blooms by April, says Hernandez. In two years "it will be a beauty."

YOUR GARDEN

Glads for Showy Color

By Joe Littlefield

SWORD LILY is one common name for gladiolus, because the bulb name stems from a Latin allusion to the sword-like foliage. Actually, the preferred pronunciation is "glad-DIE-o-lus," whereas the popular usage is "glad-di-O-lus," the nickname "glads."

Regardless of which pronunciation you use, plant some of those bulbs and you'll have strikingly showy spiked (nickname "glads") flowers annually, whether you dig up the bulbs each year to rest them or leave them in the ground for several years.

Dig them up each year after the foliage has mostly died down, then replant later for next year's blossoms and you'll have taller spikes of larger flowers. Left in the ground for three or four years, they'll be shorter plants with correspondingly smaller flower spikes. This is due to community clustering of young bulbs all seeking their share of nourishment.

ALTHOUGH we call them bulbs, the technical name is corms. Plant them from four to five inches deep and you'll get a sturdier, deeper root system growth. Shallow planting causes the plants to topple over from overhead watering.

Set the corms five inches deep in sandy porous type soil, about four inches deep in heavy soil, in sunny location. Give them deep watering as the foliage grows through the soil.

Glads aren't the only corms to plant at this time of the year. Set out some hybrid amaryllis bulbs, leave them in the ground for around four years, and you'll have lily-like, showy flowers each spring.

PINK AND YELLOW callas are an added color attraction in the garden, or as potted plants for color in patio or porch areas. You'll be sure to have them bloom if you'll grow them in an area where they'll get about half day of sunshine.

While we're discussing bulbs for spring color, let's be conscious of several perennial plants that are flowering right now. Saxifrage cordifolio (new name Bergenia) is a hardy winter blooming plant with clusters of pink flowers that brighten those shady garden areas. They may be grown in sunny location if away from reflected heat, but not in desert or nearly desert-like sectors.

ANOTHER most amazing winter blooming perennial plant is helleborous orientalis the "lenten rose." The single saucer shape blossoms, whether white, shades of pink, various tones of rose, or variegated, last five to ten days indoors as cut flowers.

Mature plants bloom continuously from three to four months. They grow about a foot tall. Flower spikes will grow above the foliage if they get several hours of early morning sunlight, or late afternoon sunshine. The small amount of direct sunlight teases the flower spikes to grow taller. Do not plant them in full shade.

Plant gladiolus corms now and at intervals later for spikes of interesting garden hues.

Rarest of Cypress

By Vi Chamberlain

AMONG California's rare plants and trees are four groves of Piute cypress which grow only in the area of Piute Mountain, Greenhorn and Breckenridge—in Kern County, the region around Lake Isabella.

The greyish-green leaves of the trees are unusual in themselves and send forth a "Christmasy" fragrance. Indeed, twigs of the foliage and the wing-marked seeds, would make an intriguing ornament atop a yule package—if one was allowed to pluck them.

It is hoped that visitors will confine their souvenirs to pictures of the trees, so that nature may propagate and continue this interesting species.

MAN, FIRE, insects fungi and animals are decimating the Piutes (Cupressus nevadensis Abrams) and if care is not taken to preserve the remaining specimens, they may soon disappear.

Twigs of the rare cypress are slender, distinctly four-sided and grow in all directions. The leaves are a gray-green and have an active resin gland which exudes a fragrant white substance, sticky to the touch. The leaves themselves are formed by tiny scales wrapped closely around a central axis and overlapping.

Oddly marked cones, wing-shaped, have six or eight wartlike protuberances and are ⅝ to 1¼ inches long. The first year these cones are a rich light brown with conical and pointed bosses, but become silvery grey the second year, the points blunted. Seeds, about 90 in each cone, are light tan in cover.

THE BARK of lower parts of old trunks is gray-brown and narrowly furrowed, with slender, flat ridges; that of upper portions are somewhat brownish to cherry-red.

Leroy Abrams, a California botanist, brought to light the Piute Cypress in 1955. Ranchers in the area have used the trees for fence posts, the hardwood having long lasting qualities. They say the trees seem draped in gold in the spring when myriads of yellow flowers bloom on branches. Some of the trees grow to a height of 30 feet.

The area of the trees is reached by freeway to Bakersfield, thence right through Oildale on Highway 178 to the ghost town of Bodfish, turning south about 3 miles. At the top of a grade, a road marked by a Forest Service sign—Numbers 27S02—leads off to the largest of the four groves of cypress. However, in rainy weather, it is advisable not to drive in.

Gourmet's Guide

by Todd Thomey

Southland Dining at its Finest in the Long Beach and Orange County Area

OF ALL the gourmet dishes created by master chefs throughout the world, none is more intriguing or novel than beef fondue Bourguignonne.

In the Long Beach area there is only one restaurant which features this French treat—the Cafe Lafayette, a beautiful continental restaurant in the Lafayette Hotel, Broadway and Linden Avenue. The Cafe has the staff, the style and special equipment needed to present this dish with all its traditional glamorous touches. It is prepared under the direction of executive chef Peter Hirsbrunner, a Swiss who received his training in the finest kitchens of Europe.

Caricature by Pete Willaitis

PETER HIRSBRUNNER

It's Beef Fondue

The fondue (French for "dip") includes strips of superlative beef tenderloin which are brought to the table raw. The guest impales each strip on a long-handled fork and dips it into a pot of bubbling oil kept hot by a small flame. Within a couple of minutes, the beef is cooked to the state of medium, well-done or rare desired by the diner. He then dips it again, this time into one of three epicurean sauces provided to enhance the already delectable flavor of the beef.

The fondue ($5 per person) is served with appetite-stimulating petits hors d'oeuvres; unique fresh spinach salad or tossed green salad; rice pilaf, vegetable, beverage and dessert. Available on the same dinner at $4.50 each are such specialties as prime rib au jus with baked potato, veal escallopini Cordon Bleu, Dover sole, veal Oscar, stuffed brook trout and beefsteak Tartar.

Closed Sundays, the cafe serves luncheon and dinner Monday through Saturday. Guests visiting the hotel on Sundays enjoy dining in the smart downstairs Ivanhoe Room where steak, brochette of beef flambe and steak-lobster combination dinners are featured.

SUNDAY TREAT — Superb is the word for the Celestial Dinner which is one of the highlights on the Cantonese-American menu at Don May's tropical Leilani restaurant, 5236 E. Second St., Long Beach. Tabbed at $9 for two persons, this heavenly affair includes a great array of oriental delicacies, ranging from de luxe appetizers to soup, diced breast of chicken with mushrooms and almonds; barbecued pork, pineapple boneless duck and numerous other items.

Garden Clubs

Garden Grove Branch, California National Fuchsia Society, plans an old-fashioned box supper at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Iva Meairs School, Newland Street and Trask Avenue, Garden Grove. Members and their guests are invited.

Belmont Heights Garden Club will view slides of flowers presented by members at a meeting at 1 p.m. Tuesday in Wesley Hall, 317 Termino Ave. Mrs. Muriel Oyaas will preside and the tea committee will be composed of Esta Stough, Pauline Bordner, Minnie Powell, Grace Stilwell, Kate Smith and Theresa Trost.

Camellia Fete

Camellia enthusiasts from across the nation and some from outside the United States are expected for the 12th Annual Camellia Festival to be observed from March 4 through 13 in Sacramento. A highlight will be the 42nd annual show of the Camellia Society of Sacramento in the city's Memorial Auditorium.

The festival attracted more than 55,000 persons last year. Thousands of camellia blossoms are displayed and anyone wishing to enter may do so with charge.

The 21st annual meeting of the American Camellia Society is planned in conjunction with the festival. Other highlights will include a children's camellia parade with beautiful camellia-laden floats, a two-day Camellia Folk Dance Pageant, an International Friendship Breakfast and a sailing regatta on the final day. Special events are scheduled daily. Further information may be obtained by addressing Pat Merrick, Sacramento Camellia Festival Association, 352 Eleventh & L. Building, Sacramento, Calif. 95814.

Sun Loving Tree

Olive trees need full sun. Although they are most lush when growing in deep, rich soil, they'll grow in even the poorest soil with little water or fertilizer. They are noted for being extremely drought resistant.

You can prune olive trees heavily if you wish. In fact, thinning each year shows off the handsome and often gnarled branch pattern to better advantage.

Art of the Netsuke

Netsukes are interestingly displayed in this collection that also includes snuff bottles. Netsukes have an interesting story. (See article below.)

By Olive Breed

"I WOULD like to see a Netsuke Club here," remarked William Deacon, 219 E. Forhan St.

"You mean a gun-totin' bunch?"

"No, you know, a netsuke, a toggle." And Deacon turned to his impressive collection of bits of ivory, hard woods, jade and other semi-precious stones, carved with microscopic detail into Oriental figures and groups, with a 2-inch outside dimension.

The netsuke's period of usefulness was highest during the 18th and first half of the 19th centuries — before pockets were known in Japan. The slim lines of kimono and girdle permitted no place to carry money, keys or other accessory items, and these were provided for by carrying a pouch on a loop of string which slipped through beneath the girdle and was held by the netsuke, which was just large enough to stay on the outside top of the girdle. This bit of usefulness became a conspicuous work of art, and when Commodore Perry gave the Japanese their first glimpse of western clothing, more than 10,000 artists were devoting as much as three months to one of these miniatures. As conversation pieces, netsukes must have something to tell.

DEACON HAS researched the stories told by his prizes, and at random, picked up "The Sumo Wrestlers," dominated by the umpire in costume and cap, traditional over the centuries, and holding the lacquered fan, engraved with "Peace to the World," that he raises and lowers with his commands. Wrestlers' costumes are loin cloths and long hair wound on top of their heads.

The Sumo Wrestlers

In contrast, "A Happy Couple Taking Dinner," represents long life and happiness, and is a "must" at all marriages—one legend says the couples are the spirits of two trees far apart on a magic mountain, but married to each other.

Written language, done with fude (brush), is a cultural art, and involves two distinct alphabets, kata-kana, with 50 syllabic letters, and hira-kana, with 47, a flowing script. Kata-kana is written in the squares Westerners often see. "Mother Teaching Her Son to Write," a 1½-inch bit of ivory shows in great detail the written characters, fingernails and texture of clothing.

A HORSE, first sign of the Japanese zodiac, figures in many legends. A number of shrines today have collections of ema, the painting of a horse on wood, used as a votive offering to the shrine up to modern times. One of the legends is of the horses so well painted they became animated at night and foraged the fields until one was caught with mud on the painted hoofs.

One of the true masterpieces, "Six Blind Men Helping Each Other Across a Stream," is one inch high and 1½ inches long, showing accurately such details as the current in the water; the type of blindness shown by expression on the faces; the six pairs of sandals carried on a cane across their shoulders. There is a touch of satire in some of the stories around this really famous classic.

Usefulness lost to the western pockets, the netsuke came into its own as a work of art, characteristic of the unparalleled skill the Japanese put into their miniature creations. As such they are found in collections, most of them in countries other than Japan. Imitations have come into being, and the expert's knowledge is put to the test in separating the originals from their clever counterparts, a challenge many of them welcome.

Q. Is it true the Republicans plan to defeat Lyndon Johnson in 1968 by highlighting the slogan, "He sent your boy to Vietnam"?—F. T., Rochester, N.Y.
A. The war in Vietnam has placed President Johnson in a political bind; no matter how it turns out, he will be held accountable.

Q. I would like to know the title of the book written by Maud Shaw, the governess to the Kennedy children.—Leah Allen, Rutherford, N.J.
A. My Life with Caroline and John-John.

Q. When Edward VIII abdicated the throne of Great Britain, how much loot did he take with him? — Anne Hodgkins, Bryn Mawr, Pa.
A. His personal fortune consisted of 850,000 pounds. He also had an annual tax-free income of 100,000 pounds. In addition he was given 25,000 pounds tax-free by his brother, George VI.

Q. I understand the great pianist Artur Rubinstein has turned down all piano engagements in Germany and will continue to do so. Is this so?—Fred Justini, Omaha, Neb.
A. True.

Q. The U.S. Information Agency makes periodic surveys of U.S. popularity in foreign countries throughout the world. How do people in Asia now feel about us?—Carey Dunleavy, Bronxville, N.Y.
A. The results of such popularity surveys are withheld from the American people for at least two years. Other nongovernmental surveys reveal that the war in Vietnam has affected our image in Asia harmfully. Only two Asian countries support us unconditionally: Taiwan and Thailand which we support with large financial grants. South Korea, the Philippines, Laos, Japan, and Malaysia are sympathetic but not uncritical. Burma and India are chary of us. Singapore, Pakistan, Cambodia, and Indonesia dislike us actively at this time.

Q. How old are Cary Grant and Henry Fonda?—Diane Lewis, Atlantic City, N.J.
A. Grant is 62. Fonda is 60.

Q. Who pays for Dwight Eisenhower's medical and travel expenses in connection with his last heart attack—Ike who is a millionaire or the federal government?—Rocky Lewis, Guadalajara, Mexico.
A. The federal government.

Q. They say that Nancy Wilson is even prettier than Lena Horne. Would you please run her picture? — Elmer Nelson, Little Rock, Ark.

Q. I have heard that Jayne Mansfield speaks several foreign languages fluently, has many advanced college degrees, that she plays the sex-pot purposely, is really a home-loving mother. Any truth to that statement?—F. P., St. Petersburg, Fla.
A. Jayne Mansfield is a mother who has capitalized on her bust development.

Q. What is the significance of the British holiday, "Boxing Day"? Is there any connection with the Boxer Rebellion?—John R. Taylor, Arlington, Va.
A. On the 26th of December the British enjoy Boxing Day, a statutory holiday whose origin goes back to the boxing of gifts by the three wise men for later presentation to the Christ child. It has no connection with the Boxer Rebellion.

Q. I have listened to the editorial vignettes of CBS reporter Eric Sevaried for some time. My question is does Sevaried write these vignettes himself?—Herb Karl, Tallahassee, Fla.
A. He does.

Q. Corinne Griffith, the former actress—I believe she's 66—married a young singer who sued her for divorce and alimony. How much does she have to pay?—Henrietta Waxman, Miami Beach, Fla.
A. Danny Scholl, 44, was awarded $200 a month temporary support pending trial of his contested divorce. Miss Griffith in addition was ordered to pay $2000 in attorney's fees and $500 in court costs. The marriage lasted 35 days. Miss Griffith, who gives her age as 50, claimed Scholl promised to be a "loving and affectionate husband" when they married, but that he failed to deliver on his promises.

Q. Is it true that Gregory Peck met his present wife in a bathtub?—D. L., La Jolla, Calif.
A. Veronique Passani, the present Mrs. Peck, used to interview film stars for Paris Presse. One time when she called to interview Peck he was taking a bath in his hotel, got clothed, sat for the interview.

Q. Who is Richard Sorge who the Soviets are now honoring posthumously, naming schools, streets, and squares after him in Moscow?—H. L. Allen, Seattle, Wash.
A. Richard Sorge was one of Russia's master spies. He was born in 1895 near Baku in the Caucasian oilfields. His mother was Russian, his father a German mining engineer. He fought for Germany in World War I. He subsequently became a Soviet agent, got a job as a special correspondent for Germany's leading newspaper, Frankfurter Zeitung. The Soviets sent him to Japan in the 1930's where he organized a top spy cell. On May 15th, 1941, he sent the Soviet military intelligence station in Vladivostok an historic message: "German attack on Russia to take place June 22." The message was immediately transmitted to Stalin who refused to believe it. Sorge and his spy cell were subsequently arrested by the Japanese. On November 7, 1944, he was hung from the gallows in Tokyo's Sugamo prison. In 1946 at the Tokyo war crimes trial, an American lawyer defending a Japanese client, referred to Sorge. The Soviet prosecutor, General Vasiliev, refused to acknowledge that Sorge was a Soviet intelligence agent. On September 4, 1964, the Soviet Union decided to make a hero of Sorge. A front page article appeared in Izvestia under the headline: "The Exploits of Richard Sorge: The Story of a Soviet Spy's Heroism."

Q. Who said: "A bigamist is a chap who has had one too many."?—D. L. Edwards, Ft. Bragg, N.C.
A. The late Fred Allen, comedian.

His Laboratory Is a Bubble

Bubbles are a world of wonder and science for Dr. K. J. Mysels, may hold key to many secrets.

By Betty DeWeese

THE HOMELY little soap bubble is a world of wonder and scientific intrigue to Polish-born researcher Dr. Karol J. Mysels.

An award-winning colloid chemist and widely-recognized authority on liquid films, the USC professor has found in the shimmering, fleeting life of the bubble, a visible laboratory in which to investigate the basic mechanics of nature.

Research into the behavior of the soap bubble, claims the balding, genial Mysels, may provide new insight into the effects of molecular interactions and the problems of foams in various forms.

There is nothing funny—for those who might snicker—in scientific bubble blowing.

Sir Isaac Newton, formulator of the Law of Gravity and other milestones of scientific theorem, was fascinated by bubbles and spent hours studying them.

So did the 17th Century experimental physicist, Robert Hooke.

DR. MYSELS has applied modern technology to bubble research, inventing, among other things, special bubble-making laboratory containers, and pioneering the use of photographic study techniques.

He has even produced a remarkable color motion picture called "The Birth, Life and Death of a Soap Bubble."

The brilliant colors of soap bubbles, a big part of their fascination for mankind, all ages, are a result of the thinness of the film, he explains.

There has been no competent explanation of why and how the film becomes and remains so thin and how and why the colors change until only the black remains.

PEERING into his bubble tumblers is a memorable experience.

The detergent film shimmers with vivid purples, reds, grays, greens and color-unexplainable. As the film becomes thinner, the colors change rapidly, acquire more brilliant hues and then become a brilliant silvery white. The white gradually fades as the width of the film shrinks, turns gray and then black when it approaches two-tenths of a microinch, which is the thinnest any film has even been observed.

Results of his study (involving extensive use of motion picture and time-lapse photography) indicate soap film may behave in one of two ways, depending upon the chemical nature:

"IT MAY either be like two sheets of cellophane with some water between them and this water flows out under the action of gravity, or alternatively, it may behave like a mosaic of flat blocks of different thickness which constantly slide past each other while staying in the plane of the film," he explains succinctly and with some eloquence.

Force of gravity, he continues, tends to stack these blocks with the thin ones near the top and the thicker at the bottom.

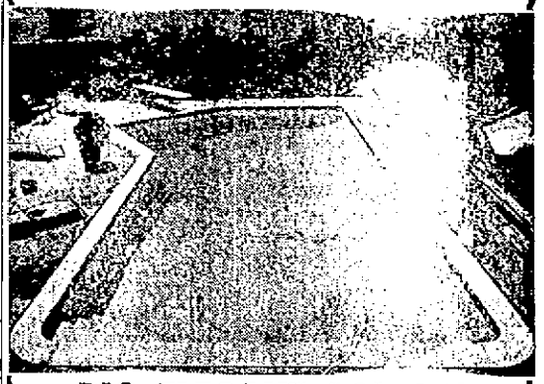
"However, whenever the blocks come near the edge of the film—where the bubble meets another, or the rim of the pipe from which it is blown—they are drawn into this border and replaced by thinner blocks . . . thus regenerating itself."

At this point, this simple process becomes, to the lay mind, more complex and a part of the basic will of the universe.

EXPLAINS Dr. Mysels, "When the film becomes very thin, the mechanism of thinning changes radically as attractive forces between atoms—the van der Waals forces—take over and effectively squeeze the film rapidly until it becomes black.

"It is only when the film is thin enough to be black that a halt is called to this thinning by repulsion of soap molecules which form its two surfaces."

This repulsion, he believes, may result from the affinity of these molecules for water or from the electrical repulsion of these molecules.



"Thus the behavior of the simple soap bubble can show directly to the naked eye the effects of molecular interactions and more refined measurements of these children's toys may well give us new insight into these forces . . ."

Southland Dining at its Finest in the Long Beach and Orange County Area

OF ALL the gourmet dishes created by master chefs throughout the world, none is more intriguing or novel than beef fondue Bourguignonne.

In the Long Beach area there is only one restaurant which features this French treat—the Cafe Lafayette, a beautiful continental restaurant in the Lafayette Hotel, Broadway and Linden Avenue. The Cafe has the staff, the style and special equipment needed to present this dish with all its traditional glamorous touches. It is prepared under the direction of executive chef Peter Hirsbrunner, a Swiss who received his training in the finest kitchens of Europe.

Caricature by Pete Willetts

PETER HIRSBRUNNER

It's Beef Fondue

The fondue (French for "dip") includes strips of superlative beef tenderloin which are brought to the table raw. The guest impales each strip on a long-handled fork and dips it into a pot of bubbling oil kept hot by a small flame. Within a couple of minutes, the beef is cooked to the state of medium, well-done or rare desired by the diner. He then dips it again, this time into one of three epicurean sauces provided to enhance the already delectable flavor of the beef.

The fondue ($5 per person) is served with appetite-stimulating petits hors d'oeuvres; unique fresh spinach salad or tossed green salad; rice pilaf, vegetable, beverage and dessert. Available on the same dinner at $4.50 each are such specialties as prime rib au jus with baked potato, veal escallopini Cordon Bleu, Dover sole, veal Oscar, stuffed brook trout and beefsteak Tartar.

Closed Sundays, the cafe serves luncheon and dinner Monday through Saturday. Guests visiting the hotel on Sundays enjoy dining in the smart downstairs Ivanhoe Room where steak, brochette of beef flambe and steak-lobster combination dinners are featured.

SUNDAY TREAT — Superb is the word for the Celestial Dinner which is one of the highlights on the Cantonese-American menu at Don May's Tropical Leilani restaurant, 5236 E. Second St., Long Beach. Tabbed at $9 for two persons, this heavenly affair includes a great array of oriental delicacies, ranging from de luxe appetizers to soup, diced breast of chicken with mushrooms and almonds; barbecued pork, pineapple boneless duck and numerous other items.

A TIMELY REPORT ON ONE OF THE MOST CRITICAL

We the people: do we

by JACK ANDERSON

A few weeks ago President Johnson launched a dramatic "peace offensive" by dispatching our top diplomatic envoys for talks with the leaders of other world powers. As a demonstration of U.S. willingness to spare no effort to stop the fighting in Vietnam, these simultaneous missions were widely hailed for the skill with which they were arranged by the administration. This was a bright chapter in the long history of the Cold War and a hopeful contrast to the fumbling, bumbling and outright lying that has frequently embarrassed us in other dealings with the rest of the world.

For the fact is that the U.S. has repeatedly been caught in half-truths and awkward lies that have often done our country more harm than the truth itself would have. Confidence in our government has been severely shaken, and this "crisis in credibility" has reduced America's effectiveness in world affairs.

Some people contend that the President, for the protection of the nation, sometimes must withhold the whole truth about foreign affairs. But domestic officials have also played loose with the truth to cover up blunders, hide corruption and make bad policies look good. Though most government statements are straightforward enough, reporters have learned to beware of tricky wording. Many an embarrassing fact has been papered over with verbal camouflage. Officials who have hesitated to spread falsehood have accomplished the same result simply by sweeping the truth under a secrecy label.

The public can be excused for wondering occasionally whom and what to believe. Defense Secretary Robert McNamara's optimistic reports on the war in Vietnam, for example, have been regularly contradicted by events on the battlefront. The Defense Department's credibility has sunk so low, charges aviation writer Robert Hotz, "that most Pentagon reporters really don't believe a story until it has been officially denied."

Pentagon spokesman Arthur Sylvester contends that "information is a weapon, a very important weapon, to be used or withheld." Though he denies any intent to "phony up" the news, he defends the government's inherent right "to lie to save itself when it's going up into a nuclear war." However, Sylvester has also fibbed about non-nuclear matters.

This practice of expedient lying raises some serious questions in a democracy. J. Russell Wiggins, editor of the Washington Post, has expressed one in his book, Freedom or Secrecy:

"If a government repeatedly resorts to lies in crises where lies seem to serve its interests best, it will one day be unable to employ the truth effectively when truth would serve its interests best. A government that too readily rationalizes its right to lie in a crisis will never lack for either lies or crises."

President Johnson talks with reporters in his office. He tries to keep firm control over news that flows from the White House, a policy that has cost some public confidence.

BETTER LIARS

Moreover, there is the question whether our way of life can survive if we get down to the Communist level and trade lies. Not only are the Communists better liars, but they have no free press to contradict them. The merit of the American newspaper is the way it digs out truth no matter how deeply hidden. Thus in a democracy the truth keeps bubbling to the surface. Democracy's strength lies in the free flow of information to its citizens.

Of course, security information must be withheld from the public so it won't reach an enemy. In this case a simple "no comment" is better than a lie.

Yet increasingly, American policymakers have engaged in the disturbing practice of concocting "cover stories," as official lies are delicately called, to keep the Communists guessing. Unhappily, the covers repeatedly have been ripped off these stories.

Four days after a U-2 spy plane disappeared over the Soviet Union in 1960, the State Department blandly announced, "There was no deliberate attempt to violate Soviet airspace, and there has never been." The world soon learned that U-2's had been winging over Russia for several years, and the cover story exploded in the faces of those who had invented it.

The following year, the late UN ambassador, Adlai Stevenson, relying on information from Washington, lied to the United Nations about the Bay of Pigs invasion. Another who helped to spread misinformation about the debacle in Cuba was White House aide Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., who in his recent memoirs presents a different set of facts from those he gave to the New York Times in 1961. When his book confirmed that the invasion force was much larger than he had estimated it to be then, the Times reminded him of his earlier statement. "Did I say that?" blurted Schlesinger. "Well, I was lying. That was a cover story."

During the Cuban missile crisis a year later, government information was tightly controlled and carefully coordinated to give a false picture of events. Five days after aerial photographs had been taken of Soviet missiles in Cuba, for instance, the Pentagon issued the following statement: "A Pentagon spokesman denied tonight that any alert has been ordered or that any emergency measures have been set in motion against Communist-ruled Cuba. Further, the spokesman said the Pentagon has no information indicating the presence of offensive weapons in Cuba." Not a word of the release was true. But press chief Sylvester still insisted three months later, "There has been no distortion, no deception and no manipulation of the news released by the Defense Department during the Cuban crisis."

Last year, when Singapore's Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew claimed a CIA agent had offered him a $3.3 million bribe, State Department spokesman Robert McCloskey indignantly declared, "We deny that allegation." Not until Lee threatened to produce tape recordings and a 1961 letter of apology from Secretary of State Dean Rusk did McCloskey backtrack. "Those who were consulted yesterday," he said sheepishly, "were not fully aware of the background of the incident, which occurred four and a half years ago."

In the Dominican Republic uprising last spring, a whole series of conflicting stories were put out. At first Washington announced that U.S. forces had been sent to protect the lives of American citizens. Later it was admitted that the purpose was to prevent a Communist takeover. The government released a list of 58 Reds said to be active on the rebel side. Reporters quickly found that the list included duplications, names of men then in prison and of some who were not even in the country at the time.

Government statements have also shed more smoke than light upon the war in Vietnam. At the same time that President Johnson has appealed to the people to support his Vietnam policies, his administration has not been frank about what's going on.

In August 1964, for example, the White House denied a report that UN Secretary-General U Thant had forwarded a peace feeler from North Vietnam. A year later, the President himself told a press conference, "Candor compels me to tell you that there has not been the slightest indication that the other side is interested in negotiation."

have a right to know?

The President's candor, it turned out, was less than complete. Three months later, there was official acknowledgement that the United States had rejected three bids for negotiation from North Vietnam, including one relayed by U Thant in August 1964.

In fact, this very policy rebounded against the U.S. a few months later. A St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter, Richard Dudman, discovered that a vague message, which could be interpreted as a peace bid, had been transmitted from Hanoi to Washington via Italian Foreign Minister Amitore Fanfani. When the story broke, the government felt compelled to release full information on the exchange—even though it was known that Hanoi would probably then withdraw from the overtures. The step was necessary, UN Ambassador Goldberg said, because of the necessity of "maintaining our credibility with our own people. . . . There has been great concern as to whether we in the administration really are pursuing a path to peace."

BAD PUBLICITY?

Still, official obfuscation appears to be the policy in Vietnam. A 1962 State Department cable, which is still classified, directed U.S. commanders in Vietnam not to take reporters on missions that might result in bad publicity. "Ambassador has over-all authority for handling of newsmen, insofar as U.S. is concerned," the cable read, in terse telegraphese. "He will make decisions as to when newsmen permitted to go on any missions with U.S. personnel . . . correspondents should not be taken on missions whose nature such that undesirable dispatches would be highly probable."

The cable also ordered suppression of the fact that Americans were directing combat missions against the Viet Cong. "We recognize it natural that American newsmen will concentrate on activities of Americans," the cable noted. "It not —repeat not—in our interest, however, to have stories indicating that Americans are leading and directing combat missions against Viet Cong . . . sensational press stories about children or civilians who become unfortunate victims of military operations are clearly inimical to national interest."

Though this cable has been superseded by others containing noble language about the public's right to nonsecurity information, the original guidelines are still followed. Not long ago, for instance, Lt. Col. George Brown, an official briefing officer, gave an imaginative account of an ambush northwest of Saigon. Guerrillas had struck at the second half of a First Infantry Division truck column, he said. He told dramatically how the troops had dismounted to fight off the attack.

Survivors later complained about the way newspapers "get things fouled up." The trucks had been sent, they said, to pick up foot soldiers who had been attacked while they were milling around preparing to board. "The report was totally misleading," said an officer, "even though it did make us look better than we deserved."

Helicopters were destroyed near Danang, according to another briefing officer, by mortar shells fired from off the base. After newspapers had headlined the story, reporters discovered that the helicopters were blown up by demolition charges planted under the noses of the Marine guards.

Casualty figures are subtly misrepresented to make American losses appear less than they really are. Thus casualties in any action are measured against the total force in the area at the time. Every man in a company might be killed and no other units involved, but the casualties would still be described as "light" on the theory that one company is only a small part of the full complement in the battle zone.

Information officers also put out a weekly "kill ratio" contrasting Viet Cong and U.S.-Vietnamese casualties. But the Vietnamese casualties from distant battlefields habitually come in too late to be included. One recent report showing a ratio of 8.4 Viet Cong killed for every American or Vietnamese was widely promoted by the U.S. Information Service. Yet the figures did not include the Vietnamese casualty count from one major battle. When reporters brought this up, a spokesman scolded them for acting "like certified public accountants."

VIVID IMAGINATION

At least one spokesman added high drama to a casualty report by claiming after an attack on a Special Forces camp at Plei Me that 90 enemy bodies had been counted, many of them draped grotesquely on the barbed wire around the camp. A reporter managed to reach the camp to photograph the grisly scene. But the besieged defenders denied ever seeing any bodies on the barbed wire. In fact, the 90 casualties had been estimated by desk officers back in Saigon.

It is ironic that all of this misinformation is being doled out under a President who is more accessible to reporters than any of his predecessors were. He shovel-feeds information to them, though it is more often what he wants to say than what they want to hear. He even appropriates news announcements that normally are put out by government agencies. During one recent four-day weekend at the LBJ Ranch, for instance, President Johnson issued 42 separate announcements, including one on the survival of the whooping crane. He avoids critical questions, however, as if they were hypodermic needles.

All presidents have sought to present the best possible face to the public, but none ever achieved President Johnson's stranglehold on the flow of information. He keeps the curtain closed on what his administration is doing until all the facts are in and the final decisions are reached. Only then is he inclined to inform the public. Seldom does he let them in on the decision process, and the doubters and dissenters usually are silenced. His directives to subordinates are often accompanied with stern admonitions about secrecy. His anger over unauthorized news leaks has terrorized the few sources who used to talk freely.

Under President Johnson's leadership, many government departments have issued announcements that tend to mold the facts as the administration would like them to appear. For example, when the Ranger-6 spacecraft failed in its mission to photograph the moon, the public was told failure was due to a minor malfunction. But a report classified "secret" said an investigation disclosed "weaknesses . . . so extensive that in combination they suggest that the present hardware . . . is unlikely to perform successfully. . . ."

The question of how much truth the President and other government spokesmen should give out—and how much the people are entitled to—is a thorny one, with no easy answers. Most people seem to agree that the government, for the protection of its citizens, need not always tell every last detail about every situation. On the other hand, it should not lie or mislead lest it lose the trust of the very persons it is seeking to protect.

In a democracy, this argument goes, when the government cannot tell the whole truth it should stand by its privilege to shut up.

Truth in government: Here are some thoughtful opinions

GERALD FORD (R., Mich.), House Republican leader: The American people should be given all the facts on domestic problems and issues to allow them to make sound decisions and to form responsible opinions. It is the responsibility of the President, all federal agencies and the Congress to provide these facts.

In dealing with foreign policy and the armed services, however, some facts may be withheld to protect national security and to prevent giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

For example, international spying inevitably involves deceit, misrepresentation and intrigue, and public officials may not jeopardize the national security by publicizing the true facts. This in no way reflects upon their personal integrity nor upon the broader aspects of public morality. But when a given situation becomes public knowledge, we recommend a frank and honest disclosure.

VERMONT ROYSTER, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and editor of the Wall Street Journal: I would defend the right of a President to sometimes keep silent about plans being made or carried out where a running account would serve no purpose and might do injury.

However, when a President of the United States, or his spokesman, does speak, I think both ethics and the cause of good government require that he speak the truth to them as he sees it.

If President Johnson in 1964 believed that the so-called "peace feeler" from Hanoi was phony, he would have been perfectly honest in denying at the time any indication of a sincere desire by Hanoi to negotiate. He could have misjudged the situation but still have felt he was speaking the truth.

DR. EDWIN DAHLBERG, former president of the National Council of Churches: It's hard for someone sitting in the grandstand to say how the players on the field should perform, but I think there should at least be more frankness, such as stating simply that there are certain facts that cannot be fully disclosed.

Speaking personally, I don't believe that there have been deliberate falsehoods on the part of high government spokesmen. However, in diplomatic and military affairs there are many good reasons for not revealing certain information to the public.

Q. Is it true the Republicans plan to defeat Lyndon Johnson in 1968 by highlighting the slogan, "He sent your boy to Vietnam"?—F. T., Rochester, N.Y.
A. The war in Vietnam has placed President Johnson in a political bind; no matter how it turns out, he will be held accountable.

Q. I would like to know the title of the book written by Maud Shaw, the governess to the Kennedy children.—Leah Allen, Rutherford, N.J.
A. My Life with Caroline and John-John.

Q. When Edward VIII abdicated the throne of Great Britain, how much loot did he take with him? — Anne Hodgkins, Bryn Mawr, Pa.
A. His personal fortune consisted of 850,000 pounds. He also had an annual tax-free income of 100,000 pounds. In addition he was given 25,000 pounds tax-free by his brother, George VI.

Q. I understand the great pianist Artur Rubinstein has turned down all piano engagements in Germany and will continue to do so. Is this so?—Fred Justini, Omaha, Neb.
A. True.

Q. The U.S. Information Agency makes periodic surveys of U.S. popularity in foreign countries throughout the world. How do people in Asia now feel about us?—Carey Dunleavy, Bronxville, N.Y.
A. The results of such popularity surveys are withheld from the American people for at least two years. Other nongovernmental surveys reveal that the war in Vietnam has affected our image in Asia harmfully. Only two Asian countries support us unconditionally: Taiwan and Thailand which we support with large financial grants. South Korea, the Philippines, Laos, Japan, and Malaysia are sympathetic but not uncritical. Burma and India are chary of us. Singapore, Pakistan, Cambodia, and Indonesia dislike us actively at this time.

Q. How old are Cary Grant and Henry Fonda?—Diane Lewis, Atlantic City, N.J.
A. Grant is 62. Fonda is 60.

Q. Who pays for Dwight Eisenhower's medical and travel expenses in connection with his last heart attack—Ike who is a millionaire or the federal government?—Rocky Lewis, Guadalajara, Mexico.
A. The federal government.

Q. They say that Nancy Wilson is even prettier than Lena Horne. Would you please run her picture? — Elmer Nelson, Little Rock, Ark.

Q. I have heard that Jayne Mansfield speaks several foreign languages fluently, has many advanced college degrees, that she plays the sex-pot purposely, is really a home-loving mother. Any truth to that statement?—F. P., St. Petersburg, Fla.
A. Jayne Mansfield is a mother who has capitalized on her bust development.

Q. What is the significance of the British holiday, "Boxing Day"? Is there any connection with the Boxer Rebellion?—John R. Taylor, Arlington, Va.
A. On the 26th of December the British enjoy Boxing Day, a statutory holiday whose origin goes back to the boxing of gifts by the three wise men for later presentation to the Christ child. It has no connection with the Boxer Rebellion.

Q. I have listened to the editorial vignettes of CBS reporter Eric Sevaried for some time. My question is does Sevaried write these vignettes himself?—Herb Karl, Tallahassee, Fla.
A. He does.

Q. Corinne Griffith, the former actress—I believe she's 66—married a young singer who sued her for divorce and alimony. How much does she have to pay?—Henrietta Waxman, Miami Beach, Fla.
A. Danny Scholl, 44, was awarded $200 a month temporary support pending trial of his contested divorce. Miss Griffith in addition was ordered to pay $2000 in attorney's fees and $500 in court costs. The marriage lasted 35 days. Miss Griffith, who gives her age as 50, claimed Scholl promised to be a "loving and affectionate husband" when they married, but that he failed to deliver on his promises.

Q. Is it true that Gregory Peck met his present wife in a bathtub?—D. L., La Jolla, Calif.
A. Veronique Passani, the present Mrs. Peck, used to interview film stars for Paris Presse. One time when she called to interview Peck he was taking a bath in his hotel, got clothed, sat for the interview.

Q. Who is Richard Sorge who the Soviets are now honoring posthumously, naming schools, streets, and squares after him in Moscow?—H. L. Allen, Seattle, Wash.
A. Richard Sorge was one of Russia's master spies. He was born in 1895 near Baku in the Caucasian oilfields. His mother was Russian, his father a German mining engineer. He fought for Germany in World War I. He subsequently became a Soviet agent, got a job as a special correspondent for Germany's leading newspaper, Frankfurter Zeitung. The Soviets sent him to Japan in the 1930's where he organized a top spy cell. On May 15th, 1941, he sent the Soviet military intelligence station in Vladivostok an historic message: "German attack on Russia to take place June 22." The message was immediately transmitted to Stalin who refused to believe it. Sorge and his spy cell were subsequently arrested by the Japanese. On November 7, 1944, he was hung from the gallows in Tokyo's Sugamo prison. In 1946 at the Tokyo war crimes trial, an American lawyer defending a Japanese client, referred to Sorge. The Soviet prosecutor, General Vasiliev, refused to acknowledge that Sorge was a Soviet intelligence agent. On September 4, 1964, the Soviet Union decided to make a hero of Sorge. A front page article appeared in Izvestia under the headline: "The Exploits of Richard Sorge: The Story of a Soviet Spy's Heroism."

Strange things are happening in the pet market:

HOW MUCH CAN YOU GET FOR A 1960 PERSIAN?

by BILL SURFACE

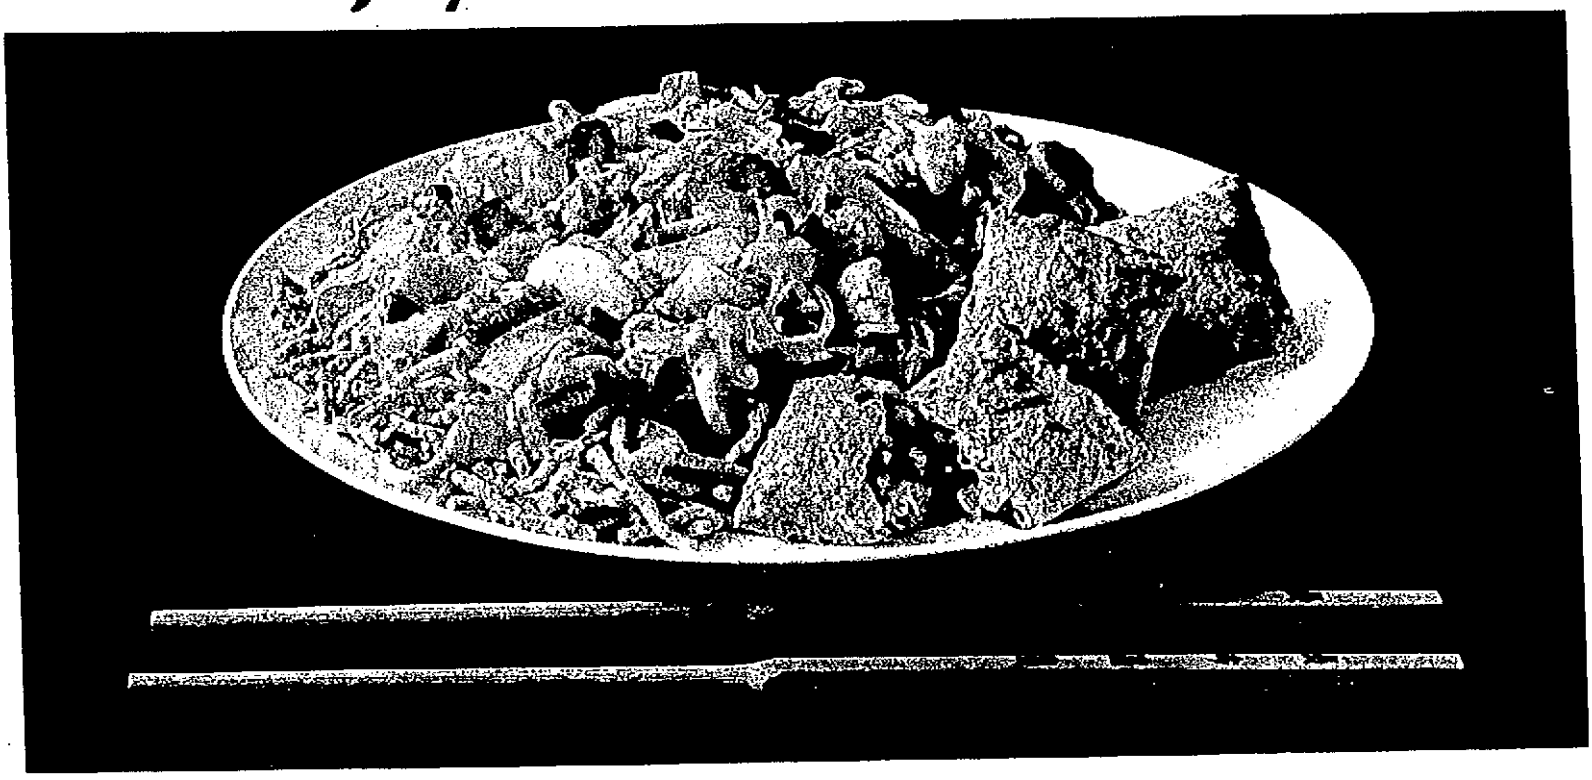
The other day a tall, wavy-haired accountant in a charcoal suit pondered about 15 minutes in a showroom on Manhattan's Lexington Avenue, finally deciding: "I'll take the gray one." Then he sat down with Milan Greer, the company's owner-salesman, worked out a satisfactory trade-in allowance, received a 30-day performance guarantee and signed a note agreeing to pay the balance in 12 monthly installments. But the accountant wasn't buying a 1966 automobile. He was in a shop called Fabulous Felines, Inc., and had just traded in his "old" white French poodle for a "new" gray pedigreed Abyssinian cat.

While such pet trade-ins don't, of course, equal the money involved in auto trade-ins, they now are a standard part of the pampered pet industry. In 1965, Americans spent about $130 million to buy cats, dogs, birds, fish, monkeys, turtles, lizards and frogs; $700 million for pet accessories, toys, patent medicines and funerals; and $625 million for pet foods. The amount spent for dog and cat food alone, Department of Commerce statisticians note, is double the total spent for baby food.

Moreover, American pets will be growling for more delicacies by 1969. Why? As a vice-president of Market Research Corporation of America recently disclosed at the Pet Food Institute convention: "Our research tells us that the average size of the dog (or cat) is increasing, which, of course, requires more feeding." Another study shows the pet food industry how its nearest competitor, table scraps, may be suppressed. More and more urban pet owners are buying compact, precooked TV dinners, which leave no scraps and compel them to buy pet foods.

These pets just may have more variety in their diet than their owners. Today, the average supermarket stocks about 120 different pet food products: mixed grill for finicky cats, low-calorie fish for fat cats, chicken croquettes for dapper dachshunds and "enriched" stews and burgers 'n' gravy for hearty eaters such as Him, President Johnson's beagle, and Blanco, his white collie (registered name: Leader Blair Jamie, or LBJ).

While dogs have long been popular pets, what reasons, besides prosperity, lie behind the current fad to own and pamper, say, cats? "First we put on an anti-kook campaign to change the cat owner's image," Milan Greer, a 340-pounder, explained in his duplex shop. In front of him lay The Fabulous Feline, the book he wrote. Behind him a man wearing a white coat took what he said were cats' blood counts and temperatures to maintain bacteria control. "We had to rid people of the idea that only nuts kept cats," Greer went on. "You can tell that's the key. Any time some ol' lady pops up on a TV quiz show saying that she keeps 250 alley cats in an efficiency apartment, cat sales drop 20 per cent.



"Secondly," Greer continued, "we emphasized that we don't sell dumb alley cats, but pedigreed cats that Egyptians once held as sacred, expensive kittens that run from $75 up to $4000 for an Archangel cat from Russia. We breed intelligent kittens with a high threshold of boredom and give 'em a three-week course to guarantee they won't scratch furniture. They have to pass and get a diploma. Then we'll only sell a particular cat to someone who has a similar personality."

CAT STEAKS?

These days, many persons seem to treat animals better than humans. Thus, when Greer's cat shop opened, several people telephoned the police, Board of Health and Society for The Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, reporting: "That big fat man in a white Dr. Kildare suit and shoes is really an illegal butcher who's selling cat steaks." And if some adults' dying wish is to subsidize pets (last year, a Dr. William Grier willed $415,000 to his two cats), imagine what they will buy pets while alive.

Hence an enormous industry, profits from demands for fatuous animal gifts to observe Christmas, Valentine and Mother's Day, pet birthdays, anniversaries, National Dog Week and Cat Week International. Among the pet boutiques' staple items are pet portraits and sculptures, electric sleeping pads, plastic fire hydrants, remote-controlled collars, auto seat belts, hi-fi records that play city noises to prevent pet loneliness during vacations, fake shoes, real canine gold lamé pajamas, pants, boots, earmuffs, scarfs, winter coats and summer coats (to prevent sunburn) and matching master and mutt clothing ($169.95).

You can also, these days, buy more patent medicines for pets than cures for tired blood: purchase them a health-accident policy (they first must pass a vet's examination); hire a cute female walker who will pick them up each day, hook them on a nylon leash with six or eight other collies ("It's fine group therapy") and take them on a two-hour romp. But the ultimate in dog pampering is to send your pet to Europe. You can do it by luxury liner (he goes on a chic "dog deck") or by "sky kennel service." Small pets stay in the cabin with their owners and large ones go at the excess baggage rate in a special pressurized section. Before they board they can freshen up in a special animalport.

As for pets who don't travel, they can expect a better life at home. Dozens of programs are emerging to supplement the charity work already done by non-profit groups such as the American Feline Society. Lobbyists in Washington seek to end government regulations on pet food. A group is campaigning for "roomier" bird cages. Finally, there is a group that claims to have planted such appetizing dog food on West Berlin's border that 70 of East Berlin's hungry Communist watchdogs have defected. At last count 65 dogs had escaped successfully and five had been shot or drowned.

GOOD-BYE SCOTTIE

After a lifetime of pampering, an animal can also expect a glorious send-off—the Pets' American Way of Death. A lady recently telephoned the New York branch of an "animal kingdom" funeral chain to say that "Scottie, my dog, just died." "How unfortunate," a man replied. "Well, we have a service starting at $49.95. We pick up the body, groom, embalm and dress it and permit two visitations in our chapel. Was the death unexpected? Well, then we can send funeral notices to friends." Other costs for caskets ($35 to $500), flowers, hearse, 3x3 foot cemetery plot, gravediggers fees and tombstones can raise the total to $1000.

Anyone unconvinced that pet funerals aren't big business need only visit a cemetery such as Bide-A-Wee Pet Memorial Park near Westhampton, Long Island, where five rolling, landscaped acres contain the remains of 21,000 pets, among them those of Vice-President Richard Nixon's late cocker spaniel, whose marble tombstone reads: "Checkers. 1952-1964. Nixon."

The pet revolution, however, is not limited to the U.S. England has such a serious delinquency problem with dogs that a reformatory called "Home for Recalcitrant Dogs" has sprung up outside London. Judges now sentence biting dogs to indefinite sentences, pardon them only when the warden testifies that the dog is fit to return to society. At least our pampered pets haven't come to that—yet.

A TIMELY REPORT ON ONE OF THE MOST CRITICAL

We the people: do we

by JACK ANDERSON

A few weeks ago President Johnson launched a dramatic "peace offensive" by dispatching our top diplomatic envoys for talks with the leaders of other world powers. As a demonstration of U.S. willingness to spare no effort to stop the fighting in Vietnam, these simultaneous missions were widely hailed for the skill with which they were arranged by the administration. This was a bright chapter in the long history of the Cold War and a hopeful contrast to the fumbling, bumbling and outright lying that has frequently embarrassed us in other dealings with the rest of the world.

For the fact is that the U.S. has repeatedly been caught in half-truths and awkward lies that have often done our country more harm than the truth itself would have. Confidence in our government has been severely shaken, and this "crisis in credibility" has reduced America's effectiveness in world affairs.

Some people contend that the President, for the protection of the nation, sometimes must withhold the whole truth about foreign affairs. But domestic officials have also played loose with the truth to cover up blunders, hide corruption and make bad policies look good. Though most government statements are straightforward enough, reporters have learned to beware of tricky wording. Many an embarrassing fact has been papered over with verbal camouflage. Officials who have hesitated to spread falsehood have accomplished the same result simply by sweeping the truth under a secrecy label.

The public can be excused for wondering occasionally whom and what to believe. Defense Secretary Robert McNamara's optimistic reports on the war in Vietnam, for example, have been regularly contradicted by events on the battlefront. The Defense Department's credibility has sunk so low, charges aviation writer Robert Hotz, "that most Pentagon reporters really don't believe a story until it has been officially denied."

Pentagon spokesman Arthur Sylvester contends that "information is a weapon, a very important weapon, to be used or withheld." Though he denies any intent to "phony up" the news, he defends the government's inherent right "to lie to save itself when it's going up into a nuclear war." However, Sylvester has also fibbed about non-nuclear matters.

This practice of expedient lying raises some serious questions in a democracy. J. Russell Wiggins, editor of the Washington Post, has expressed one in his book, Freedom or Secrecy:

"If a government repeatedly resorts to lies in crises where lies seem to serve its interests best, it will one day be unable to employ the truth effectively when truth would serve its interests best. A government that too readily rationalizes its right to lie in a crisis will never lack for either lies or crises."

President Johnson talks with reporters in his office. He tries to keep firm control over news that flows from the White House, a policy that has cost some public confidence.

BETTER LIARS

Moreover, there is the question whether our way of life can survive if we get down to the Communist level and trade lies. Not only are the Communists better liars, but they have no free press to contradict them. The merit of the American newspaper is the way it digs out truth no matter how deeply hidden. Thus in a democracy the truth keeps bubbling to the surface. Democracy's strength lies in the free flow of information to its citizens.

Of course, security information must be withheld from the public so it won't reach an enemy. In this case a simple "no comment" is better than a lie.

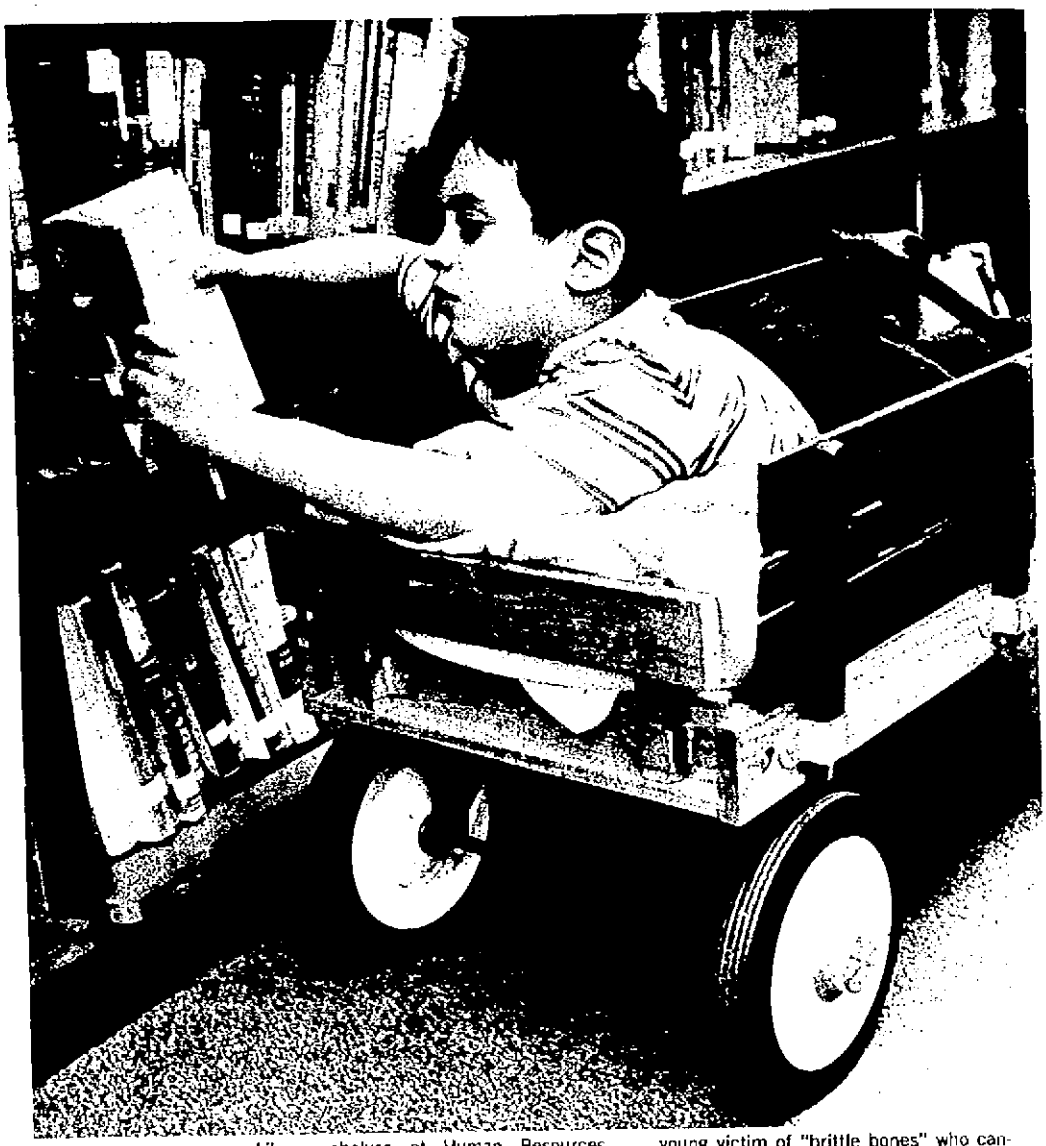
Yet increasingly, American policymakers have engaged in the disturbing practice of concocting "cover stories," as official lies are delicately called, to keep the Communists guessing. Unhappily, the covers repeatedly have been ripped off these stories.

Four days after a U-2 spy plane disappeared over the Soviet Union in 1960, the State Department blandly announced, "There was no deliberate attempt to violate Soviet airspace, and there has never been." The world soon learned that U-2's had been winging over Russia for several years, and the cover story exploded in the faces of those who had invented it.

The following year, the late UN ambassador, Adlai Stevenson, relying on information from Washington, lied to the United Nations about the Bay of Pigs invasion. Another who helped to spread misinformation about the debacle in Cuba was White House aide Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., who in his recent memoirs presents a different set of facts from those he gave to the New York Times in 1961. When his book confirmed that the invasion force was much larger than he had estimated it to be then, the Times reminded him of his earlier statement. "Did I say that?" blurted Schlesinger. "Well, I was lying. That was a cover story."

During the Cuban missile crisis a year later, government information was tightly controlled and carefully coordinated to give a false picture of events. Five days after aerial photographs had been taken of Soviet missiles in Cuba, for instance, the Pentagon issued the following statement: "A Pentagon spokesman denied tonight that any alert has been ordered or that any emergency measures have been set in motion against Communist-ruled Cuba. Further, the spokesman said the Pentagon has no information indicating the presence of offensive weapons in Cuba." Not a word of the release was true. But press chief Sylvester still insisted three months later, "There has been no distortion, no deception and no manipulation of the news released by the Defense Department during the Cuban crisis."

Last year, when Singapore's Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew claimed a CIA agent had offered him a $3.3 million bribe, State Department spokesman Robert McCloskey indignantly declared, "We deny that allegation." Not until Lee threatened to produce tape recordings and a 1961 letter of apology from Secretary of State Dean Rusk did McCloskey backtrack. "Those who were consulted yesterday," he said sheepishly, "were not fully aware of the background of the incident, which occurred four and a half years ago."



In the Dominican Republic uprising last spring, a whole series of conflicting stories were put out. At first Washington announced that U.S. forces had been sent to protect the lives of American citizens. Later it was admitted that the purpose was to prevent a Communist takeover. The government released a list of 58 Reds said to be active on the rebel side. Reporters quickly found that the list included duplications, names of men then in prison and of some who were not even in the country at the time.

Government statements have also shed more smoke than light upon the war in Vietnam. At the same time that President Johnson has appealed to the people to support his Vietnam policies, his administration has not been frank about what's going on.

In August 1964, for example, the White House denied a report that UN Secretary-General U Thant had forwarded a peace feeler from North Vietnam. A year later, the President himself told a press conference, "Candor compels me to tell you that there has not been the slightest indication that the

A GREAT SCHOOL FOR HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

by SID ROSS and NEAL ASHBY

Library shelves at Human Resources School, Albertson, N.Y., are no problem for young victim of "brittle bones" who cannot sit up, must be pulled in a wagon.

ALBERTSON, N.Y.

The bright faces and happy cries would make you think the children were bursting onto the playground instead of going into school. But even after a vacation, the students at the Human Resources School in this Long Island community are thrilled to be getting back to classes.

School for these 100 boys and girls brings a rare opportunity to learn and to mingle with others. Each is so severely disabled that if it weren't for the special, highly advanced new school they attend here there would be no classes for them. Public schools could provide only a few hours a week of instruction at home.

And the Human Resources School is one of the few in the U.S. which accepts handicapped students at the high school level. Local school districts which accommodate them in regular classes seldom continue aid past the elementary grades.

Special buses travel as far as 40 miles to bring the youngsters to this specially designed, one-story structure. On ramps or the platforms of hydraulic lifts they descend to ground level and pass cheerily through the doors in wheelchairs, litters, tricycles or coaster wagons or haltingly on foot.

The ailments that have slowed but hardly stopped them include spina bifida (disease of the spinal column), muscular dystrophy, polio, heart conditions, osteogenesis imperfecta (brittle bones), dystonia (brain impairment) and Cooley's anemia.

They proceed to modern classrooms that have every modification they may require. Doorways are wide and closed doors open by magic eye. The height of desks, tables, shelves and racks is adjustable, serving even the pupil who must lie stretched out on a litter or in a wagon. There are overhead projectors, mirrors through which instructors may be seen from various angles and a microprojector for students unable to use a standard microscope.

Human Resources students attend science lab sessions, from which the handicapped are nearly always barred because of potential dangers in their use of standard equipment. Their lab has special benches, gas, water and electrical outlets designed for them.

The Human Resources School was created three years ago by Henry Viscardi, Jr., who was born without legs. Viscardi is famed for his founding of Abilities, Inc., an industrial assembly plant adjoining the school which employs only handicapped workers.

"Through Abilities, I had wanted to show that disabled people can do just as good a day's work as anyone else," Viscardi says. "Through the school, I want to demonstrate that disabled children can go through school as normal ones do."

The school first was located in the plant; its own building was completed in late 1965. It is actually a private school. However, through a special act of the State Legislature it is designated a pilot project in special education, and the state pays $1800 a year per pupil. The actual cost is about $2500, the balance provided by private contributions. Pupils attend five days a week, 10 A.M. to 4 P.M., in small classes covering kindergarten through 11th grade. Twelfth

YOUR COMMUNITY AND ITS HANDICAPPED

■ "The best place for a handicapped child is in a regular school in his own neighborhood or school district," says Henry Viscardi, Jr., founder of the Human Resources School. "It is hoped that those who plan school buildings of the future will keep this in mind. In communities where appropriate facilities are not available, and for the child whose disability is so severe that the alternative is isolation or home-bound instruction, a school like Human Resources should be built.

"What is needed to get such a school started is the combined talents, devotion and cooperative efforts of community leadership. Business and civic interests should get together with officials of federal, state and local education, health and rehabilitation agencies and local medical societies.

"More detailed information on initial organization and on curriculum development in this field of special education may be obtained by writing directly to us at Human Resources Center, Albertson, N.Y."

ISSUES TODAY

have a right to know?

other side is interested in negotiation."

The President's candor, it turned out, was less than complete. Three months later, there was official acknowledgement that the United States had rejected three bids for negotiation from North Vietnam, including one relayed by U Thant in August 1964.

In fact, this very policy rebounded against the U.S. a few months later. A St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter, Richard Dudman, discovered that a vague message, which could be interpreted as a peace bid, had been transmitted from Hanoi to Washington via Italian Foreign Minister Amitore Fanfani. When the story broke, the government felt compelled to release full information on the exchange—even though it was known that Hanoi would probably then withdraw from the overtures. The step was necessary, UN Ambassador Goldberg said, because of the necessity of "maintaining our credibility with our own people. . . . There has been great concern as to whether we in the administration really are pursuing a path to peace."

BAD PUBLICITY?

Still, official obfuscation appears to be the policy in Vietnam. A 1962 State Department cable, which is still classified, directed U.S. commanders in Vietnam not to take reporters on missions that might result in bad publicity. "Ambassador has over-all authority for handling of newsmen, insofar as U.S. is concerned," the cable read, in terse telegraphese. "He will make decisions as to when newsmen permitted to go on any missions with U.S. personnel . . . correspondents should not be taken on missions whose nature such that undesirable dispatches would be highly probable."

The cable also ordered suppression of the fact that Americans were directing combat missions against the Viet Cong. "We recognize it natural that American newsmen will concentrate on activities of Americans," the cable noted. "It not — repeat not—in our interest, however, to have stories indicating that Americans are leading and directing combat missions against Viet Cong . . . sensational press stories about children or civilians who become unfortunate victims of military operations are clearly inimical to national interest."

Though this cable has been superseded by others containing noble language about the public's right to non-security information, the original guidelines are still followed. Not long ago, for instance, Lt. Col. George Brown, an official briefing officer, gave an imaginative account of an ambush northwest of Saigon. Guerrillas had struck at the second half of a First Infantry Division truck column, he said. He told dramatically how the troops had dismounted to fight off the attack.

Survivors later complained about the way newspapers "get things fouled up." The trucks had been sent, they said, to pick up foot soldiers who had been attacked while they were milling around preparing to board. "The report was totally misleading," said an officer, "even though it did make us look better than we deserved."

Helicopters were destroyed near Danang, according to another briefing officer, by mortar shells fired from off the base. After newspapers had headlined the story, reporters discovered that the helicopters were blown up by demolition charges planted under the noses of the Marine guards.

Casualty figures are subtly misrepresented to make American losses appear less than they really are. Thus casualties in any action are measured against the total force in the area at the time. Every man in a company might be killed and no other units involved, but the casualties would still be described as "light" on the theory that one company is only a small part of the full complement in the battle zone.

Information officers also put out a weekly "kill ratio" contrasting Viet Cong and U.S.-Vietnamese casualties. But the Vietnamese casualties from distant battlefields habitually come in too late to be included. One recent report showing a ratio of 8.4 Viet Cong killed for every American or Vietnamese was widely promoted by the U.S. Information Service. Yet the figures did not include the Vietnamese casualty count from one major battle. When reporters brought this up, a spokesman scolded them for acting "like certified public accountants."

VIVID IMAGINATION

At least one spokesman added high drama to a casualty report by claiming after an attack on a Special Forces camp at Plei Me that 90 enemy bodies had been counted, many of them draped grotesquely on the barbed wire around the camp. A reporter managed to reach the camp to photograph the grisly scene. But the besieged defenders denied ever seeing any bodies on the barbed wire. In fact, the 90 casualties had been estimated by desk officers back in Saigon.

It is ironic that all of this misinformation is being doled out under a President who is more accessible to reporters than any of his predecessors were. He shovel-feeds information to them, though it is more often what he wants to say than what they want to hear. He even appropriates news announcements that normally are put out by government agencies. During one recent four-day weekend at the LBJ Ranch, for instance, President Johnson issued 42 separate announcements, including one on the survival of the whooping crane. He avoids critical questions, however, as if they were hypodermic needles.

All presidents have sought to present the best possible face to the public, but none ever achieved President Johnson's stranglehold on the flow of information. He keeps the curtain closed on what his administration is doing until all the facts are in and the final decisions are reached. Only then is he inclined to inform the public. Seldom does he let them in on the decision process, and the doubters and dissenters usually are silenced. His directives to subordinates are often accompanied with stern admonitions about secrecy. His anger over unauthorized news leaks has terrorized the few sources who used to talk freely.

Under President Johnson's leadership, many government departments have issued announcements that tend to mold the facts as the administration would like them to appear. For example, when the Ranger-6 spacecraft failed in its mission to photograph the moon, the public was told failure was due to a minor malfunction. But a report classified "secret" said an investigation disclosed "weaknesses . . . so extensive that in combination they suggest that the present hardware . . . is unlikely to perform successfully. . . ."

The question of how much truth the President and other government spokesmen should give out—and how much the people are entitled to—is a thorny one, with no easy answers. Most people seem to agree that the government, for the protection of its citizens, need not always tell every last detail about every situation. On the other hand, it should not lie or mislead lest it lose the trust of the very persons it is seeking to protect.

In a democracy, this argument goes, when the government cannot tell the whole truth it should stand by its privilege to shut up.

Truth in government: Here are some thoughtful opinions

GERALD FORD (R., Mich.), House Republican leader: The American people should be given all the facts on domestic problems and issues to allow them to make sound decisions and to form responsible opinions. It is the responsibility of the President, all federal agencies and the Congress to provide these facts.

In dealing with foreign policy and the armed services, however, some facts may be withheld to protect national security and to prevent giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

For example, international spying inevitably involves deceit, misrepresentation and intrigue, and public officials may not jeopardize the national security by publicizing the true facts. This in no way reflects upon their personal integrity nor upon the broader aspects of public morality. But when a given situation becomes public knowledge, we recommend a frank and honest disclosure.

VERMONT ROYSTER, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and editor of the Wall Street Journal: I would defend the right of a President to sometimes keep silent about plans being made or carried out where a running account would serve no purpose and might do injury.

However, when a President of the United States, or his spokesman, does speak, I think both ethics and the cause of good government require that he speak the truth to them as he sees it.

If President Johnson in 1964 believed that the so-called "peace feeler" from Hanoi was phony, he would have been perfectly honest in denying at the time any indication of a sincere desire by Hanoi to negotiate. He could have misjudged the situation but still have felt he was speaking the truth.

DR. EDWIN DAHLBERG, former president of the National Council of Churches: It's hard for someone sitting in the grandstand to say how the players on the field should perform, but I think there should at least be more frankness, such as stating simply that there are certain facts that cannot be fully disclosed.

Speaking personally, I don't believe that there have been deliberate falsehoods on the part of high government spokesmen. However, in diplomatic and military affairs there are many good reasons for not revealing certain information to the public.

Strange things are happening in the pet market:

HOW MUCH CAN YOU GET FOR A 1960 PERSIAN?

by BILL SURFACE

The other day a tall, wavy-haired accountant in a charcoal suit pondered about 15 minutes in a showroom on Manhattan's Lexington Avenue, finally deciding: "I'll take the gray one." Then he sat down with Milan Greer, the company's owner-salesman, worked out a satisfactory trade-in allowance, received a 30-day performance guarantee and signed a note agreeing to pay the balance in 12 monthly installments. But the accountant wasn't buying a 1966 automobile. He was in a shop called Fabulous Felines, Inc., and had just traded in his "old" white French poodle for a "new" gray pedigreed Abyssinian cat.

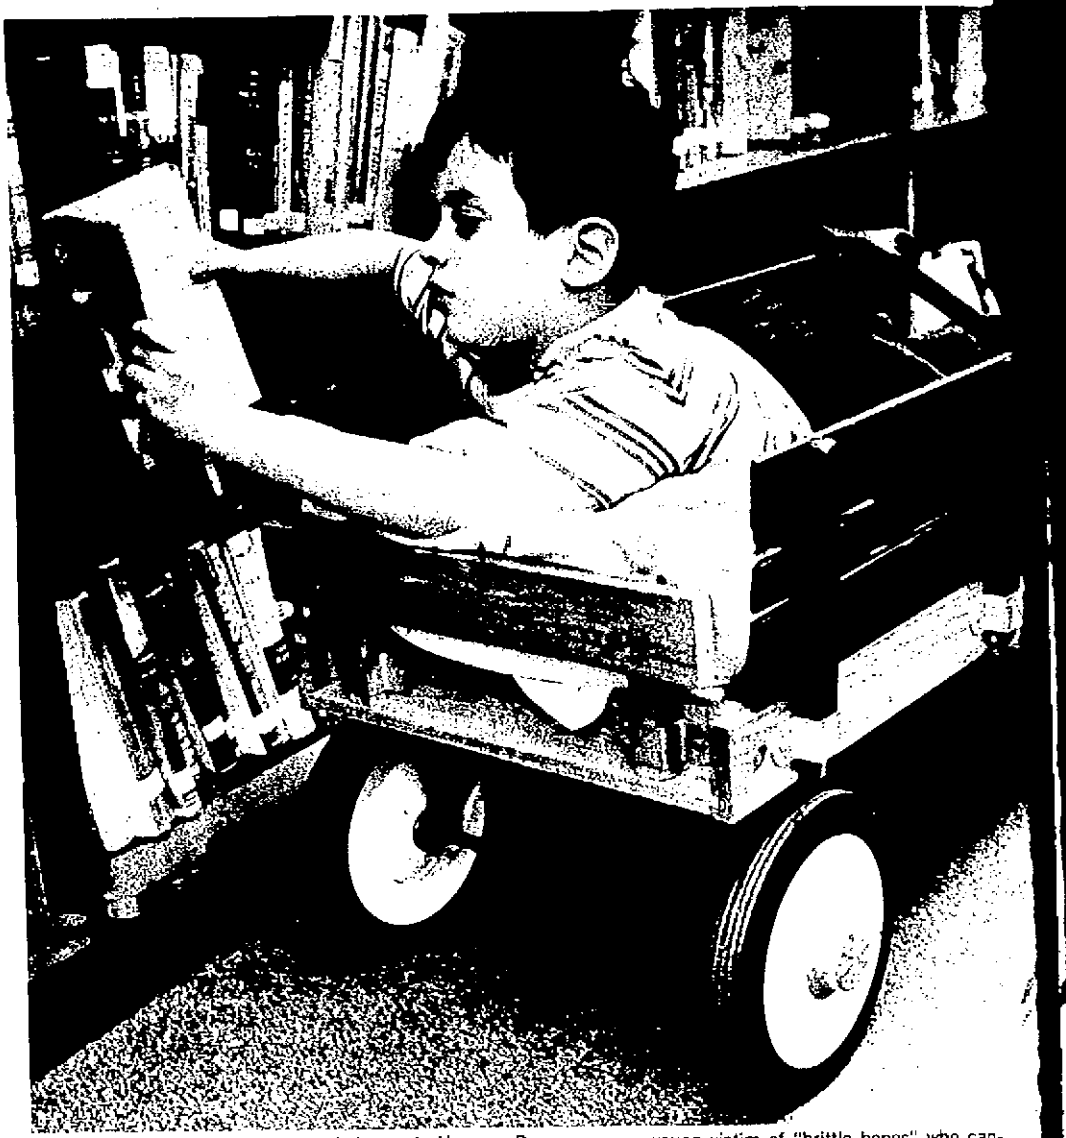
While such pet trade-ins don't, of course, equal the money involved in auto trade-ins, they now are a standard part of the pampered pet industry. In 1965, Americans spent about $130 million to buy cats, dogs, birds, fish, monkeys, turtles, lizards and frogs; $700 million for pet accessories, toys, patent medicines and funerals; and $625 million for pet foods. The amount spent for dog and cat food alone, Department of Commerce statisticians note, is double the total spent for baby food.

Moreover, American pets will be growling for more delicacies by 1969. Why? As a vice-president of Market Research Corporation of America recently disclosed at the Pet Food Institute convention: "Our research tells us that the average size of the dog (or cat) is increasing, which, of course, requires more feeding." Another study shows the pet food industry how its nearest competitor, table scraps, may be suppressed. More and more urban pet owners are buying compact, precooked TV dinners, which leave no scraps and compel them to buy pet foods.

These pets just may have more variety in their diet than their owners. Today, the average supermarket stocks about 120 different pet food products: mixed grill for finicky cats, low-calorie fish for fat cats, chicken croquettes for dapper dachshunds and "enriched" stews and burgers 'n' gravy for hearty eaters such as Him, President Johnson's beagle, and Blanco, his white collie (registered name: Leader Blair Jamie, or LBJ).

While dogs have long been popular pets, what reasons, besides prosperity, lie behind the current fad to own and pamper, say, cats? "First we put on an anti-kook campaign to change the cat owner's image," Milan Greer, a 340-pounder, explained in his duplex shop. In front of him lay The Fabulous Feline, the book he wrote. Behind him a man wearing a white coat took what he said were cats' blood counts and temperatures to maintain bacteria control. "We had to rid people of the idea that only nuts kept cats," Greer went on. "You can tell that's the key. Any time some ol' lady pops up on a TV quiz show saying that she keeps 250 alley cats in an efficiency apartment, cat sales drop 20 per cent.

"Secondly," Greer continued, "we emphasized that we don't sell dumb alley cats, but pedigreed cats that Egyptians once held as sacred, expensive kittens that run from $75 up to $4000 for an Archangel cat from Russia. We breed intelligent kittens with a high threshold of boredom and give 'em a three-week course to guarantee they won't scratch furniture. They have to pass and get a diploma. Then we'll only sell a particular cat to someone who has a similar personality."



CAT STEAKS?

These days, many persons seem to treat animals better than humans. Thus, when Greer's cat shop opened, several people telephoned the police, Board of Health and Society for The Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, reporting: "That big fat man in a white Dr. Kildare suit and shoes is really an illegal butcher who's selling cat steaks." And if some adults' dying wish is to subsidize pets (last year, a Dr. William Grier willed $415,000 to his two cats), imagine what they will buy pets while alive.

Hence an enormous industry profits from demands for fatuous animal gifts to observe Christmas, Valentine and Mother's Day, pet birthdays, anniversaries, National Dog Week and Cat Week International. Among the pet boutiques' staple items are pet portraits and sculptures, electric sleeping pads, plastic fire hydrants, remote-controlled collars, auto seat belts, hi-fi records that play city

by SID ROSS and NEAL ASHBY

Library shelves at Human Resources School, Albertson, N.Y., are no problem for young victim of "brittle bones" who cannot sit up, must be pulled in a wagon.

ALBERTSON, N.Y.

The bright faces and happy cries would make you think the children were bursting onto the playground instead of going into school. But even after a vacation, the students at the Human Resources School in this Long Island community are thrilled to be getting back to classes.

School for these 100 boys and girls brings a rare opportunity to learn and to mingle with others. Each is so severely disabled that if it weren't for the special, highly advanced new school they attend here there would be no classes for them. Public schools could provide only a few hours a week of instruction at home.

And the Human Resources School is one of the few in the U.S. which accepts handicapped students at the high school level. Local school districts which accommodate them in regular classes seldom continue aid past the elementary grades.

Special buses travel as far as 40 miles to bring the youngsters to this specially designed, one-story structure. On ramps or the platforms of hydraulic lifts they descend to ground level and pass cheerily through the doors in wheelchairs, litters, tricycles or coaster wagons or haltingly on foot.

The ailments that have slowed but hardly stopped them include spina bifida (disease of the spinal column), muscular dystrophy, polio, heart conditions, osteogenesis imperfecta (brittle bones), dystonia (brain impairment) and Cooley's anemia.

They proceed to modern classrooms that have every modification they may require. Doorways are wide and closed doors open by magic eye. The height of desks, tables, shelves and racks is adjustable, serving even the pupil who must lie stretched out on a litter or in a wagon. There are overhead projectors, mirrors through which instructors may be seen from various angles and a microprojector for students unable to use a standard microscope.

Human Resources students attend science lab sessions, from which the handicapped are nearly always barred because of potential dangers in their use of standard equipment. Their lab has special benches, gas, water and electrical outlets designed for them.

The Human Resources School was created three years ago by Henry Viscardi, Jr., who was born without legs. Viscardi is famed for his founding of Abilities, Inc., an industrial assembly plant adjoining the school which employs only handicapped workers.

"Through Abilities, I had wanted to show that disabled people can do just as good a day's work as anyone else," Viscardi says. "Through the school, I want to demonstrate that disabled children can go through school as normal ones do."

The school first was located in the plant; its own building was completed in late 1965. It is actually a private school. However, through a special act of the State Legislature it is designated a pilot project in special education, and the state pays $1800 a year per pupil. The actual cost is about $2500, the balance provided by private contributions. Pupils attend five days a week, 10 A.M. to 4 P.M., in small classes covering kindergarten through 11th grade. Twelfth

YOUR COMMUNITY AND ITS HANDICAPPED

■ "The best place for a handicapped child is in a regular school in his own neighborhood or school district," says Henry Viscardi, Jr., founder of the Human Resources School. "It is hoped that those who plan school buildings of the future will keep this in mind. In communities where appropriate facilities are not available, and for the child whose disability is so severe that the alternative is isolation or home-bound instruction, a school like Human Resources should be built.

"What is needed to get such a school started is the combined talents, devotion and cooperative efforts of community leadership. Business and civic interests should get together with officials of federal, state and local education, health and rehabilitation agencies and local medical societies.

"More detailed information on initial organization and on curriculum development in this field of special education may be obtained by writing directly to us at Human Resources Center, Albertson, N.Y."

Fat cat of pet industry, Milan Greer, 340-lb. owner of Fabulous Felines, Inc., poses with high-priced specimens. He takes dogs and cats in trade, arranges liberal terms.

noises to prevent pet loneliness during vacations, fake shoes, real canine gold lamé pajamas, pants, boots, earmuffs, scarfs, winter coats and summer coats (to prevent sunburn) and matching master and mutt clothing ($169.95).

You can also, these days, buy more patent medicines for pets than cures for tired blood; purchase them a health-accident policy (they first must pass a vet's examination); hire a cute female walker who will pick them up each day, hook them on a nylon leash with six or eight other collies ("It's fine group therapy") and take them on a two-hour romp. But the ultimate in dog pampering is to send your pet to Europe. You can do it by luxury liner (he goes on a chic "dog deck") or by "sky kennel service." Small pets stay in the cabin with their owners and large ones go at the excess baggage rate in a special pressurized section. Before they board they can freshen up in a special animalport.

As for pets who don't travel, they can expect a better life at home. Dozens of programs are emerging to supplement the charity work already done by non-profit groups such as the American Feline Society. Lobbyists in Washington seek to end government regulations on pet food. A group is campaigning for "roomier" bird cages. Finally, there is a group that claims to have planted such appetizing dog food on West Berlin's border that 70 of East Berlin's hungry Communist watchdogs have defected. At last count 65 dogs had escaped successfully and five had been shot or drowned.

GOOD-BYE SCOTTIE

After a lifetime of pampering, an animal can also expect a glorious send-off—the Pets' American Way of Death. A lady recently telephoned the New York branch of an "animal kingdom" funeral chain to say that "Scottie, my dog, just died." "How unfortunate," a man replied. "Well, we have a service starting at $49.95. We pick up the body, groom, embalm and dress it and permit two visitations in our chapel. Was the death unexpected? Well, then we can send funeral notices to friends." Other costs for caskets ($35 to $500), flowers, hearse, 3x3 foot cemetery plot, gravediggers fees and tombstones can raise the total to $1000.

Anyone unconvinced that pet funerals aren't big business need only visit a cemetery such as Bide-A-Wee Pet Memorial Park near Westhampton, Long Island, where five rolling, landscaped acres contain the remains of 21,000 pets, among them those of Vice-President Richard Nixon's late cocker spaniel, whose marble tombstone reads: "Checkers. 1952-1964. Nixon."

The pet revolution, however, is not limited to the U.S. England has such a serious delinquency problem with dogs that a reformatory called "Home for Recalcitrant Dogs" has sprung up outside London. Judges now sentence biting dogs to indefinite sentences, pardon them only when the warden testifies that the dog is fit to return to society. At least our pampered pets haven't come to that—yet.

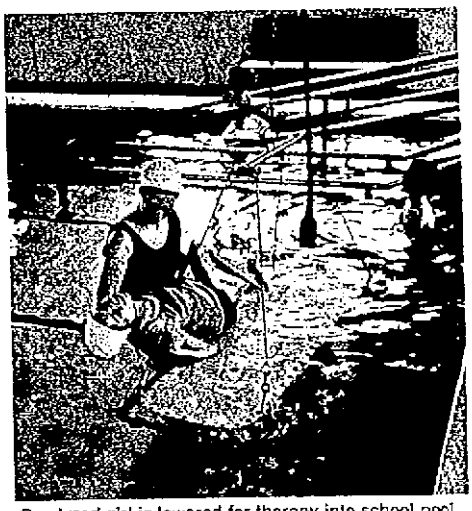
It's high for her wheelchair level, but full-size range is used to prepare girl student for adult-life cooking.



Paralyzed hands prevent boy from holding pencil. But he can write by poking keys of electric typewriter.

Thanks to school's specially designed equipment, the handicapped can participate in science lab sessions.

Physical therapy program includes fencing instruction for wheelchair-bound youngsters. Students also can bowl on special alleys. The school is outfitted with a full array of gymnastic and rehabilitation equipment.

grade will be added this year. The academic program is supplemented by physical therapy, including swimming and even bowling.

Besides its happy spirit of gratitude, the school has a habit of helpfulness. Those who can walk help those who can't. "Don't worry, Tony," PARADE heard one 8-year-old tell a younger boy whose wagon he was pulling, "you won't miss anything." And the youngsters insist fiercely on being independent. "Don't help me, I can do it myself!" an 11-year-old shouted at a volunteer who proposed to wheel him to the bathroom.

Its pupils are keenly aware that their Human Resources School affords them far more than classroom instruction.

"A year ago, I didn't dream of going to any real high school," says a 13-year-old boy. "Now, you wait, I'm going to go to college, too."

Says a girl of 15 who rides a wheelchair: "You have to make your own adjustment to life and understand there are some things you can't do. But a school like this makes you really feel you can be accepted as a person." ■

Wheelchairs form huge semicircle around piano as instructor gives a music lesson. Most of the school's classes meet in small groups.

It's high for her wheelchair level, but full-size range is used to prepare girl student for adult-life cooking.

Paralyzed hands prevent boy from holding pencil. But he can write by poking keys of electric typewriter.

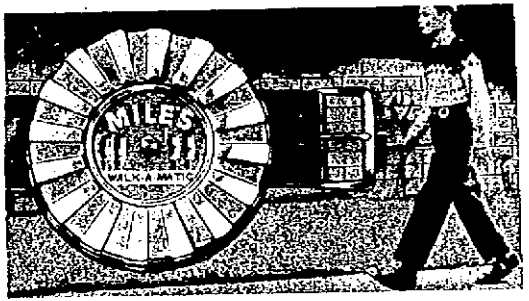
Thanks to school's specially designed equipment, the handicapped can participate in science lab sessions.

Physical therapy program includes fencing instruction for wheelchair-bound youngsters. Students also can bowl on special alleys. The school is outfitted with a full array of gymnastic and rehabilitation equipment.

Paralyzed girl is lowered for therapy into school pool. At rear, boy enters via a special ramp with handrails.

grade will be added this year. The academic program is supplemented by physical therapy, including swimming and even bowling.

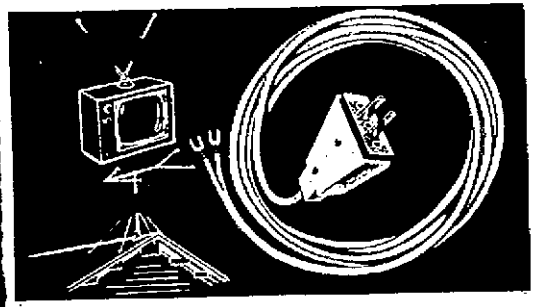
Besides its happy spirit of gratitude, the school has a habit of helpfulness. Those who can walk help those who can't. "Don't worry, Tony," PARADE heard one 8-year-old tell a younger boy whose wagon he was pulling, "you won't miss anything." And the youngsters insist fiercely on being independent. "Don't help me, I can do it myself!" an 11-year-old shouted at a volunteer who proposed to wheel him to the bathroom.



Its pupils are keenly aware that their Human Resources School affords them far more than classroom instruction.

"A year ago, I didn't dream of going to any real high school," says a 13-year-old boy. "Now, you wait, I'm going to go to college, too."

Says a girl of 15 who rides a wheelchair: "You have to make your own adjustment to life and understand there are some things you can't do. But a school like this makes you really feel you can be accepted as a person." ■



Wheelchairs form huge semicircle around piano as instructor gives a music lesson. Most of the school's classes meet in small groups.

SEE HOW FAR YOU WALK EACH DAY. This clever pedometer automatically records the distance covered around the house... at work... or on a stroll. Wear it on your belt — it clicks off every step you take. Calibrated to your walking pace, it measures up to 5 miles (in miles and quarter miles), then resets itself. Fascinating fun for hikers, active youngsters on the go!

RICH NEW DESSERT

BY BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Dazzle your dinner guests with this sumptuous Chocolate Marble Torte. Everyone will admire its good looks and delight in its rich flavor. Preparation takes less than an hour, a small investment in time for such a handsome result. The rest of your dinner should be equally elegant. Begin with hot consommé. For the main course serve roast beef, rissolé potatoes, glazed carrots and buttered brussels sprouts. Add a crisp salad of mixed greens. Then bring on the torte and coffee to end a memorable dinner. FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

CHOCOLATE MARBLE TORTE

Cake:

¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup pancake mix
1 envelope (1 oz.) no-melt unsweetened chocolate

Filling:

2 cups whipping cream
½ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
⅓ cup cocoa (not instant)

Heat oven to 400°. Grease bottom and sides of 10" x 15" x 1" jelly roll pan; line with waxed paper; grease again and flour. Add salt to eggs; beat until thick and lemon-colored. Add sugar, a little at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Fold in pancake mix gently but thoroughly. Spread evenly in pan. Drizzle chocolate over batter; swirl into batter. Bake about 10 minutes. Remove from oven; loosen edges; remove cake from pan. Peel off waxed paper. Cut cake crosswise into three 5" x 10" sections. Cool. For filling, beat whipping cream until soft peaks form. Combine confectioners' sugar and cocoa; add to cream; beat until stiff. Place one layer of cake on serving plate; spread with filling. Repeat with second layer of cake and filling. Top with remaining layer of cake. Decorate with border of filling. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 8 servings.

My Favorite Jokes

by Allan Drake

EDITOR'S NOTE: Allan Drake, a product of New York City and Boston, tried to earn a living with his fists. He retired from the prize ring at age 18, "a half-baked welterweight." He then moved to Miami Beach where he worked as a cabdriver, a job which he says is still today the inspiration for many of his gags. As a cabbie Drake hauled many show business personalities to their dates. Two of these, Jackie Miles and Lenny Kent, listened to Drake's stories and encouraged him to become a comedian. They even supplied him with some of their own material, and Drake got a job with an act called the Heat Waves. Subsequently he went out on his own as a single, played small clubs and tank towns, worked his way up to the major spots. In the past eight years Drake has appeared on all the top TV shows, has told his jokes at the Copacabana in New York, the Eden Roc in Miami Beach, the Town Casino in Buffalo, and the entire Playboy Club circuit. Drake now lives with his wife in Los Angeles where at the local Playboy Club he most recently told the following:

A perfect marriage is based on compromise. This past Christmas my wife wanted a mink coat. I wanted a new Cadillac. So we compromised. I got her the mink coat, but we keep it in the garage.

A lot of comedians tell jokes about their wives' cooking. My wife's cooking isn't funny. Anything that brings you that close to death is a very serious matter.

My wife is such a great cook she has to call in the repairman to fix a T.V. dinner. She constantly serves leftovers. It's like eating re-runs.

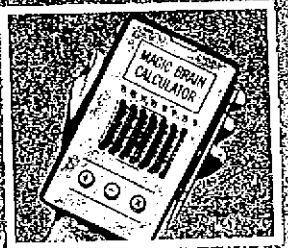
I let my wife handle the family budget. She's so conservative we use the lowest grade gasoline, absolutely the cheapest on the market. They don't put a tiger in my tank. They put a skunk in my trunk.

I'm truly glad 1965 is over. I've been so unlucky that M&M candy melts in my hand. I've finally learned that real happiness comes from simple things. To me happiness is finding out that my dentist has false teeth; getting stopped by a cop for speeding and you're a judge; watching a drunk trying to commit suicide as he jumps out of a window and lands on a beer truck; watching one of the New York Mets stealing second by starting out from third. All of these, to me, spell happiness.

In order to keep in good shape I've taken up isometrics. Every day for 15 minutes I push as hard as I can against the wall. It's marvelous exercise, but it's done absolutely nothing for me. I do have, however, the strongest wall in the building.

Kids sure are spoiled today. I remember when I was growing up in Boston. We couldn't even afford a lousy phonograph. If it wasn't for burlesque I wouldn't know what good music is today. Matter of fact I was so poor I was made in Japan. Back in Boston every kid in my gang was a thief including myself. I was known as the Jewish Robin Hood. I would steal from the rich, but I kept it. One of my pals would trap sparrows on the roof, dip them in peroxide and sell them in the suburbs as canaries.

My old man was a bookmaker in many cities. In fact he had so many cops on his payroll they made him take a civil service test. I was 18 before I learned that cops are supposed to be paid by the city.



When I was a kid we didn't have television. We had the greatest form of escape entertainment ever devised for children—the Saturday afternoon matinee at the local movie house. It cost a dime. Today my kid doesn't even know what a dime is. To him a dime is a tip for an 8-year-old kid to bring him change for a quarter. But we didn't need more than a dime. In those days we brought our own lunch to the movies. A loaf of Italian bread, sliced down the middle, filled with salami, olives, and four different kinds of cheeses. Do you know what it was like on a hot afternoon in the balcony with those sandwiches? I swear Roy Rogers had to hold his nose.

ANECDOTE of the WEEK

■ An attractive girl called at the office of Charles Rose, well-known Hollywood dress manufacturer. "I read your advertisement," she began, "and I'm applying for the model's job." Rose, sitting behind a large desk, busily reading a financial report, automatically reached into an open desk drawer, withdrew a bathing suit, and handed it to the girl. "Just a simple formality," he explained. "Please fill this in." ■

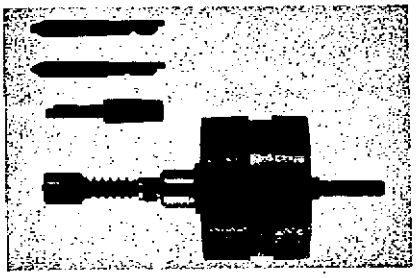
MAKE LIVING EASIER—TAKE A LOOK AT THESE SMART NEW IDEAS DESIGNED FOR YOUR HOME AND YOUR FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN



Collapsible bicycle: In a few seconds, you can turn this 16" wheel bike (above) into a unit small enough to fit in trunk of a compact car. Just fold down handlebars, press lever to "break" main member of frame (as you'd break open a shotgun) and it folds in two. Easy to carry and store anywhere, it's especially useful for apartment dwellers with minimum storage space, campers, boating families, motoring tourists. With lighting system, detachable carryall: $105. Raleigh, Dept. PP, 1168 Commonwealth, Boston, Mass. 02134.

Key bracelet: Dislike hunting for your car keys while balancing a bundle of groceries? A bracelet of imitation amethysts and gold-plated beads strung on elastic has a ring attached to hold keys securely and conveniently at hand. $1.25. Abon Mfg. Co., Dept. PP, 141 E. 44, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Automatic lighter: Once you insert a cigarette into a new lighter that operates in any 12-volt system car or boat, the rest is automatic. It lights cigarette, keeps it lit until you're free to withdraw it. Necessary draft is created by heat within unit; spring mechanism holds cigarette firmly in place. Readily installed in dashboard. $5.95. Products of Tomorrow, Dept. PP, Box 1044, Northland Center Sta., Southfield, Mich. 48078.

Metal protector: With a new liquid, you can protect stainless steel; aluminum and chrome against fingerprinting, smudging, spotting. On bright aluminum or chrome, it seals against oxidation, rust. And on pitted aluminum and rusted chrome, maker claims, it helps restore original luster, then protects against weather, road salts, salt air. $2. Molecular Chemicals, Dept. PP, 570 N. Main, Waterbury, Conn.

For your home workshop: Here's a reversible speed reducer (above) you can use in any portable drill to convert normal speed to lower r.p.m. for screwdriving, drilling, nut-running. It provides 11 to 1 forward reduction, 4 to 1 reverse, has instant reverse action. With bit finder, slotted bit, Phillips bit, socket adapter: $9.95. *Warren Dado Tool, Dept. PATTERNS BY PAULINE

What do YOU mean by "I BELIEVE"?

It is easy to believe there is a God. It is hard, in fact, not to do so.

For instinct . . . and the wonders of the universe . . . almost force a man to say "I believe."

But we have much more certain reasons for our faith. We have, in fact, positive knowledge concerning the nature of God . . . the things we must believe about Him . . . the way we must live to fulfill the purpose for which He created us. We have this sure knowledge on the word of God Himself.

God would, indeed, be an inscrutable mystery if we tried to understand Him through the workings of our limited human intelligence. But we can understand Him through the truths He has revealed concerning Himself and our duties toward Him.

The Apostles Creed, for example, is not merely a pious prayer invented by men. It is a summary of divine truths revealed by God for our understanding and guidance. It is not something which we are free to believe only in part, or to interpret in support of a creed of our own invention.

As far as Catholics are concerned the Apostles' Creed sums up our attitude toward God and our religion. We believe, as the Creed says, not only in God, the Father Almighty, but "in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Lord, Who was conceived by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary . . ." We believe that Christ died for our redemption . . . that He arose from the dead . . . that "He shall come to judge the living and the dead." We believe in the Holy Spirit, the Holy Catholic Church, the Communion of Saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and life everlasting.

We believe these things because God told us so. And because we believe them, our Faith . . . and our hope for everlasting life with God . . . are founded not merely upon a vague and general belief, but upon absolute certainty. As we see it, the words "I believe" in the Apostles' Creed might just as well be "I know!"

If you want a clearer and better understanding of the revealed truths contained in the Apostles' Creed . . . and their importance to your own spiritual life . . . write today for our interesting pamphlet which we will send you free. And nobody will call on you. Just ask for Pamphlet No. PR-30.

PARADE'S SPECIAL INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF LARGE MAIL VOLUME, PARADE CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

UNIVERSAL DRAFT. Young men the world over are facing the same problem: military conscription. Britain (alone of the great powers), India, and Pakistan are among the few large countries relying solely upon voluntary enlistment in this deeply divided world. Poverty is so rampant in India and Pakistan that there are more volunteers than military facilities to house, clothe, and feed them. Elsewhere the rule is conscription. In the Soviet Union all youths 17 and 18 who have completed secondary school are inducted. Service ranges from two to five years with leave only for emergency or outstanding service. Pay is $3.30 per month. Israel, surrounded by hostile Arab nations, requires military training of all men and unmarried women, 18 to 26. Reserve duties are obligatory for men until age 49, for childless women until age 34. In Red China which has a virtually bottomless pool of manpower, every man according to Maoist theory, is considered a soldier. In South Vietnam all men, 18-35, face three years of military service. A large percentage of South Vietnamese conscripts desert each year. South Vietnam hires mercenaries to fight against the Viet Cong. We support the South Vietnamese economy. Without us that country would go broke. Whether indirectly we are paying the South Vietnamese mercenaries is a question Washington declines to answer. Certainly we have fought side by side with mercenaries, employed their aid and information. France, Germany, and Italy all use conscription to supplement their regular forces. In West Germany every youth at 18 is liable for 18 months of service. In France boys are drafted at age 19 for 18 months active duty, 40 months availability, 12 years of reserve duty. On the U.S. borders things are not so stringent. Canada has no conscription. In Mexico the young man chooses a white ball or a black ball. The white ball permits him to perform his military service by marching each Sunday for a year. The black ball puts him in the barracks and regular army duty for one year. Argentina uses a lottery system to select the unlucky few.

HOW TO STAY YOUNG. Dr. C. Hackmann, a German researcher working on cancer chemotherapy and a former collaborator of Nobel Prize winner Gerhard Domagk, has made an accidental and experimental discovery that reportedly retards aging. Hackmann recently discovered that sulfadiazine in combination with B-complex vitamins keeps people young. Among elderly patients given the sulfadiazine-vitamin B compound there was such marked physical and mental improvement that many who were hospitalized with chronic ills were able to leave and return to a normal life. Exactly how the sulfadiazine slows down the aging process has not yet been determined. What has been proven is that none of the other sulfonamides produce the same effect. Geriatric specialists are most guarded in commenting on the discovery, say hopefully that after years of careful experimentation a sulfadiazine compound may be marketed which will delay the onset of old age.

SNOW DRIVING. Driving on slippery or snow-covered roads this winter? The national Automobile Club offers the following tips: (1) Accelerate and brake slowly. A car can be thrown into a spin if braking or acceleration is too fast. (2) Once under way, move slowly and keep at least 100 yards behind the car in front. (3) Avoid using low gear. Higher gears lessen the chance of skidding. (4) If the car gets stuck in deep snow, rock it back and forth in second gear or "drive." When enough momentum is gained, drive the car slowly out of the snow. Try not to spin the wheels.

APPLIANCE SOCIETY. America is the most appliance-happy nation in the world. Many of the newest cordless hand appliances -- toothbrushes, shavers, carving knives, tape recorders -- are battery-powered. Batteries have become big business, about $725 million a year. The major trouble is their high cost of operation. Conventional batteries in an ordinary flashlight generate power at a cost of $50 per kilowatt hour compared to electric power at 3¢ per kilowatt hour. The result is that the leading small battery manufacturers in this country: Mallory, Union Carbide (Eveready), Electric Storage (Ray-O-Vac), Servel (Burgess) and RCA are all leaping into the exotic battery market, trying to produce longer-lasting batteries at lower prices. Mallory, largest manufacturer of mercury and alkaline batteries, recently came out with its new Duracell, a battery constructed to give from five to seven times longer service than ordinary zinc batteries and so good it can be stored for two years before use. Despite its premium price the Duracell is selling like World Series tickets.

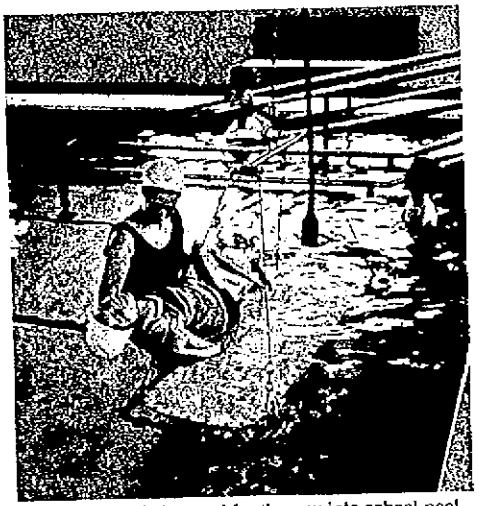
It's high for her wheelchair level, but full-size range is used to prepare girl student for adult-life cooking.



Paralyzed hands prevent boy from holding pencil. But he can write by poking keys of electric typewriter.

Thanks to school's specially designed equipment, the handicapped can participate in science lab sessions.

Physical therapy program includes fencing instruction for wheelchair-bound youngsters. Students also can bowl on special alleys. The school is outfitted with a full array of gymnastic and rehabilitation equipment.

Paralyzed girl is lowered for therapy into school pool. At rear, boy enters via a special ramp with handrails.

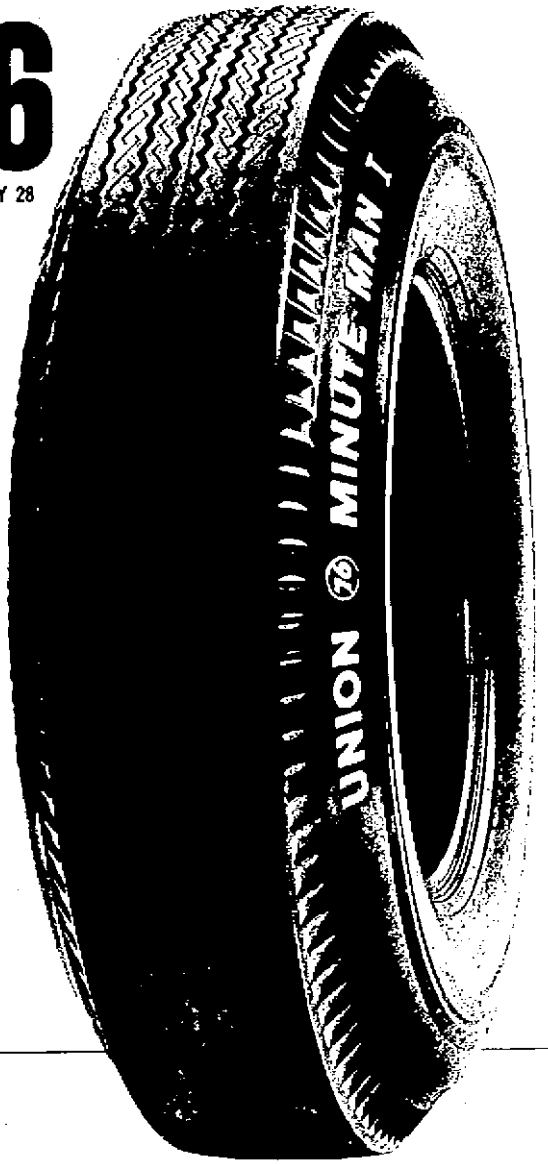
grade will be added this year. The academic program is supplemented by physical therapy, including swimming and even bowling.

Besides its happy spirit of gratitude, the school has a habit of helpfulness. Those who can walk help those who can't. "Don't worry, Tony," PARADE heard one 8-year-old tell a younger boy whose wagon he was pulling, "you won't miss anything." And the youngsters insist fiercely on being independent. "Don't help me, I can do it myself!" an 11-year-old shouted at a volunteer who proposed to wheel him to the bathroom.

Its pupils are keenly aware that their Human Resources School affords them far more than classroom instruction.

"A year ago, I didn't dream of going to any real high school," says a 13-year-old boy. "Now, you wait, I'm going to go to college, too."

Says a girl of 15 who rides a wheelchair: "You have to make your own adjustment to life and understand there are some things you can't do. But a school like this makes you really feel you can be accepted as a person." ■



Wheelchairs form huge semicircle around piano as instructor gives a music lesson. Most of the school's classes meet in small groups.

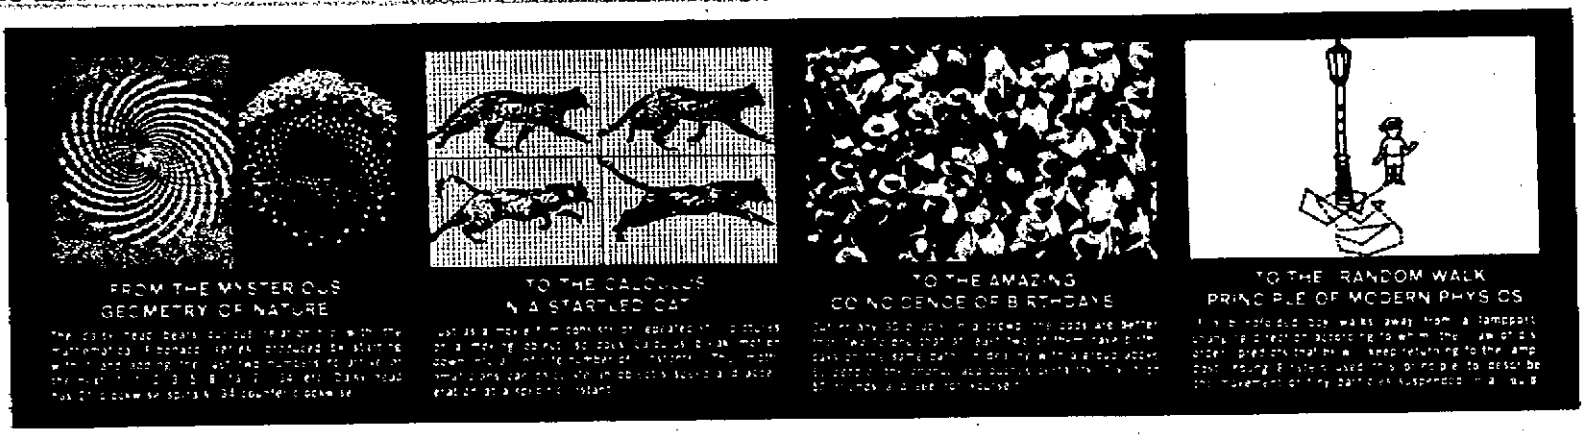
RICH NEW DESSERT

BY BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Dazzle your dinner guests with this sumptuous Chocolate Marble Torte. Everyone will admire its good looks and delight in its rich flavor. Preparation takes less than an hour, a small investment in time for such a handsome result. The rest of your dinner should be equally elegant. Begin with hot consommé. For the main course serve roast beef, rissolé potatoes, glazed carrots and buttered brussels sprouts. Add a crisp salad of mixed greens. Then bring on the torte and coffee to end a memorable dinner. FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

CHOCOLATE MARBLE TORTE



Cake:

¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup pancake mix
1 envelope (1 oz.) no-melt unsweetened chocolate

Filling:

2 cups whipping cream
½ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
⅓ cup cocoa (not instant)

Heat oven to 400°. Grease bottom and sides of 10" x 15" x 1" jelly roll pan; line with waxed paper; grease again and flour. Add salt to eggs; beat until thick and lemon-colored. Add sugar, a little at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Fold in pancake mix gently but thoroughly. Spread evenly in pan. Drizzle chocolate over batter; swirl into batter. Bake about 10 minutes. Remove from oven; loosen edges; remove cake from pan. Peel off waxed paper. Cut cake crosswise into three 5" x 10" sections. Cool. For filling, beat whipping cream until soft peaks form. Combine confectioners' sugar and cocoa; add to cream; beat until stiff. Place one layer of cake on serving plate; spread with filling. Repeat with second layer of cake and filling. Top with remaining layer of cake. Decorate with border of filling. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 8 servings.

This LIFE Science Library book makes everything from Euclid to Einstein so fascinating you'll exclaim

"If only Mathematics had been made this exciting when we were in school!"

Now you can enjoy, and give your children, the advantage you never had—of experiencing Mathematics as a series of great adventures, from the Cuneiform calculations of the Babylonians to the "new mathematics" taught in many schools today.

More and more parents are finding themselves baffled by the strange "new mathematics" homework their children bring home. Even first graders are solving equations!

Today's school children are simply helping to write a new chapter in a history which began some 10,000 years ago—when the Stone Age hunters turned to farming and were faced with keeping track of days and seasons and dividing up land.

Ever since, mathematics has shaped our civilization with ever-increasing force, culminating in the mathematics revolution which exploded over Hiroshima and is now reaching for the moon.

Today we balance our checkbooks and measure time with the arithmetic invented by the ancient Mesopotamians. The laws of probability determine our insurance rates. The Theory of Games helps the businessman—and may even prevent World War III.

All the wonders of mathematics, both ancient and modern, are pictured and explained—with LIFE's unique combination of authority, clarity, and visual drama—in this dazzling new volume on MATHEMATICS. Because mathematics is the language of science, this volume will serve as an especially appropriate introduction to an important new series of books—the LIFE Science Library—designed to simplify, unify, organize, and dramatize the whole fascinating world of science.

EVEN IF YOU NO LONGER REMEMBER 7th GRADE ARITHMETIC, you can read this book with understanding and enjoyment. You will not learn how to solve problems in Calculus, Analytic Geometry, Symbolic Logic, but will begin to understand the arresting, important ideas they encompass.

You will meet lucid Greeks who conquered space with compass and straight edge... Italians who dueled with equations ...modern American mathematicians.

YOU WILL SEE in glowing full-color paintings, rare prints, and photographs, the uncanny geometry in Nature ... the bridges of Königsberg that inspired the "Network Theory" ... a strip of paper with only one side.

You will end by exclaiming, "Why couldn't they have made math this exciting when I was in school!" And you will rejoice for your children. (A special section explains the "new mathematics" many of them are learning.)

- Actual size 8½ x 11 inches
- 200 pages, 72 in full color
- In 35,000 words of narrative text by David Bergamini you learn the great ideas behind Arithmetic, Algebra, Plane Geometry, Analytic Geometry, Calculus, and even such advanced thinking as the Theory of Games and Topology.
- Consulting Editors: René Dubos, C. P. Snow, Henry Margenau

My Favorite Jokes

by Allan Drake

EDITOR'S NOTE: Allan Drake, a product of New York City and Boston, tried to earn a living with his fists. He retired from the prize ring at age 18, "a half-baked welterweight." He then moved to Miami Beach where he worked as a cabdriver, a job which he says is still today the inspiration for many of his gags. As a cabbie Drake hauled many show business personalities to their dates. Two of these, Jackie Miles and Lenny Kent, listened to Drake's stories and encouraged him to become a comedian. They even supplied him with some of their own material, and Drake got a job with an act called the Heat Waves. Subsequently he went out on his own as a single, played small clubs and tank towns, worked his way up to the major spots. In the past eight years Drake has appeared on all the top TV shows, has told his jokes at the Copacabana in New York, the Eden Roc in Miami Beach, the Town Casino in Buffalo, and the entire Playboy Club circuit. Drake now lives with his wife in Los Angeles where at the local Playboy Club he most recently told the following:

A perfect marriage is based on compromise. This past Christmas my wife wanted a mink coat. I wanted a new Cadillac. So we compromised. I got her the mink coat, but we keep it in the garage.

A lot of comedians tell jokes about their wives' cooking. My wife's cooking isn't funny. Anything that brings you that close to death is a very serious matter.

My wife is such a great cook she has to call in the repairman to fix a T.V. dinner. She constantly serves leftovers. It's like eating re-runs.

I let my wife handle the family budget. She's so conservative we use the lowest grade gasoline, absolutely the cheapest on the market. They don't put a tiger in my tank. They put a skunk in my trunk.

I'm truly glad 1965 is over. I've been so unlucky that M&M candy melts in my hand. I've finally learned that real happiness comes from simple things. To me happiness is finding out that my dentist has false teeth; getting stopped by a cop for speeding and you're a judge; watching a drunk trying to commit suicide as he jumps out of a window and lands on a beer truck; watching one of the New York Mets stealing second by starting out from third. All of these, to me, spell happiness.

In order to keep in good shape I've taken up isometrics. Every day for 15 minutes I push as hard as I can against the wall. It's marvelous exercise, but it's done absolutely nothing for me. I do have, however, the strongest wall in the building.

Kids sure are spoiled today. I remember when I was growing up in Boston. We couldn't even afford a lousy phonograph. If it wasn't for burlesque I wouldn't know what good music is today. Matter of fact I was so poor I was made in Japan. Back in Boston every kid in my gang was a thief including myself. I was known as the Jewish Robin Hood. I would steal from the rich, but I kept it. One of my pals would trap sparrows on the roof, dip them in peroxide and sell them in the suburbs as canaries.

My old man was a bookmaker in many cities. In fact he had so many cops on his payroll they made him take a civil service test. I was 18 before I learned that cops are supposed to be paid by the city.

When I was a kid we didn't have television. We had the greatest form of escape entertainment ever devised for children—the Saturday afternoon matinee at the local movie house. It cost a dime. Today my kid doesn't even know what a dime is. To him a dime is a tip for an 8-year-old kid to bring him change for a quarter. But we didn't need more than a dime. In those days we brought our own lunch to the movies. A loaf of Italian bread, sliced down the middle, filled with salami, olives, and four different kinds of cheeses. Do you know what it was like on a hot afternoon in the balcony with those sandwiches? I swear Roy Rogers had to hold his nose.

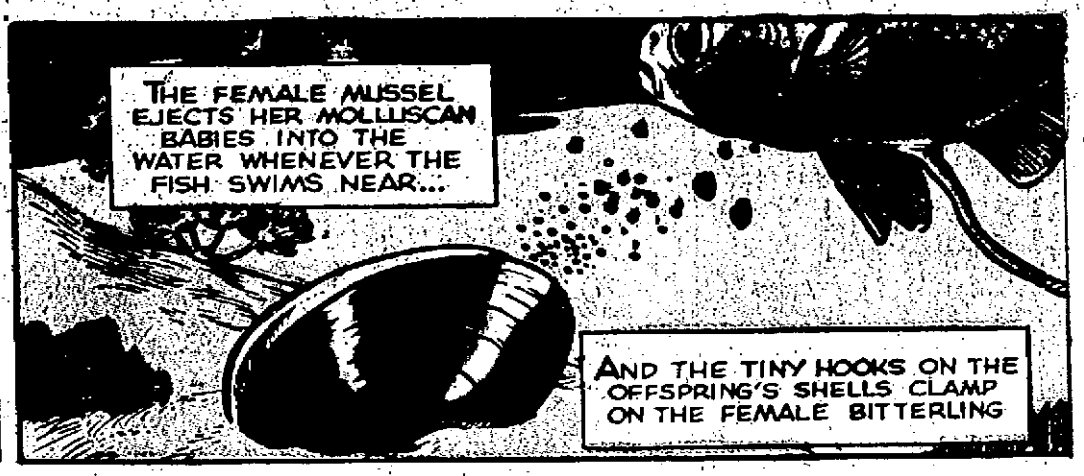
ANECDOTE of THE WEEK



■ An attractive girl called at the office of Charles Rose, well-known Hollywood dress manufacturer. "I read your advertisement," she began, "and I'm applying for the model's job." Rose, sitting behind a large desk, busily reading a financial report, automatically reached into an open desk drawer, withdrew a bathing suit, and handed it to the girl. "Just a simple formality," he explained. "Please fill this in." ■

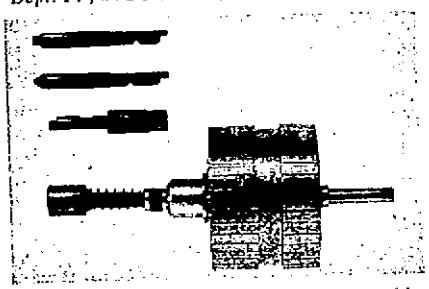
MAKE LIVING EASIER—TAKE A LOOK AT THESE SMART NEW IDEAS DESIGNED FOR YOUR HOME AND YOUR FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN



Collapsible bicycle: In a few seconds, you can turn this 16" wheel bike (above) into a unit small enough to fit in trunk of a compact car. Just fold down handlebars, press lever to "break" main member of frame (as you'd break open a shotgun) and it folds in two. Easy to carry and store anywhere, it's especially useful for apartment dwellers with minimum storage space, campers, boating families, motoring tourists. With lighting system, detachable carryall: $105. Raleigh, Dept. PP, 1168 Commonwealth, Boston, Mass. 02134.

Key bracelet: Dislike hunting for your car keys while balancing a bundle of groceries? A bracelet of imitation amethysts and gold-plated beads strung on elastic has a ring attached to hold keys securely and conveniently at hand. $1.25. Abon Mfg. Co., Dept. PP, 141 E. 44, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Automatic lighter: Once you insert a cigarette into a new lighter that operates in any 12-volt system car or boat, the rest is automatic. It lights cigarette, keeps it lit until you're free to withdraw it. Necessary draft is created by heat within unit; spring mechanism holds cigarette firmly in place. Readily installed in dashboard. $5.95. Products of Tomorrow, Dept. PP, Box 1044, Northland Center Sta., Southfield, Mich. 48078.

Metal protector: With a new liquid, you can protect stainless steel; aluminum and chrome against fingerprinting, smudging, spotting. On bright aluminum or chrome, it seals against oxidation, rust. And on pitted aluminum and rusted chrome, maker claims, it helps restore original luster, then protects against weather, road salts, salt air. $2. Molecular Chemicals, Dept. PP, 570 N. Main, Waterbury, Conn.

For your home workshop: Here's a reversible speed reducer (above) you can use in any portable drill to convert normal speed to lower r.p.m. for screwdriving, drilling, nut-running. It provides 11 to 1 forward reduction, 4 to 1 reverse, has instant reverse action. With bit finder, slotted bit, Phillips bit, socket adapter: $9.95. Warren Dado Tool, Dept. PP, 29250 Grand River, Farmington, Mich. 48024.

PATTERNS BY PAULINE

What do YOU mean by "I BELIEVE"?

It is easy to believe there is a God. It is hard, in fact, not to do so.

For instinct . . . and the wonders of the universe . . . almost force a man to say "I believe."

But we have much more certain reasons for our faith. We have, in fact, positive knowledge concerning the nature of God . . . the things we must believe about Him . . . the way we must live to fulfill the purpose for which He created us. We have this sure knowledge on the word of God Himself.

God would, indeed, be an inscrutable mystery if we tried to understand Him through the workings of our limited human intelligence. But we can understand Him through the truths He has revealed concerning Himself and our duties toward Him.

The Apostles Creed, for example, is not merely a pious prayer invented by men. It is a summary of divine truths revealed by God for our understanding and guidance. It is not something which we are free to believe only in part, or to interpret in support of a creed of our own invention.

As far as Catholics are concerned the Apostles' Creed sums up our attitude toward God and our religion. We believe, as the Creed says, not only in God, the Father Almighty, but "in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Lord, Who was conceived by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary . . ." We believe that Christ died for our redemption . . . that He arose from the dead . . . that "He shall come to judge the living and the dead." We believe in the Holy Spirit, the Holy Catholic Church, the Communion of Saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and life everlasting.

We believe these things because God told us so. And because we believe them, our Faith . . . and our hope for everlasting life with God . . . are founded not merely upon a vague and general belief, but upon absolute certainty. As we see it, the words "I believe" in the Apostles' Creed might just as well be "I know!"

If you want a clearer and better understanding of the revealed truths contained in the Apostles' Creed . . . and their importance to your own spiritual life . . . write today for our interesting pamphlet which we will send you free. And nobody will call on you. Just ask for Pamphlet No. PR-30.

PARADE'S SPECIAL INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF LARGE MAIL VOLUME, PARADE CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

UNIVERSAL DRAFT. Young men the world over are facing the same problem: military conscription. Britain (alone of the great powers), India, and Pakistan are among the few large countries relying solely upon voluntary enlistment in this deeply divided world. Poverty is so rampant in India and Pakistan that there are more volunteers than military facilities to house, clothe, and feed them. Elsewhere the rule is conscription. In the Soviet Union all youths 17 and 18 who have completed secondary school are inducted. Service ranges from two to five years with leave only for emergency or outstanding service. Pay is $3.30 per month. Israel, surrounded by hostile Arab nations, requires military training of all men and unmarried women, 18 to 26. Reserve duties are obligatory for men until age 49, for childless women until age 34. In Red China which has a virtually bottomless pool of manpower, every man according to Maoist theory, is considered a soldier. In South Vietnam all men, 18-35, face three years of military service. A large percentage of South Vietnamese conscripts desert each year. South Vietnam hires mercenaries to fight against the Viet Cong. We support the South Vietnamese economy. Without us that country would go broke. Whether indirectly we are paying the South Vietnamese mercenaries is a question Washington declines to answer. Certainly we have fought side by side with mercenaries, employed their aid and information. France, Germany, and Italy all use conscription to supplement their regular forces. In West Germany every youth at 18 is liable for 18 months of service. In France boys are drafted at age 19 for 18 months active duty, 40 months availability, 12 years of reserve duty. On the U.S. borders things are not so stringent. Canada has no conscription. In Mexico the young man chooses a white ball or a black ball. The white ball permits him to perform his military service by marching each Sunday for a year. The black ball puts him in the barracks and regular army duty for one year. Argentina uses a lottery system to select the unlucky few.

HOW TO STAY YOUNG. Dr. C. Hackmann, a German researcher working on cancer chemotherapy and a former collaborator of Nobel Prize winner Gerhard Domagk, has made an accidental and experimental discovery that reportedly retards aging. Hackmann recently discovered that sulfadiazine in combination with B-complex vitamins keeps people young. Among elderly patients given the sulfadiazine-vitamin B compound there was such marked physical and mental improvement that many who were hospitalized with chronic ills were able to leave and return to a normal life. Exactly how the sulfadiazine slows down the aging process has not yet been determined. What has been proven is that none of the other sulfonamides produce the same effect. Geriatric specialists are most guarded in commenting on the discovery, say hopefully that after years of careful experimentation a sulfadiazine compound may be marketed which will delay the onset of old age.

SNOW DRIVING. Driving on slippery or snow-covered roads this winter? The national Automobile Club offers the following tips: (1) Accelerate and brake slowly. A car can be thrown into a spin if braking or acceleration is too fast. (2) Once under way, move slowly and keep at least 100 yards behind the car in front. (3) Avoid using low gear. Higher gears lessen the chance of skidding. (4) If the car gets stuck in deep snow, rock it back and forth in second gear or "drive." When enough momentum is gained, drive the car slowly out of the snow. Try not to spin the wheels.

APPLIANCE SOCIETY. America is the most appliance-happy nation in the world. Many of the newest cordless hand appliances -- toothbrushes, shavers, carving knives, tape recorders -- are battery-powered. Batteries have become big business, about $725 million a year. The major trouble is their high cost of operation. Conventional batteries in an ordinary flashlight generate power at a cost of $50 per kilowatt hour compared to electric power at 3¢ per kilowatt hour. The result is that the leading small battery manufacturers in this country: Mallory, Union Carbide (Eveready), Electric Storage (Ray-O-Vac), Servel (Burgess) and RCA are all leaping into the exotic battery market, trying to produce longer-lasting batteries at lower prices. Mallory, largest manufacturer of mercury and alkaline batteries, recently came out with its new Duracell, a battery constructed to give from five to seven times longer service than ordinary zinc batteries and so good it can be stored for two years before use. Despite its premium price the Duracell is selling like World Series tickets.

76 UNION

Minute Man I – $9.76

Here's a tire that gives you safety with savings. The tread is as deep as the tread of tires that come on new cars. You get a smooth-steering, cushion-soft ride. Truly it's a tire you can trust!

More Than 4-Ply "Rated"...4-Ply Construction

All Union 76 tires—including the famous Minute Man I—are full 4-ply nylon construction. That doesn't mean that they are simply 4-ply "rated." It means that you actually have 4 rugged nylon plies to give you greater stability—increased mileage—and the peace-of-mind that comes with extra safety.

The Minute Man III Premium Tire

Of course, if you plan to do a substantial amount of driving, you'll want the Minute Man III premium tire.

The Minute Man III tire has full 4-ply construction PLUS—America's only Insured Tire Warranty! If the tire fails for any reason except malicious damage or repairable puncture during the first year or 10,000 miles, whichever occurs first, you get a new tire free. And after the first year, the Road Hazard and Workmanship and Materials warranties protect you for 18 months more! The Minute Man III is better in quality than tires that come as original equipment on new cars!

Remember: all Union 76 tires are full 4-ply construction. And you get Minute Man follow-up service every time you stop in at the Sign of the 76.

So stop in soon while the sale is on. No money down, up to 15 months to pay on approved credit.

When Union Oil has a tire sale...it is a tire sale!

FROM THE MYSTERIOUS GEOMETRY OF NATURE...

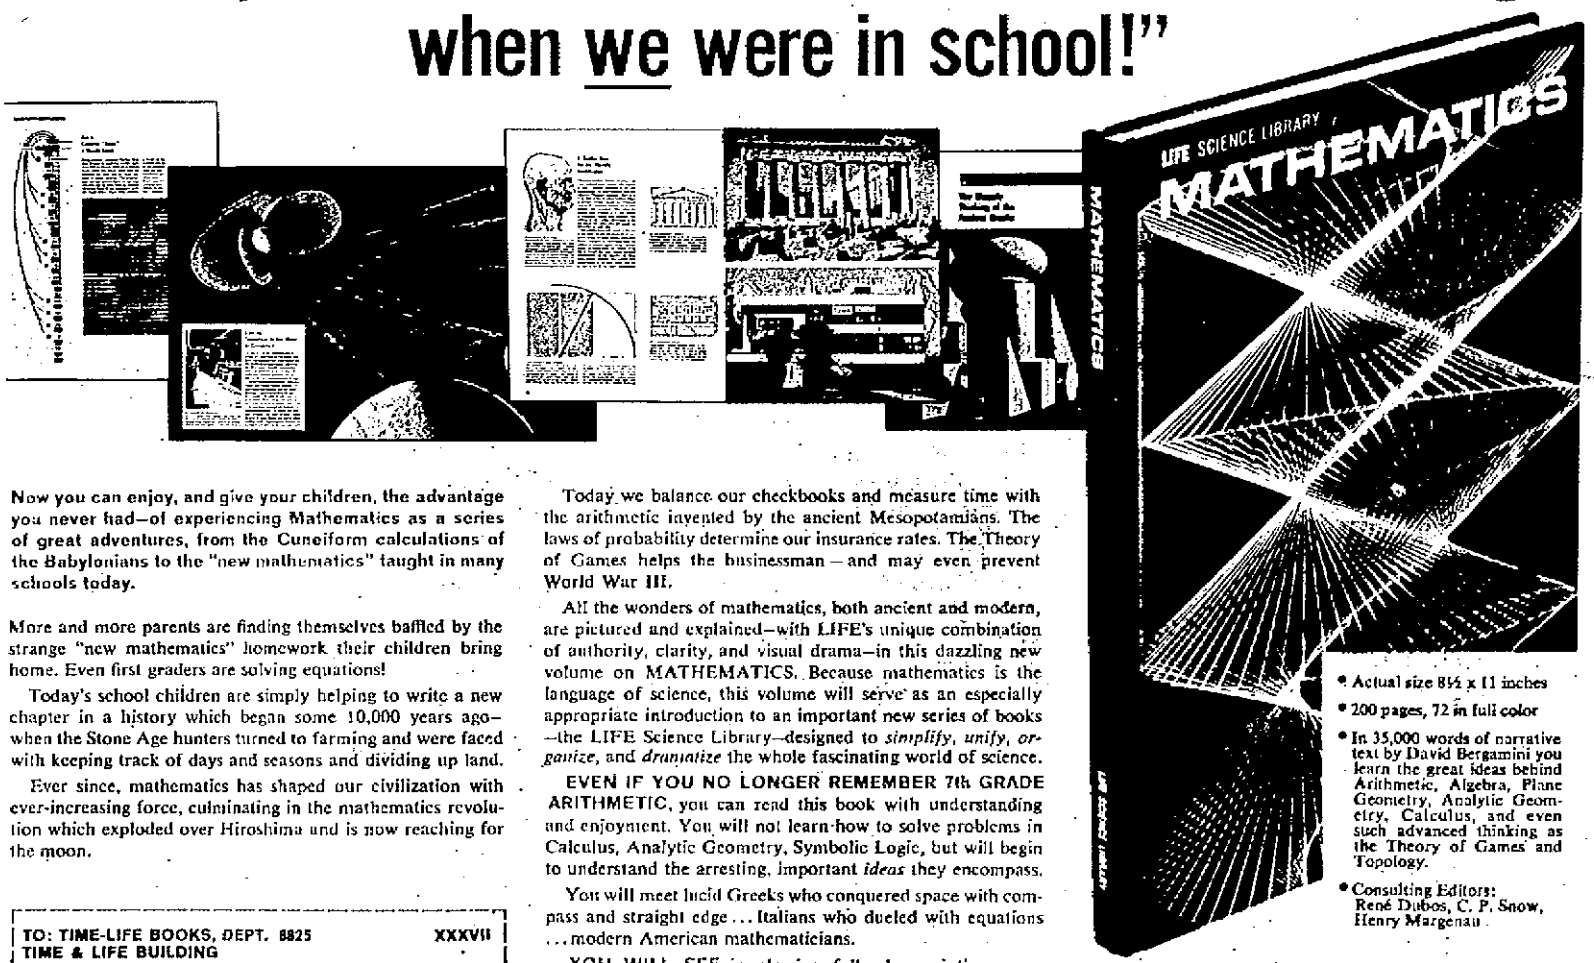
The daisy head bears curious relationship with the mathematical Fibonacci series, produced by starting with 1 and adding the last two numbers to arrive at the next: 1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 21, 34, etc. Daisy head has 21 clockwise spirals, 34 counter-clockwise

...TO THE CALCULUS IN A STARTLED CAT...

Just as a movie film consists of repeated still pictures of a moving object, so does Calculus break motion down into an infinite number of "instants." Thus mathematicians can calculate an object's speed and acceleration at a specific instant.

...TO THE AMAZING COINCIDENCE OF BIRTHDAYS...

Out of any 30 people in a crowd, the odds are better than two to one that at least two of them have birthdays on the same date. In dealing with a group above 50 people the chance approaches certainty. Try it on 50 friends and see for yourself!



...TO THE "RANDOM WALK" PRINCIPLE OF MODERN PHYSICS

If a blindfolded boy walks away from a lamppost, changing direction according to whim, the "law of disorder" predicts that he will keep returning to the lamppost. Young Einstein used this principle to describe the movement of tiny particles suspended in a liquid

This LIFE Science Library book makes everything from Euclid to Einstein so fascinating you'll exclaim

"If only Mathematics had been made this exciting when we were in school!"

Now you can enjoy, and give your children, the advantage you never had—of experiencing Mathematics as a series of great adventures, from the Cuneiform calculations of the Babylonians to the "new mathematics" taught in many schools today.

More and more parents are finding themselves baffled by the strange "new mathematics" homework their children bring home. Even first graders are solving equations!

Today's school children are simply helping to write a new chapter in a history which began some 10,000 years ago—when the Stone Age hunters turned to farming and were faced with keeping track of days and seasons and dividing up land.

Ever since, mathematics has shaped our civilization with ever-increasing force, culminating in the mathematics revolution which exploded over Hiroshima and is now reaching for the moon.

Today we balance our checkbooks and measure time with the arithmetic invented by the ancient Mesopotamians. The laws of probability determine our insurance rates. The Theory of Games helps the businessman—and may even prevent World War III.

All the wonders of mathematics, both ancient and modern, are pictured and explained—with LIFE's unique combination of authority, clarity, and visual drama—in this dazzling new volume on MATHEMATICS. Because mathematics is the language of science, this volume will serve as an especially appropriate introduction to an important new series of books—the LIFE Science Library—designed to simplify, unify, organize, and dramatize the whole fascinating world of science.

EVEN IF YOU NO LONGER REMEMBER 7th GRADE ARITHMETIC, you can read this book with understanding and enjoyment. You will not learn how to solve problems in Calculus, Analytic Geometry, Symbolic Logic, but will begin to understand the arresting, important ideas they encompass.

You will meet lucid Greeks who conquered space with compass and straight edge ... Italians who dueled with equations ... modern American mathematicians.

YOU WILL SEE in glowing full-color paintings, rare prints, and photographs, the uncanny geometry in Nature ... the bridges of Königsberg that inspired the "Network Theory" ... a strip of paper with only one side.

You will end by exclaiming, "Why couldn't they have made math this exciting when I was in school!" And you will rejoice for your children. (A special section explains the "new mathematics" many of them are learning.)

- Actual size 8½ x 11 inches
- 200 pages, 72 in full color
- In 35,000 words of narrative text by David Bergamini you learn the great ideas behind Arithmetic, Algebra, Plane Geometry, Analytic Geometry, Calculus, and even such advanced thinking as the Theory of Games and Topology.
- Consulting Editors: René Dubos, C. P. Snow, Henry Margenau
